Probe of 'Revolution' Charge Asked in House; Wirt 'Stands by Guns'

Rainey Assails Indianan, Urges Justice Office to Investigate.

'Demand for Probe Grows at Capitol

Bulwinkle Resolution for Quiz Is Referred to Committee.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Justice Department investigation of alleged "brain truster" plotting to take over the reins of Government was asked last night by Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

Proposal to sidetrack the inquiry from Congress to a Government department was made as Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, introduced a House resolution for a Congressional inquiry into the charges.

Speaker Rainey delivered a broadside at Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) educator, who made the allegations last week in a letter read before the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

"His own statements show the absurdity of it all," said the Speaker. "If there is a conspiracy, as he alleges, it is not at all likely that the conspirators would confide their plans to a superintendent of schools in Indiana."

Cry for Probe Spreads.

Meantime, demand for a sweeping inquiry, either by Congress, the Justice Department, or both, spread on both sides of the Capitol.

Developments were:

Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, said the special "propaganda" committee created last week by the House, for the primary purpose of investigating Nazi activities, has full authority to inquire into "subversive" activities against the Government alleged by Dr. Wirt.

Senator Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, suggested a "firing squad" for the plotters if the Indianian's statements are found true.

Speaker Rainey referred the Bulwinkle resolution to the Rules Committee, which last night had scheduled no hearings on the measure.

House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns said he "had no objection" to a Congressional investigation by a House committee, provided the inquiry is confined to the Wirt charges.

Declaring Dr. Wirt's failure to name his informants "brands him as a mere publicity seeker, determined to sabotage the recovery program of the Administration as much as possible," Speaker Rainey said the school superintendent can render a "patriotic service, if he wants to render a patriotic service," by de-

Kansas City Ballots Today

Bitter Battle Ended; Voters to Pick "Machine" or Fusion Slate.

Kansas City, March 26 (AP).—Two political organizations, each claiming to represent a "New Deal," and seeking city control, were ready tonight for a finish battle at the polls tomorrow.

The "ins" are flying the Democratic banners and acknowledging the leadership of T. J. "Boss" Pendergast. This group has used the campaign cry that a vote against Kansas City Democracy threatens the Missouri support of President Roosevelt and his New Deal.

The opposition group claims nonpartisanship. It is known as the Fusion party and flies banners of a National youth movement. It calls the Pendergast cohorts a "Little Tammany" and asks for a new deal locally, pledging a reduced cost of government, appointment of city employes on a merit basis, graftless contracts on competitive bids, a police clean-up and a nonpolitical city government based on a charter.

The ticket leaders are A. Ross Hill, former president of the University of Missouri, a Fusionist, and Bryce B. Smith, wealthy baking company executive, the Democratic incumbent.

The campaign, one of the most bitter in the city's history, saw big guns wheeled into action on both sides. Former Senator James A. Reed took the stump on behalf of the Democrats.

Pittsburgh, March 26 (AP).—The Sun-Telegram says James A. Rumbaugh, jr., of McDonald, Pa., a student at Columbia University, New York, has been missing since about February 10.

Indianan Says He'll Tell More If Called

Gary Educator Sticks to Story of "Brain Trust" Plot to Overthrow U. S., Anxious for Probe; Thousands Wire Praise.

Gary, Ind., March 26 (U.P.).—Dr. William A. Wirt, the 60-year-old superintendent of Gary schools, who has caused a National sensation by charging that members of the Roosevent "brain trust" are plotting to overthrow the Government, intends to "stick by his guns."

Beset by thousands of inquiries, Dr. Wirt and his wife have turned their home into a hive of activity.

"I meant every word of it," Dr. Wirt said, repeating his charge that the "brain trusters" are preparing to overthrow the American system of Government and install a "Stalin" in the White House. "And I'll have more to say if I'm called before an investigation committee in Washington."

Dr. Wirt appears anxious to put his story into the record.

The man whose "Gary System" of education has been adopted by hundreds of other cities recently mailed a form letter to more than 100 financial and industrial leaders, asserting that a member of the Roosevelt "brain trust" had disclosed the "plot" to him.

Dr. Wirt still refused, however, to name the "brain trust" member. To identify the man, he declared, would be to becloud the issue.

"It is not unusual," he said, "when a citizen makes charges, for politicians to launch an attack against him and make him, literally, a defendant. I don't want this question to become one of personalities."

Under the plan Dr. Wirt said was revealed to him, President Roosevelt is "only the Kerensky" of the "American revolution," awaiting the propitious moment to replace him with a Stalin.

"We'll wait and see," said Dr. Wirt. "Developments will determine when, and if, their names are to be disclosed. I will name names if the welfare of the public depends on it."

Dr. Wirt said that he was not at all surprised that he had become the center of a National controversy after his charges had been read in Congress.

Dr. Wirt said he is puzzled by the hundreds of telegrams, letters and

Chemists May Drain Atlantic Of Lost Gold

Sea Water Filtered for Bromine Yields Vast Ionized Wealth.

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26—A chemical argosy which outdoes the dreams of Jason and promises to tap profitably some of the three-quadrillion dollars worth of gold in the sea was announced to the American Chemical Society here today.

This promise, not only of gold, but silver, radium, tin, iron, nickel, lead, vanadium, mercury and nearly a score of other minerals, was made in the first report of a dazzling commercial success for a new kind of chemical plant that opened two months ago near Wilmington, N. C.

The plant takes bromine from Atlantic Ocean tidewater. To the chemists, it was described as the "wildest and boldest" American commercial venture in a decade. Already, from a flow of 25,000 gallons of sea water a minute, it is taking $1,000,000 worth of bromide a year. Ten years was set as the probable time needed to perfect extraction of the metal which will follow bromine.

The story of bromine, as told today, showed how it is likely to be done. The Wilmington bromine plant was erected by the Ethyldow Chemical Co. Its process, including new gold discoveries, was described by Willard H. Dow, of the Dow Co.; Thomas Midgley, jr., vice president of the Ethyl Gasoline Co., and other chemists.

The American automobile, they said, really built this sea-water plant. Demand for antiknock fuels required more bromine than was in sight ten years ago in the land source, certain rare "bitter water" wells.

In the Wilmington plant, scientists discovered that the bromine process was "ionizing" the gold in the Atlantic sea-water. It was giving the almost infinitely minute dissolved gold particles an electrical charge by which they may be attracted to stick to filters.

Spectroscopes revealed several pounds of ionized gold in the 25,000 gallons a minute flow; twice as much ionized silver and considerable ionized mercury.

Ordinarily, said the scientists, the mere expense of pumping 25,000 gallons a minute would make it hopeless to take out the gold at a profit, even after the filter formula should be discovered.

But with bromine paying the pumping bill, and a good profit besides, gold becomes a prospective byproduct. The same applies to all the other sea minerals.

Former St. Louis Mayor Is Ruled Incompetent

White Plains, N. Y., March 26 (AP). A Supreme Court order holding Victor I. Miller, former Mayor of St. Louis, incompetent, and naming his wife, Mrs. Mabel K. Miller, as his guardian, is on file in the Westchester County clerk's office, it was learned today. Miller now is a resident of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Dr. George F. Brewster, of the Veterans' Administration, Northport, Long Island, said Miller was a war veteran and entitled to $57.50 monthly from the Government for "mental disabilities."

French Start 3-Power Pact Parley Today

Defense Plan to Be Laid Before Belgium; British Talks Expected.

Paris, March 26 (AP).—France's hopes for a tripower defense alliance of France, Great Britain and Belgium will be broached at a conference tomorrow between Foreign Affairs Minister Louis Barthou and Count Charles de Broqueville, the Belgian prime minister.

An apparent breakdown of the disarmament conference and what Paris statesmen call the steady rearmament of Germany are worrying the French, who are launching diplomatic calls to England and the Little Entente.

French and British representatives may confer before the disarmament conference meets again April 10 and thresh out the French suggestion, made in a recent secret note, for the revival of the old Entente Cordiale, which brought Great Britain into the World War.

Will Explain Desires.

Further explanations of exactly what France wants Britain to do in case this nation is attacked will be furnished London. A French note to the British last week asked guarantees of security "in the face of German rearmament."

Premier Gaston Doumergue will send M. Barthou to Praha and Warsaw later to bolster the ties binding France, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

The French foreign minister will try to swing King Leopold, Count de Broqueville and Paul Hymans, the Belgian foreign minister, behind the French plan, based on France's

Insull Is Reported Bound for Rumania

Britain Refuses Visa to Fugitive's Wife.

Athens, March 26 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull was reported proceeding to the Black Sea aboard the Maiotis, his chartered freighter, today, his destination possibly Rumania.

The fugitive Chicago millionaire kept in almost constant touch with his attorneys and wife here, but they refused to confirm or deny the report, printed in the afternoon newspaper Vradyni.

London, March 26 (U.P.).—The foreign office revealed today that Mrs. Samuel Insull would not be given a visa to come to Great Britain. The government has had Mrs. Insull's application for a visa under advisement for several days.

Hoover Vacation Trip To Include Midwest

Gallup, N. Mex., March 26 (AP).—Herbert Hoover arrived here today, on a vacation trip which the former President said "may take me into the Middle West."

Mr. Hoover said he would go to Santa Fe Tuesday and then possibly over Raton Pass into the Colorado Plains country. He spent Saturday and Sunday in Chandler, Ariz., visiting with Republican leaders.

Wagner Ban On Company Union Lifted

Bill to Be Modified So Certain Groups May Function.

A. F. of L. Support Now Held Uncertain on Measure.

Surprise plans for drastic revision of the collective bargaining bill, including insertion of a provision to permit operation of certain company unions, were announced last night by its sponsor, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York.

After the Senate Labor Committee heard James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, defend company unions, Wagner modified his attitude on such organizations, announced he would consent to court review of National Labor Board findings of fact, and declared he intended to draft a clause to prohibit both employers and employes from coercion or intimidation and hold them responsible for their acts.

The American Federation of Labor has supported the Wagner measure. There was some question, however, whether the A. F. of L. would continue to uphold the bill should Wagner, by innuendo, at least, approve court injunction in labor disputes by naming the employes as well as the employers in the anticoercion provision, which would be enforceable through restraining orders of the type long fought by unions.

Aims at Unfair Practices.

"My purpose," Wagner explained, "is to do away with unfair practices and prevent company domination of unions. Emery said employes should be prohibited from coercion as well as employers. I have no objection to such a provision. The only reason I didn't include workers by name was that the courts already issue restraining orders against employes."

In announcing he had agreed to modification of a section calling for abrogation of any existing contracts or agreements in conflict with terms of the bill, Wagner said he had no desire to outlaw reputable unions already functioning "so long as they are not dominated by companies."

He discredited reports that his bill conflicted with terms of the automobile dispute agreement. Instead, he said, objectives of that agreement were identical with those of his measure.

Meanwhile, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared settlement of the threatened automobile strike failed to affect the purpose of the Wagner bill.

"The agreement," Green commented, "provides that workers may organize and bargain collectively. The President made clear in his statement that employes have a right to organize into a group or groups. This is a simple declaration of the right of working people to organize into unions of their own choosing.

"The automobile workers contended vigorously for the recognition of this principle and the exercise of this right, which they had long been denied. The issue of the company union is another matter

Ernst in Hospital After Sea Stroke

Former Kentucky Senator at Johns Hopkins.

Baltimore, March 26 (Spl.).—Former United States Senator Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, arrived at Johns Hopkins Hospital today after a stroke he suffered at sea four days ago. The exact nature of his illness awaits diagnosis by Dr. Thomas R. Brown.

Senator Ernst had been in California recently for his health and appeared so much benefited he started for New York City by boat, accompanied by his colored valet, Vernon Barnett.

Soon after the liner California left Colon, Panama, Senator Ernst suffered the stroke. His valet remained in constant attendance for four days and nights.

The vessel docked in New York today and Ernst was rushed by train to Baltimore.

Borah Flays Cotton Bill Sales Curb

Senate Passage Today Expected; Galleries Laugh at Smith.

Idaho Orator Says Bill Sets Bad Precedent on Private Rights.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although the Bankhead cotton control bill is concededly the most revolutionary piece of legislation to come out of the "new deal," few Senators had sufficient interest in the measure yesterday to listen to Senators William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, severely denounce it.

In an atmosphere of apparent general indifference, Senator Borah briefly but forcefully insisted that Congress was going too far when it undertook "to use the taxing power to preclude a citizen from enjoying the right to sell his property in the ordinary course of trade."

Although as ardent as any Senator in his advocacy of progressive legislation in years gone by, Senator Borah, with increasing frequency, is found opposing proposals in the "new deal" program. Last week he sharply assailed the administration of the NRA. He was with the opponents of the cotton bill yesterday.

Senate Passage Seen.

Despite the sharpness of the Borah and Bailey speeches yesterday, the bill is expected to be approved in the Senate today by a substantial majority. Debate on the measure will proceed under an unanimous consent agreement, provided no Senator may speak more than 15 minutes on the bill or more than 15 minutes on any amendment.

Content in the knowledge that they had sufficient votes to pass the measure, the Administration spokesmen, with the exception of Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, did not bother to reply to the attacks.

Senator Smith put in a humorous performance, striding around the chamber, pulling up his coat sleeves as he replied to questions and sailing his remarks with observations which caused the galleries to shriek with laughter. But he did not satisfy those who contended the bill represented a sweeping innovation in American Government.

The cotton control bill, drafted by the Bankhead brothers of Alabama and already passed by the House, sets the maximum cotton crop for

Nila Cook Weds Shy Ship's Boy, Scampers Away

New York, March 26 (AP).—Nila Cram Cook, the plump, brown-eyed Iowa girl who became a disciple of Mahatma Gandhi in India, was married today to Albert N. Hutchins, who described himself as a writer.

"Hutchins was signed as a mess boy on the liner City of Elmwood on which Miss Cook returned to New York Saturday," said Frederick Fender, assistant marine superintendent of the International Mercantile Marine.

From this statement it was believed that the romance had its origin on shipboard after she was deported from India.

Hutchins, shy and ill at ease, pleaded with city officials at the Municipal Building that there be "no publicity." Miss Cook gave her age as 25. Hutchins said he was 28. After the marriage ceremony they scurried out of the building and disappeared.

Constable Injured By Bomb in Auto

Parkersburg, W. Va., March 26 (Spl.).—Explosion of a bomb attached to the motor of an automobile driven by Constable Lawrence M. Osborne, of South Parkersburg, today injured him and a companion, Ralph Chichester.

The front of the car was blown out by the bomb. The officer has no clew to who placed the explosive on the motor.

1,500 Teachers in New York Declared Mentally Unbalanced

New York, March 26 (AP).—Educators and medical examiners clashed today over the question of how many school teachers in New York, if any, are mentally unbalanced.

Dr. Emil Altman, chief medical examiner of the public school system, charged that more than 1,500 of the city's 36,000 teachers suffered from mental or emotional disorders.

"Absurd," retorted Abraham Lefkowitz, legislative representative of the Teachers' Union.

"Every case of inefficiency or of unsatisfactory service is brought to the attention of the Board of Superintendents and proper action is taken," said Superintendent of Schools Harold G. Campbell.

Campbell added that he had called on Dr. Altman to "furnish us at once with a complete list of the teachers he has in mind."

Later, Dr. Altman explained virtually all of the cases were harmless, although he cited one case in which a woman teacher shoved a chair leg into a boy's eye and twisted it "to distract attention of the class from myself."

Dr. Altman declared that more than 3 per cent of any group of people with similar intellectual ratings and environments would be found suffering from mental or emotional disorders. The ratio among school teachers is comparatively low, he said.

The situation was brought about, he asserted, as a combined result of political influence, negligence or a mistaken sense of kindness on the part of school officials, and a reluctance to keep afflicted teachers on the disability pay rolls.

Rigid Stock Control Bill Indorsed by President; 5-5 Pay Veto Forecast

All House Amendments Carry, Measure Goes to President.

New Draft to Meet Demands Likely

House Is Not Expected to Override; Veteran Fight Will Go On.

Congress yesterday passed an independent offices appropriation bill which leaders predicted would be vetoed immediately by President Roosevelt because of increased veterans' benefits and other provisions.

Sent to the White House after the two houses adjourned, the bill is expected back in the House with a veto message from the President soon after that body convenes at noon today.

Leaders predicted the House would sustain the veto. It requires a two-thirds majority on a roll call to override a veto.

Failure to override, which veterans' advocates hope to accomplish, will kill the bill and require a new measure to provide funds for Federal establishments included in the measure, as well as to continue in effect provisions of the economy law which governs Government salaries, leaves, promotions and other matters.

Senate Accepts Changes.

The measure was sent to the President after the Senate accepted the House Government pay and veterans' sections. The House accepted "clarifying" amendments to the veterans sections. The House accepted these without debate and the measure was passed after weeks of bitter and determined fighting, in the course of which leaders in both House and Senate had been unexpectedly voted down on several occasions.

Predicting a prompt veto, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Appropriations sub-committee which had charge of the bill, suggested that resort might be had to a resolution continuing in effect for the next fiscal year the same appropriations provided this year.

This would mean an end of the so-called economy law, which expires June 30 unless continued by Congress. The independent offices bill provided for its continuation with various modifications.

Would Not Get More.

Should the economy law not be extended, Government salaries would automatically go back to statutory levels. That, however, would not mean Government employes would receive more pay than at present, because of the limited appropriations and the fact that executives are forbidden to incur deficits. Department heads would

Blind Man, Aged Woman Fight Fire

Form Bucket Brigade, Save Blazing Home.

Baltimore, March 26 (Spl.).—When fire broke out today in the home of Frank M. Merrikin, Baltimore lawyer, near Essex, Baltimore County, a blind man, an aged woman and the woman's grandson organized themselves into a bucket brigade and battled the flames until firemen arrived.

On seeing the fire, Ernest Mosberger, 29, grandson of Mrs. Nellie Mosberger, ran to the Merriken home to fight the blaze. He was followed by Mrs. Mosberger, 63, and his blind uncle, William Mosberger.

The young man placed a ladder against the house. Merriken climbed it and hurled buckets of water on the flames. The water was brought to him by Mrs. Mosberger and her grandson, while the blind man pumped the water to fill the buckets. After battling the fire for 15 minutes, firemen from Essex arrived and soon had the blaze under control.

President Signs Hawaiian Repeal

Further Funds for Foreign Service Approved.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the bill repealing the prohibition laws for Hawaii, the Associated Press reported. He also signed legislation revising the Alaskan election laws.

Another bill approved authorized additional appropriations to meet losses sustained by Government employes in foreign countries, due to depreciation of currencies.

The annual measure, providing funds for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the coming fiscal year, also was signed.

Sheriff Demands Fifi's Mink, Gets Barrage of Jars

FIFI D'ORSAY.

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—Sobs, screams, a shower of coat hangers and flying cold cream jars greeted a deputy sheriff today when he sought to serve a writ of attachment on Fifi D'Orsay in her dressing room at a theater here.

"Every place I go for three years there are sheriffs waiting for me. I am seek to death of the whole business," the petite Fifi stormed.

"I pay them $16,000 and all I get is a screen test."

The writ, obtained by a local law firm, called for seizure of Fifi's $3,500 mink coat or payment of $420 for legal services here performed for the actress in 1931. The attorneys had been called to aid the actress when her trunk was attached by a Hollywood booking firm.

Roosevelt's Aid Sought in Rail Wage Deadlock

A. F. Whitney, Union Head, Seeks Intervention of President.

Industry's spokesmen yesterday hailed the President's settlement of the automobile labor controversy. The deadlocked dispute over railroad wages, however, seemed to be a problem Mr. Roosevelt would have to attack before he departs today for a fishing trip off the Florida coast.

A. F. Whitney, leader of the 21 railroad unions which have been conferring unavailingly for 10 days with the managers of the roads, requested an interview with the President. Whitney spent the day in discussion with Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, who has been trying to break the deadlock for several days. The managers have asked for a continuation of the present 10 per cent pay cut for six months, as requested by the President. Labor countered with a demand for a restoration of 1929 pay rates, plus 10 per cent additional.

Under the railway labor act, provision is made for setting up a board to mediate employer-labor disputes. Commissioner Eastman said yesterday that under such circumstances, a railroad strike would be impossible.

Settlement Hailed.

The automobile strike settlement generally was greeted by industrialists with jubiliation. It was regarded as a flat assurance that the Administration was not trying to enroll the Nation's workers in the American Federation of Labor, a fear which has been a major bugaboo of business for weeks. Mr. Roosevelt, in his announcement that the strike had been averted, specifically stated that the Government favors no particular union or form of organization. This is in strong contrast, it was pointed out, to the Wagner bill, which would put all company unions out of business.

The President's action was likewise accepted as a blow to the already waning prestige of the National Labor Board, in effect, by setting up another agency to hear workers' complaints—which is what President Puts Weight Behind Measure to Regulate Market.

Charges Its Foes Using Propaganda

Demand for Passage Asks Law Have "Teeth in It."

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a blunt demand for enactment of stock exchange legislation, President Roosevelt yesterday specifically indorsed the revised Fletcher-Rayburn bill and revived the cry of propoganda against its opponents.

Declaring in letters to Congressional Committee chairmen that this legislation, vitally affecting the Nation's financial markets, must have "teeth in it," he concluded:

"I do not see how any of us could afford to have it weakened in any shape, manner or form."

One thinly veiled paragraph reiterated the charge of propaganda against the exchanges as the origin of protests "pouring into the White House and the Congress." It said:

Claims Propaganda Drive.

"It has come to my attention that a more definite and more highly organized drive is being made against effective legislation * * * than against any similar recommendation made by me during the past year. Letters and telegrams bearing all the earmarks of origin at some common source are pouring into the White House and the Congress."

The "two principal objectives" of the legislation, which places broad control of the exchanges in the hands of the Federal Trade Commission, he saw as:

1. The establishment of margin requirements sufficiently high, as will "drastically" curtail speculation, "even as it exists today."
2. Such Government powers of control as will enable it "to correct abuses which may arise in the future."

Takes Definite Stand.

The letter, addressed to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, and Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, removed any doubt of where the President stood in the stock market controversy.

Heretofore, he has studiously refrained from even reading—much less commenting on—the drafts of bill to extend the Government's control over the exchanges. This led to the impression, now proved erroneous, that he would avoid any part in shaping the act to supervise the markets.

The revised Fletcher-Rayburn bill modifies in many respects the original bill introduced in both Houses coincident with the President's message. Nevertheless, it has drawn almost equal fire from such men as Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, as was accorded the first, more drastic, measure.

Anxious to remedy this sore spot on the Administration program before leaving today for his vacation cruise off Florida, by placing the White House prestige squarely against the "highly organized drive" on the stock exchange bill, the Pres-

U. S. Indicts Three Bankers

Former Cleveland Trust Officials Face 27 Fraud Charges.

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—J. Arthur House, former president of the Guardian Trust Co., today was indicted by the Federal grand jury on charges of making false entries and of misapplication of the bank's funds.

Harry C. Robinson, former executive vice president, and William R. Green, former vice president and controller, were indicted jointly with him. The indictments contained 27 counts.

The true bill was the first fruit of a year of investigation by Department of Justice agents. It charged a total of $76,122 in the bank's trust department was misapplied. At one time, the Guardian's trust department was the largest in the State.

The bank, now in the hands of a liquidator, was closed in the spring of 1933.

In event of conviction, the three might face penalties of five years in a Federal penitentiary, a fine of $5,000, or both, on each count.

Gold Imports, $9,145,900.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Today's gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank showed imports of $9,145,900 from England, Holland, France and Palestine. There were no exports.

West of G.W.U. Assails "Trend To Overthrow"

Professor of Political Science Sees Peril in Regimentation.

Commenting upon accusations that members of the "brain trust" are plotting a revolution, Dr. Warren Reed West, professor of political science at George Washington University, said last night the important point involved is not whether the charges are true or false, but that "steps being taken, with business recovery as the alleged end, are carrying the United States closer to the overthrow of the basic principles upon which this country has placed its faith in the past."

"Imperfect as our economic system may be, political regimentation of our economic life would be worse," Dr. West declared.

He characterized government as a "human institution which at best has functioned imperfectly and which does not often give us the best solution for any problem and too often can offer only a compromise or the lesser of two evils."

In experimenting with various forms of governmental regimentation, the present National Administration has exemplified the weakness of political control, Dr. West said.

Points to Bureaus.

"While proclaiming on the one hand the ideals of the brotherhood of men, to be achieved through governmental activity, the practical politicians in this same Administration have filled with political appointees the very bureaus that were to achieve these ideals," he continued. "Such simultaneous expressions of high-minded enthusiasm and cold-blooded practical politics have not been unknown in our past history and may be expected in the future. They are evidence that no intelligent and impartial control of industry can soon be expected. With the parties and factions struggling to secure the jobs, the resulting control of industry would be worse than the evil it was designed to correct."

Dr. West saw the "liberals" as working toward the goal of dictatorship. He claimed that Secretary Wallace's recently published pamphlet, "America Must Choose," makes it clear that steps thus far taken in the control of business "constitute only an intermediate step in the progress toward a planned economy," and that in the planned middle course which he advocates, Secretary Wallace "flirts with the ideas of dictatorship and suppression of free speech."

Roosevelt "Mistakes" Cited.

He continued: "I can not believe that any despotism could accomplish a permanent solution of our political and economic problems, even though it were temporarily successful. Our own experience with one-man control has not been particularly fortunate. The frivolous overthrowing of the London conference, the bizarre experiment of the gold purchases and the precipitate and arbitrary action in the matter of the air mails can do little to encourage belief in the permanence and efficacy of the judgment of a single individual. Another person in the same position might suffer an even higher percentage of error."

Further pointing out the difficulties in a sudden great expansion of Government control, Dr. West said:

"While we are dwelling upon the mistakes of the bankers and the moral perversions of Wall street, we would do well to remember that all the errors and all the crookedness have not been limited to finance and business. It is true that our financial and economic system has lagged in adjusting itself to the complications of modern society, but it does not follow that our governmental system has proved itself so competent that we can safely burden it with all the problems of business.

"Legislatures have been cumbersome, or worse, with parties, sections and blocs jockeying for position. The administrative branches have been the resting places for politicians between campaigns, and even the courts have not escaped criticism for slowness and complication. And yet "liberals" of various shades and opinions would load this creaking governmental omnibus with all the burdens of business. Their simple faith in the adequacy of politics to solve the intricate problems of business and economics is amazing.

Machines a Problem.

"Government, as well as business, is still in the process of adjustment to the problems of the machine age. The machine age in America is not over 60 years old. Sixty years ago the country was agricultural and nonmechanical. It was not very different from the United States in the time of the Revolution or England in the reign of Elizabeth. The age of machinery has brought new problems. That they have not been solved is not surprising. To give up the orderly processes of study and careful experimentation and throw the regimentation of business upon our inadequate political bodies is an act of despair, not a solution.

"New burdens should be added only in proportion to the improvement evidenced by government in its capacity to handle them. Many people have been stampeded into the belief that our old economic system has completely failed—that it has no elements of good—and they would try out something new on the theory that anything is better than the old order. They have asserted so frequently that the whole economic system has failed that they have been convinced by their own constant repetition. They would prefer any kind of experimentation to efforts to improve the old order. Having dealt so long upon the failure of business they have forgotten the incompetence of government.

"The tariff has been a kind of planned economy. But the history of our tariff bills has not been such as to inspire National confidence in the governmental control of business. And yet the tariff is merely negative in its effect and it is revised only at intervals. A planned economy would be positive, minute in its specifications, and continuous in its action. Just as its activity would be infinitely greater, the evil influences arising from the weaknesses of our political system would be magnified proportionately.

Government Ills Age Old.

"Who can believe that intelligent and impartial control of business could be achieved by politics, balancing one industry against another, production against consumption, section against section, interest against interest? No problem presented to man has led to so many heart-rending failures as that of providing fair, economical and adequate government. At its best, it has functioned imperfectly."

Dr. West said that in representing chaos as the only alternative to governmental economic control the advocates of a new economic order present the dilemma falsely. On the contrary, he said, "the political control of business eventually will give us chaos. It will delay the working out of a permanent solution. We should not reject everything in the old economic order but should build upon it. We should not set aside our old civil and political liberties and our representative form of government, but should adapt that form of government to modern needs. This suggestion does not have the simplicity of a fascist or bolshevistic national planning, but it will bring us more quickly to the ultimate solution of the problems of government and business in this machine civilization.

"If I did not believe that with all their faults democracy, representative government, free speech and a free press, were best suited to the genius of our people I should not be alarmed. If I did not believe that in the long run the private ownership of property and its use without undue political restraint was desirable, I should not be disturbed at communistic or fascist tendencies. Countries not so long accustomed to free representative government may not find despotism objectionable. For Italians and Russians it may be entirely appropriate. But in America I believe that we have been working along better lines, more suited to our own habits of thought and more likely to lead to a permanent solution of the problems of this age."

Counsel Attacks Wagner Bill

JAMES A. EMERY,
general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, tells the Senate Labor Committee the Wagner bill to outlaw company unions would be "invalid and unsound in principle."

Rainey Assails Wirt, Urges Probe by Justice Department

livering his information to the Justice Department.

Sees Other Motive.

"I rather suspect that what he wants to do is to enable certain people to appear before a committee of Congress in order to challenge the recovery program of the Administration and to have their sensational statements carried under black headlines in the newspapers throughout the country," said the Speaker.

Referring to a copyrighted article by Dr. Wirt appearing exclusively in The Washington Post, Rainey said:

"I am wondering if he is capitalizing on his supposed information and collecting money from newspapers. His conduct does not deserve commendation. The information he has, if he has any, ought to be given directly to the President of the United States and to the Attorney General."

[In fairness to Dr. Wirt, it should be stated that he received no pay for his statement in The Post.—Editor's note.]

Citing the imaginary case of a man who had knowledge of a kidnaping case, but who refused to divulge it to police, Speaker Rainey said:

"He would be brought up on the carpet at once and a way could be found to compel him to divulge the information. Dr. Wirt's petition is just as bad and just as contemptible as it would be if he knew the names of kidnapers and refused to divulge them until he was compelled to do so by investigation."

The Speaker said that if charges are true that a revolution is in progress, the men responsible for it are guilty of "treason."

Wants Talkers Penalized.

"If the statements he alleges were made as a joke, the men who made them ought to be at once severed from their connections with the recovery program," the Speaker continued.

"If the statements were made seriously, and if they are plotting to overthrow the Government, the Department of Justice will know what to do in the matter."

While insisting his special propaganda investigating committee has power now to examine the Wirt charges, Representative Dickstein said last night there is nothing he can do about it until Speaker Rainey appoints members of the committee.

"I can not say what the committee will do when appointed," Mr. Dickstein said. "But my personal inclination would be to go into the charges, under the broad authority granted us by the House.

"I don't think Dr. Wirt assembled that information himself. I think it was handed to him. And I could almost name the man who gave it to him."

The resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Bulwinkle, now pending before the Rules Committee, asked appointment of a special committee of five members by the Speaker, with authority to sit only in the District, subpena witnesses and documents and report back to the House before Congress adjourns.

Wide Probe Asked.

The committee specifically would be empowered to inquire into the truth of charges "that certain employes of the United States or other individuals were attempting or would attempt to prolong suffering, destitution and misery among the people of the United States; that they were attempting or would attempt to thwart the program of National recovery in the United States; that they were attempting to overthrow the social order in order that a revolution might be brought about in the United States, and that such employes or other individuals were attempting to influence a President of the United States to take action contrary to the general welfare and his constitutional duties."

Further, the committee would be directed to find out whether any official or unofficial group "have in any manner advised or influenced, or attempted to advise or influence, the preparation and enactment of any legislation with the object of prolonging economic depression, thwarting the program of National recovery, or overthrowing the social order of the Government of the United States."

Representative Bulwinkle conferred with Speaker Rainey and Democratic Leader Byrns and indicated both expressed approval. He said he was considering asking unanimous consent of the House.

Byrns Is "Willing."

Byrns said that while he did not "initiate" the inquiry, he saw no reason why the Rules Committee should not return a favorable report on the Bulwinkle resolution. He said the investigation should not go beyond Dr. Wirt's charges.

"Brain Trust" Leaders Scoff At Wirt's Story

"Who Is He?" They Ask as "Revolution Expose" Stirs Capital.

By Frank Getty.

"Brain trust" circles in Washington yesterday professed ignorance of the source of Dr. William A. Wirt's allegations that he had been informed of a revolutionary movement, of which President Roosevelt "is only the Kerensky, caught in a current too swift for him to turn back."

There was a disposition among the Administration's younger intellectual advisers to treat the charges humorously, although most of them declined to be quoted.

"Who is Wirt?" was a general response to the question whether any of the so-called "brain trusters" knew who might have furnished the Indiana educator with the material contained in his letter made public last Friday before the House Interstate Commerce Commission.

Higher-Ups Silent.

Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who has been frequently identified as an outstanding "brain truster," said he never had met Dr. Wirt. Others, including Jerome Frank, AAA counsel; James M. Landis, Federal Trade Commissioner, and Mordecai Ezekiel, prominent "brain trust" members, said the same thing. They declined to comment on the situation created by Dr. Wirt's charges and the impending Congressional investigation.

Ezekiel, en route to Rome to represent the United States at an international wheat conference, wirelessed to press associations yesterday:

"Do not recall talking with Dr. Wirt. I have never advocated or predicted either dictatorship or communism for America. Instead, I believe in liberal democracy."

Two Cornell professors, whose names have been associated with the "brain trust," George F. Warren, the President's chief currency adviser, and William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, told the Associated Press they had given no information to Dr. Wirt.

Ballyhoo, Says Taussig.

Charles Taussig, president of the American Molasses Co., another "brain truster," commented:

"I never even heard of Wirt, and I, for one, don't know what this tempest in a teapot is all about. I don't believe anyone else does, either, unless it's Wirt or James H. Rand, jr.

"Rand has been deluging me with releases and one thing and another about Wirt's so-called exposure, but as far as the old 'brain trust' is concerned, there's nothing to expose.

"Wirt, even now, is just a name to me along with Lenin, Stalin and a hundred others. Frankly, it looks just like another ballyhoo about a mysterious and nonexistent revolution."

Berle Calls It "Spoofing."

A. A. Berle, jr., special counsel to the railroad division of the RFC, is quoted by the Associated Press as saying:

"I think somebody must have been spoofing the good doctor. The original 'brain trust' was only President Roosevelt's campaign research committee, and it was liquidated on the night of March 3, 1933."

It was suggested by several "brain trusters" that Dr. Wirt perhaps had taken seriously idle talk at midsummer cocktail parties during his visit here last year.

A Washington correspondent for a news agency yesterday recalled that on the occasion of Dr. Wirt's visit in June, some such conversation as that concerning the "stream" in which the President was caught had been exchanged at a gathering of radicals, with no "brain trusters" present. At that time, he said, there was no mention of a "Kerensky," nor talk of a revolution.

Board to Examine "Hex" Slayer.

Pottsville, Pa., March 26 (AP). Warden William Watson, of the Schuylkill County Jail, said today he will ask appointment of a commission to inquire into the sanity of Albert Shinsky, 24-year-old farm hand, accused of the "hex" slaying of Mrs. Susan Mummey.

Summary of Wirt Case

Gary Educator Quotes "Brain Truster" in Talk of Revolution With Roosevelt as "Kerensky;" Congressmen Roused, Ask Inquiry.

March 23

Chairman James H. Rand, jr., of the Committee for the Nation, introduced before the House Interstate Commerce Committee a letter from Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) school head, quoting a member of the "brain trust" as telling of a revolution in which President Roosevelt is "only the Kerensky," to be replaced by a "Stalin."

Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, declared such statements, if made, "damnable and traitorous," and called for an investigation.

Dr. Wirt, at Gary, confirmed the facts as given in his letter, but declined to furnish the name of his "brain trust" informant.

March 24

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), of North Carolina, prepared a resolution calling for investigation of the charges by a special House Committee.

Representative McGugin (Republican), of Kansas, declared "a little band in the AAA is betraying the Republic and the confidence of the President."

Speaker Rainey said "the statement is dangerous and should be investigated. I will make every effort to get the Bulwinkle resolution before the House if the Rules Committee reports it favorably."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Senator Robinson (Republican), of Indiana, said Dr. Wirt should be called to Washington to tell what he knows, and that they would act if the House failed to.

Dr. Wirt reiterated the truth of his letter and said he was "willing to be the goat."

March 25.

Dr. Wirt gave a statement to The Post, saying "the revolution is under way now." In a statement at Gary, he asked for a Congressional investigation.

"Brain trust" leaders here scoffed at Dr. Wirt's "credulity" and said the "revolution" was nothing more than "cocktail talk." Most of them denied knowing the Indiana educator.

March 26.

Representative Bulwinkle introduced a resolution calling for a House special committee to investigate the charges.

Speaker Rainey denounced Wirt and said Department of Justice should conduct investigation.

Senator Schall (Republican), of Minnesota, called for a "firing squad" for those plotting revolution, if the charges are proved.

Dr. Wirt announced he would "stick to my guns" and "name names if the public good demands."

A dozen leading "brain trust" members denied knowledge of the source of Dr. Wirt's information and suggested he had been "spoofed."

Nude Body in Jungle May Be Air Passenger

Bogota, Colombia, March 26 (AP).—The naked body of a white man, more than 6 feet tall, was found today on a bank of the River Sipi near Condoto. It was believed he was a passenger on the airplane Von Krohn, of the Scadta airline, lost in a flight over the Choco March 12.

Newton C. Marshall, an engineer of the Choco-Pacific Mining Co., and a native of Milwaukee, was one of the passengers aboard the plane. The Colombia government and the Scadta company conducted a widespread search after its disappearance.

Wagner to Let Some Company Unions Exist

Bill Will Be Modified; A. F. L. Support May Be Withdrawn.

separate and apart from this agreement.

"Labor, of course, holds that the company union is no union at all; that it is merely the extension of the corporation's authority and power over the economic and industrial life of the workers. The Wagner industrial disputes act provides that this form of an extension of corporate power must cease."

Houston Attacks Bill.

Green declined to discuss the Wagner Coercion amendment until he learned the facts.

A new verbal blast against the Wagner measure came from the Durable Goods Industries committee, headed by George H. Houston, president of Baldwin Locomotive Works. The committee charged the bill would "regulate all employers, including farmers, housewives and shopkeepers, who employ helpers, but it specifically exempts such employers of labor as all divisions of Government, railway, and, which is more significant, labor unions themselves."

Concerning company unions, Emery warned the Senate Committee:

"It is unlawful under this bill for the employer to either initiate, participate in or 'influence' the form or policy of any labor organization.

"This labor organization may not keep its contracts. It may demonstrate bad leadership. It may commit violence. It may be communistic in philosophy and action. But any attempt by the employer to influence a change in its form or philosophy or initiate reform, or suggest or offer to assist in forming a different organization, or to submit a plan for their joint relationship, is a plain offense."

Emery insisted the bill constituted an indefensible invasion of a right to regulate local employment relations ruled by the Supreme Court as subject to State, rather than Federal control. He added bitterness, discord and conflict would be fostered and "conference and cooperation outlawed" by passage of the bill.

"This measure," Emery protested, "gradually forces in operating effect but one form of labor organization, and slowly but surely undertakes to drive all workers into it. It ignores successful and practical experiments in new forms of collective relationship.

"It will cast all labor relations in one mold, granting a labor monopoly to those who employ it. It is invalid in law and unsound in principle. It would destroy in one class of workers and employers the very rights which it undertakes to secure for another organization of workers.

Emery Cites Paradox.

"It outlaws the natural and necessay intercourse of employer and employe while ignoring or deliberately encouraging coercion and unfair practices of organized labor."

Emery denied the bill would encourage amicable settlement of disputes.

"On the contrary," he declared, "analysis shows it to be so designed as to prevent the employer from exercising the natural circumstances of bargaining, impairs its nature and extent, gratuitously presumes that he only exercises coercion in the employment relation or indulges in unfair practices; makes no effort to define, regulate or prohibit the equally reprehensible and long-recognized practices and abuses of labor organizations destructive of the rights of their fellow-workers, of employers and of the public."

The witness reported working hours and wages were improved by NRA.

"It has been steadily asserted," he said, "that during the months which have elapsed since the adoption of the recovery act, the condition of labor has not been improved; its protection under the codes has been denied and defied; hours have been little reduced, and minimum wages have tended to become maximums.

Figures Show Gains.

"Taking last December as a standard for measurement, the Department of Labor will show that in 15 categories of American industry, the average work week has declined four hours, although the volume of business has risen 13 per cent, and in 21 representative manufacturing industries, the average hourly earnings increased to a point roughly but 7 per cent below the 1929 rate. In four major industries they are higher than in 1929 and in bituminous coal within 4 cents an hour of the 1929 rate.

"Such have been the gains in hours and wages for workers against the depths of the depression. You are asked for new legislation on the ground that labor has not been fairly treated, but within nine months, more than 20,000,000 employes have received shorter hours, higher pay, better working conditions, with increased expense to every industry."

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, failed to make a scheduled appearance before the committee. He was indisposed due to exhaustive efforts in averting a threatened automobile industry strike.

The Houston committee termed the Wagner bill "one of the most far-reaching in its ill-effects on industry ever proposed to an American Congress."

Passage, the group argued, would create a base "from which troublemakers of every kind could effectively operate to stir up trouble and cause chaos in employer-employe relationships of the already prostrate durable goods industries.

Cannot Be Standardized.

"The committee believes that just and sympathetic relations between employer and employe are essential to recovery and progress. Such relationships are the result of growth, not of manufacture. They can not be cast into a single mold by legislative enactment, nor can they be standardized without regard to the rights and desires of employer and employe.

"Moreover, they should not be subjected to agitation and legislative changes, thus making it impossible for industry to plan for the future or find investors to risk commitments in industrial enterprises. Stability in employment relations is essential for the recovery and expansion of employment."

Pay Bill Voted; Leaders Await Prompt Veto

All House Amendments Carry; New Measure Expected.

have to resort to furloughs to keep within their appropriations.

Preparation of a new measure, however, seemed likely. Speaker Rainey and Representative Byrns (Democrat), of Tennessee, majority leaders predicted the veto would be sustained and the Appropriations Committee would be instructed to prepare a new measure which would meet Presidential approval.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, majority leader, predicted a new measure which would meet the approval of the President. He agreed with House leaders that a continuing resolution would be resorted to only in the closing hours of the session, with adjournment several weeks away.

"5-and-5" Plan Certain.

The new measure seems certain to carry the so-called "five-and-five" plan for Government pay restoration which was several times approved by the House and accepted by the Senate after that body voted 41 to 40 to restore all of the 15 per cent cut.

The "five-and-five" plan provides for restoration of 5 per cent as of last February 1 and another 5 per cent effective July 1, and authorizes the President to restore the third 5 per cent next January 1 if living costs have risen to 1928 levels or higher.

Approval of the "five-and-five" plan was given by the Senate on motion of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who led the fight in the Senate for full restoration. The vote was 59 to 19.

By a vote of 48 to 39 the Senate then approved the House veterans' amendments after adopting an amendment offered by Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, who, with Senator McCarran, led the fight for greater veteran benefits. The Steiwer amendment was described as clarifying the House provisions, which, it was said, would have made the 75 per cent limitation on payments to presumptive cases restored to the roll apply also to service-connected cases.

Borah Amendment Out.

Acceptance of the House changes wiped out the Borah amendment, which continued the 15 per cent pay cut for all Government employes receiving more than $6,000, including members of Congress. The judiciary was excepted.

Only four Republicans, Senators Couzens, of Michigan; Keyes, of New Hampshire; Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Steiwer, voted with the 44 Democrats. Twelve Democrats voted with the 28 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite against the lower House benefits.

Senator Steiwer and other Republicans professed themselves as willing to stand on the principal issue with the President over the veterans' benefits. The Chief Executive was represented by party leaders as unalterably opposed to the permanent return of about 29,000 persumptive cases to the rolls. Administration leaders sought to carry out his wishes and provide for restoration subject to review. This proposal was rejected by sponsors of the veterans, who said it would be merely a stop-gap because reviewing boards would throw most, if not all, off the rolls again.

Veterans' Fight to Continue.

What veterans' provisions will be written into the expected new measure has not been settled. Senator Steiwer said he was willing to continue the fight on that issue. Republican political chiefs are planning to place responsibility on the shoulders of the President in a campaign which will reach every veterans' organization in the country.

That increased benefits will be written in the measure, however, was indicated by Senator Robinson (Democrat) Arkansas, who said he believed Congress should provide as much as would be compatible with the Administration's fiscal program. The Senator refused to say how much the Administration would be willing to grant, although he intimated he had a definite program.

"If you say in advance how far you are willing to go, then immediately you are confronted with demands from this source and that to go just a little farther," he explained.

Although principal attention has been centered on the veterans' provisions of the bill, the President is expected to make reference in his veto message to other provisions. One is the amendment sponsored by Senator Elerin Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, providing that the pay of Government workers whose wages have been fixed by wage boards shall be restored to the level effective on June 1, 1932. It also reduces the work week to 40 hours. This would have the effect of giving the Navy Yard, arsenal and some others a 40-hour week for 48-hours' pay, when other Government employes are being forced on furloughs in addition to taking a cut in statutory salary.

Borah Scores Bankhead Bill As Dangerous

Crop Control Clause Seen as Clear Violation of Private Rights.

this year at 10,600,000 bales and directs the Secretary of Agriculture to allocate that figure among the various cotton producing States, counties and farms.

If two-thirds of the cotton growers favor a continuation of the plan next year, the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to determine the maximum crop for that year and make a similar allocation. All cotton ginned in excess of the allocation would be taxed 50 per cent of its market value, but not less than 5 cents a pound.

Senator John H. Bankhead, the Senator sponsor of the measure, announced he will seek to have the penalty increased to 75 per cent of the market value.

Contending he did not care what was done in behalf of cotton, Senator Borah said he "objected seriously to the principle" of this bill because, in his opinion, it would be only a short time before the wheat, cattle and other agricultural areas of the country would be subjected to similar provisions.

Scored as Precedent.

"This is the beginning of a National plan," the Idahoan asserted. "It is the starting of a movement for planning and controlling the production of this country. It is an effort to coerce the last single individual into producing cotton according to regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture.

He cited opposition to such a drastic plan on the part of cotton interests in Texas, but Senator Smith contended there was "an Ethiopian in that woodpile." He said the protests were inspired by the ginners and cottonseed men, who cared more for large crops than they did for what the farmer received.

When Senator Borah contended the purpose of the bill was to coerce a minority into observing the crop reduction program, Senator Smith agreed, contending that it was directed against the "slackers" and said he had no objection to "coercing the 10 per cent of greedy and avaricious men."

Called Unconstitutional.

But the Idahoan said that while the majority might rule, the Constitution was written to protect the rights and interests of minorities. He said he did not think the bill was constitutional and quoted excerpts of the Supreme Court ruling in the child labor act case to substantiate his contention.

Senator Borah argued that to prohibit a legitimate article from moving in commerce by taxation would in effect "take away the very foundations of the Republic." He said he doubted whether a majority of cotton planters wanted the legislation and doubted even more "if you'll be able to get them into such a straight-jacket."

The South Carolinian argued that the bill was necessary to restore prosperity to the South. He said acreage reduction could not be made effective if a few recalcitrants refused voluntarily to limit their plantings. Under the bill he predicted cotton prices would rise to 15 cents a pound.

15-Cent Cotton Seen.

Senator Smith said that in view of "all the things we have done here," he could see no merit in the contention that the pending measure constituted "a radical departure" from fundamentals. When Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican leader, asserted that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace did not agree with all the South Carolinian had said, Senator Smith, with an air of exasperation, exclaimed:

"Please don't quote Secretary Wallace to me. He doesn't know anything about cotton and admits he does not. He is not in the 'brain trust'—I did not mean to say 'brain trust'—he is a sincere, honest man."

Smith contended that all the Agricultural Department's "cotton experts" came from the North—"from Alaska," he said—and then observed that "an expert is a damn fool away from home."

"Commissar Wallace."

Senator Bailey said the pending bill placed a harsh penalty on the farmer who produced, even by virtue of a benevolent Providence, one bale of cotton in excess of his allocation.

"If the Federal Government can do that, it can do anything," he asserted. "If it can do that we no longer have a republic but a tyranny. This bill takes away from the cotton planter the inalienable rights of the people guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence—it wipes out the last vestige of State rights."

The North Carolinian contended the "crucial hour" had arrived when Congress must decide "whether this country is going to be a free republic or a regimented socialistic commonwealth." Later he referred to Secretary Wallace as "our commissar."

Ancient Temple Is Uncovered in Tennessee

Wide World Photo.

The remains of a temple, believed by TVA archeologists to have been in use by a race which antedated the Cherokee Indians, has been uncovered by CWA workers under the direction of Maj. W. S. Webb, head of the TVA archeological survey, in an isolated mountain valley, 30 miles from the Norris Dam, but in an area to be flooded by water when the dam is completed. So far, the archeologists have not been able to determine how old the temple is, but they believe it dates back many centuries to a hardy race more civilized than the Indians.

Roosevelt Indorses Stock Control Bill, Assails Foes

ident addressed this letter to Congress, through the two committee chairmen:

Text of Letter.

"Before I leave Washington for a few days' holiday, I want to write you about a matter which gives me some concern.

"On February 9, 1934, I sent to the Congress a special message asking for Federal supervision of national traffic in securities.

"It has come to my attention that a more definite and more highly organized drive is being made against effective legislation to this end than against any similar recommendation made by me during the past year. Letters and telegrams bearing all the earmarks of origin at some common source are pouring in to the White House and the Congress.

"The people of this country are, in overwhelming majority, fully aware of the fact that unregulated speculation in securities and in commodities was one of the most important contributing factors in the artificial and unwarranted 'boom' which had so much to do with the terrible conditions of the years following 1929.

"I have been definitely committed to definite regulation of exchanges which deal in securities and commodities. In my message I stated, 'It should be our National policy to restrict, as far as possible, the use of these exchanges for purely speculative operations.'

Sees Need for "Truth."

"I am certain that the country as a whole will not be satisfied with legislation unless such legislation has teeth in it. The two principal objectives are, as I see it:

"First, the requirement of what is known as margins so high that speculation, even as it exists today, will of necessity be drastically curtailed; and

"Second, that the Government be given such definite powers of supervision over exchanges that the Government itself will be able to correct abuses which may arise in the future.

"We must, of course, prevent in so far as possible manipulation of prices to the detriment of actual investors, but at the same time we must eliminate unnecessary, unwise and destructive speculation.

"The bill, as shown to me this afternoon by you, seems to meet the minimum requirements. I do not see how any of us could afford to have it weakened in any shape, manner or form."

Whitney Offers Views Today.

Meanwhile, Whitney today will make a concluding appearance before the Senate Committee to offer amendments, after which Senator Fletcher announced the committee will go into executive session to consider the bill. The House Committee will meet for the same purpose Wednesday.

It has been believed generally that the revised bill contained all the concessions Congress would permit in the face of attacks from the exchanges. The President's unqualified support, giving it the impetus that many think will assure its early passage, was hailed by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate Committee in its long investigation of Wall street, as "the best thing I've heard in a long time."

At the same time, protests came from two more sources—floor traders of the New York exchange declared to forbid them dealing in securities on their own would work to the detriment of investors; the durable goods committee headed by George F. Houston, president of Baldwin Locomotive, declared the bill would "prove to be a serious deterrent to recovery."

See Peril to Business.

In a letter to code officials, the committee announced its belief "that if this bill is enacted into law it would further retard the flow of capital into private enterprise, effectively continue, if not augment, unemployment that exists in the durable goods industries and add further to the enormous losses which these industries already have sustained."

Indorsing generally provisions of the revised Fletcher-Rayburn bill, the President is understood to have approved a lowering of margin requirements from the 60 per cent in the bill to 50 per cent, in his conference with Senator Fletcher.

This minimum margin requirement, target of much of the protest, may be moved up or down by the Federal Reserve Board with certain limitations. The bill also gives the Federal Trade Commission authority to supervise practices, and segregates the operations of brokers, specialists and dealers.

After sharp criticism from Whitney and the heads of virtually every exchange, on the grounds the bill would force liquidation, drive some exchanges to the wall, and generally stem the free flow of capital, first provisions were modified to give the Federal Reserve a larger share in its administration.

Share of Mail Profits Sought By Manchukuo

Question of Recognition Makes Powers' Reply Important.

Geneva (A.P.).—With Pu Yi enthroned as Emperor of Manchukuo, the League of Nations anticipates a drive by the infant Asiatic nation to obtain recognition from the powers as a soverign state independent of China.

Japan, godfather of Manchukuo, is expected to back this movement with determination.

The rest of the world is pledged to accord no recognition. Japan bolted the League of Nations when the assembly, after reproving Japan's aggression in Manchuria, decided upon a policy of non-recognition of Manchukuo on the ground that this territory, historically known as Manchuria, belongs to China.

Mails Weakest Link.

Already, Manchukuo statesmen have struck at the policy of non-recognition at its weakest point. However the earth's surface may be split up politically, the universal postal system must operate. Letters and packages go to Manchuria or pass through Manchuria to their ultimate destination in Asia.

Manchukuo wants to be paid her share of the expense of transporting mail across her soil. She has written the British postal authorities, demanding an allocation of funds from the World Postal Union, which has the job of establishing statistics for the nations as to costs and earnings from carrying the mails, a sort of international clearing house.

England Passes Buck.

England has passed the buck to the League of Nations, and the league has passed it on to the special advisory committee, which was created to follow developments of the Chino-Japanese conflict. England wants to know whether an acceptance of the Manchukuo demand will imply "de facto" recognition of the new nation.

Manchukuo admittedly has raised a particularly delicate problem. Mails passing through Manchuria are far greater than mails originating there. From the standpoint of equity, say officials, Manchukuo may be entitled to compensation as a carrier of merchandise.

Simultaneously, there are indications China will not abandon her claim to sovereign rights over Manchuria.

Bodies of Air Victims To Be Blasted Loose

Puente Del Inca, Argentina, March 26 (A.P.).—Dynamite will be necessary to remove the ice-locked bodies of eight men killed in the crash of the air liner San Jose high in the snow-capped Andes 20 months ago.

The body of A. Woods, a steward aboard the Pan-American-Grace plane, which was found last Thursday, thus solving one of the greatest mysteries of the air, was brought here yesterday.

Town Moved 50 Miles To New Copper Camp

Elko, Nev. (U.P.).—Except for a few scattered buildings and grizzled prospectors, the former gold camp of Jarbidge has been moved "lock, stock and barrel" to the booming copper town of Mountain City, described as one of the richest copper fields discovered in the United States.

Most of the 150 former residents moved their homes, piece by piece, over a narrow and winding mountain road. The task of moving a single building required several days. The two towns are 50 miles apart.

will be done—the President ignored the existence of the board. In some quarters this move was looked on as giving virtual support to the manufacturers, who refused to submit to the Labor Board's jurisdiction or undergoe questioning in its hearings.

The Roosevelt plan also provides for proportional representation of workers, with each union or group have its own representatives on a "works council." This council would be empowered to bargain collectively with employers. In the Denver Tramway decision the Labor Board ruled that, instead of proportional representation, the union winning the election should have the authority to speak for all the employes, including those who voted against it.

NRA Ford Charges.

It was not clear yesterday, whether the Ford plants would come under the agreement negotiated Sunday night between labor representatives and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Ford is not a member of the chamber and was not invilved in the present dispute. The National Compliance Board of the NRA, however, is considering charges that the Ford management discriminated against employes because of their membership in the American Federation of Labor.

Whether these cases will come before the meditation board set up by the President has not been determined. It is expected that announcement will be made today of those who will become members of the body. One will represent employers, one employes and one the public.

For representative of the public, the names of Alfred E. Smith, Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York Power Authority and a friend of the President, and Lieut. Kilbourne Johnston, the recovery administrator's son, was suggested.

$15,000,000 Nanking Offer Made Cantonese

Hong Kong, March 26 (A.P.).—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, "strong man" of the Nanking National government, was reported today to have offered Gen. Chan Chai-Tong, Canton government leader, $15,000,000 as "arrears army pay" for Canton's acceptance of a reunification scheme.

Under the scheme, it was said, Nanking would absorb Canton's army, navy and air forces and all of the Canton government councils would be abolished.

no composer can write

A composer cannot write color into his music. There are no musical symbols for purely emotional values . . . and Chopin's Ballades, on paper, are but a succession of notes. Color can be given only by the performer . . . and by the instrument he uses.

Among musicians . . . virtuosi . . . the marvelous color of the Steinway is part of the priceless Steinway tradition. Unromantically, it comes not from the art of making a fine piano, but from the science. It is the result of Steinway invention, available only in the Steinway, jealously guarded by Steinway.

Our salesmen will talk of our Duplex Scale. In terms of piano playing that means color . . . the building up of a tone by bringing out its overtones; by adding the harmonious partials to each fundamental. And the Duplex Scale is just one of a great many Steinway developments.

The price of a Steinway now is lower than it has been for many years. The terms are very convenient.

telephone calls he is receiving. Virtually all of them, he declared, have been complimentary.

"It seems strange to me," he said, "that there hasn't been a word of criticism. It doesn't seem natural."

The Wirts have three children. Dr. Wirt has been in educational work for years and formerly was a banker. He became superintendent of Gary schools in 1907, when the steel city was a village.

The steel boom brought thousands of new families into Gary and there were not enough schools for the children. Dr. Wirt evolved the "Gary plan" of providing equal parts of work, play and study for the children. The plan became nationally known, was adopted in many other cities, and at one time became a weighty political issue in New York.

Dr. Wirt said that he made a series of trips to Washington last year to study governmental methods and that it was then that he learned of the purported plot to supplant President Roosevelt with a dictator.

Plot Well Laid, He Says.

The plan, he said, as disclosed by a member or members of the "brain trust," was well defined. Under it, he said, the return of prosperity would be deliberately delayed in order to make the public dissatisfied and foment revolution.

"I decided," he said, "that the public should be forewarned. If the plan should go through, the election of congressmen would become a mere formality. If certain 'New Deal' legislation is adopted, the next Congress will be little more than a figurehead.

"Recently at the code hearings the Administration unmistakably indicated that this danger is not a theoretical one and during the next two months legislation probably will be passed which will make our elected congressmen absolutely unimportant. Congress will be helpless, no matter who is elected."

Dr. Wirt, in his original statement, charged that Gen. Hugh Johnson, NRA Administrator, is a "general of destruction." The members of the brain trust, he declared, "do not know that the America of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln has been the 'New Deal.' The common man is getting his place in the sun. Why try to put him back into the dark ages?"

Repeats "Plotter's Story."

A "brain truster," according to Dr. Wirt, told him that they, the members of the brain trust, were making President Roosevelt believe that he was making decisions for himself when, in point of fact, they were making them for him.

According to Dr. Wirt, the "brain truster" said:

"He must make decisions and many times make them quickly, whether good or bad. Soon he will feel a superhuman flow of power from the flow of decisions themselves. Eventually he can be easily displaced because of his bad decisions. With Mr. Roosevelt's background, we do not expect him to see this revolution through. Such individuals can be induced to kindle the fires of revolution. But strong men must take their place when the country is once engulfed in flames."

Lawyers Hold Ickes Quashed Estate Claims

Two Who Face Inquiry Say Secretary Used Intimidation.

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—Two Chicago attorneys, accused by Secretary of Interior Ickes of "unprofessional conduct, "today replied to the Cabinet officer, with charges that he had "hoodwinked" clients and tried to suppress claims by intimidation.

A public hearing into Ickes' charges against C. W. Larsen and Lucius J. M. Malmin will be held by the Chicago Bar Association grievance commission Wednesday. Ickes asked the hearing to determine whether disbarment action should be brought.

Ickes contended the attorneys tried to gain Federal positions by threatening to make public charges that he mismanaged an estate.

Larsen today issued a statement asserting that only $8,411 was distributed to heirs out of a total of $19,473 in an estate handled by Ickes. He contended a large amount was expended in clearing up title to real estate, which was appraised at exaggerated values.

Larsen charged that only after the estate was closed did the heirs "realize that they had been hoodwinked * * * thereby permitting themselves to be deprived of the greatest part of their inheritance.

"Request for restitution or some satisfactory adjustment of the matter were unavailing. He said Mr. Ickes and attorneys representing him have sought to prevent the pressing of their claims by the heirs by resort to intimidation. To this end phone calls of a nature calculated to intimidate have been made by individuals in the office of the State's attorney of Cook County, and letters of the same nature have been written by counsel representing Mr. Ickes.

Malmin, who was formerly a Federal judge in the Virgin Islands, asserted the Cabinet officer was "taking advantage of his high office" to suppress claims against him.

Harry Lauder's First Songs Heard by Miners

Escanaba, Mich. (U.P.).—The Rev. D. L. Cathcart, veteran missionary who has been a "sky pilot" in lumber camps for many years, once worked in a coal mine with Sir Harry Lauder.

Born in Hamilton, Scotland, Cathcart started working in the mines at an early age.

"Harry was always singing Scotch ditties or giving recitations while at work," the missionary recalled. "I was driving a pony in hauling coal from the mine while Harry was digging the coal and loading it into cars.

"I usually helped him load up my car and when it was filled, Harry would detain me a while to listen to some new song or recitation."

Cat Chase Nearly Fatal; Dog Goes on Chasing

Elyria, Ohio (U.P.).—A demonstration of the traditional dog-cat enmity here almost resulted in disaster for the canine, when he became so enthusiastic in the chase that he fell into a well.

Elyria firemen assumed the role of rescuers. They found the dog standing on the ice in the well, apparently wondering just how he was going to get out.

Firemen solved his problem by finally getting a hook slipped into his collar. After that, it was just a matter of lifting him out.

The dog emerged briskly ready for chasing cats again.

refusal to disarm unless Great Britain offers guarantees against an aggressor.

Behind the new French activity also are signs that the Belgians are weakening in the face of German rearmament and an uncertainty as to King Leopold's attitude.

England's Leaders Ponder Proposals

London, March 26 (AP).—How far Great Britain is willing to go in coercing nations to live up to a disarmament treaty was considered tonight by cabinet leaders.

This issue opens a new and possibly a deciding chapter in months-long disarmament negotiations.

The attitude of the United States and the extent to which nations would disarm if Britain obligated herself to take military and economic measures against a violator of a treaty were viewed as deciding factors.

The question of military and economic sanctions heretofore had only been raised as a possible retaliation against an aggressor in the event of a breach of peace.

Has Held Askance.

Britain has frowned on such undertakings because of probable difficulties in determining an aggressor.

She is obligated to a limited extent under the Locarno Treaty to guarantee the Franco-German and the Belgian-German frontiers in this manner.

The French note was interpreted in some quarters as meaning that France wants Great Britain also to guarantee the frontiers of France's eastern allies.

If this interpretation is true, it was said here, the British reply to the French will be an unequivocal "no."

But if France wants sanctions against a violator of a disarmament agreement, the British view is that this will open an entirely different question, and will be given consideration.

Greely, Oldest Living Arctic Explorer, Four Score 10 Today

GEN. A. W. GREELY.

Still Active, He Has Little Regard for Modern Polar Travels.

Gen. Adolphus Washington Greely, oldest of the living Arctic explorers who sought the "farthest north" before the airplane made exploration easy, is 90 years old today. And, indicative of his youthful mind, this grand old man insists that it is his ninety-first birthday—the first one should be counted, he says.

Gen. Greely's little home in Georgetown, at 3131 O street, will be a gathering place for his friends today when they drop in to wish him well. One fault with growing old, he says, is that one's oldest friends are gone. But there is a host of newer ones.

The brithday of that other remarkable old man of Washington, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who was 93 earlier this month, was noted with pleasure by Gen. Greely.

"Holmes and I were in the same brigade during the Civil War," he said. "I was a private in the Nineteenth Massachusetts and he was a captain in the Twentieth. I remember the Battle of Ball's Bluff, where he was wounded.

Takes Moderns Lightly.

Modern polar exploration doesn't interest the old general very much. The Byrd expedition at Little America is a wasted effort, he says.

"What does it amount to?" he asks. "Nowadays a woman can fly an airplane around the world. When I went north we had only dog teams."

Although the general spends practically all of his time in his home, that does not mean his health is poor. In fact, he says that it is remarkable in every respect. But he finds getting around pretty tiring.

"I can't walk more than half a mile any more," he says.

Although his life of soldiering and exploration was a hard one, Gen. Greely says his fine health is due to moderation—moderation in eating and drinking.

"I reformed from smoking when I was 8 years old," he said, "and I have had one cocktail in the last eight months."

He did not indicate whether this was a "before" or "after" repeal cocktail.

Gen. Greely was Lieut. Greely in 1881, when he was selected to head the Arctic expedition, charged with establishment of 13 circumpolar stations to collect data that might aid in locating the North Pole. These stations had been recommended by the International Geographical Congress at Hamburg in 1779.

Finds New Land.

Lieut. Greely and his party reached what was then the farthest north, 83 degrees and 24 minutes. En route they discovered new land north of Greenland and crossed Grinnell Land to the Great Polar Sea. The expedition failed to reach the ship Proteus, which was crashed in the ice. Greely and his men retreated to a refuge at Cape Sabine.

Two relief expeditions were sent. They failed to reach the party, but a third under Capt. Winfield Scott Schley, who later became admiral, found the survivors at Cape Sabine, three years after they had started North. Eighteen of the Greely party had perished from starvation and cold. The seven survivors were found under their fallen tent, almost dead. They had been without food for 42 hours.

In 1928, Gen. Greely wrote his last book, "The Polar Regions in the Twentieth Century; Their Discovery and Evolution."

Not alone with the North is Gen. Greely's name associated. He had many important Army assignments and in 1911 he was the official representative of the United States and President Taft at the coronation of King George V of England.

Chicago Officer Expected to Take Fugitive Today

Toronto, March 26 (AP).—Provincial authorities tonight were ready to turn Martin J. Insul over to Cook County, Ill., officers.

A warrant of surrender of Insull, signed by Hugh Guthrie, Canadian Minister of Justice, was in the hands of the Attorney General of Ontario, and the papers will be given to Lieut. Frank Johnson, of Chicago, when he arrives, probably tomorrow, to take Insull back to the United States for trial.

In Cook County, the original indictment charged Insull with embezzlement and larceny involving close to $500,000.

Lions', Tigers' Howls to Give Museums Zest

Collections of Future to Reproduce Locales Vividly.

Cleveland, Ohio (AP).—The roar of a savage lion, the wild laugh of a hyena and other lifelike sound effects may bristle your hair when you step into some museums a few years hence.

And if you move on to the polar animals exhibit you'll probably wish to button your overcoat, because the temperature will be at least slightly Arctic and there'll be whistling of cold north winds.

In the background you may catch a glimpse of the shimmering aurora borealis.

This realism is visualized by Harold L. Madison, director of Cleveland's Museum of Natural History.

To most people a natural history museum is a drab place, exhibiting stuffed animals, smelling of mothballs, full of echoes and slightly suggestive of a morgue. Madison would change all this with new treatment; in fact, he has already made a start in minor details.

Some museums in this country and Europe for several years have reproduced the native habitat of the animals in the larger exhibits—but only to the eye. Madison would appeal to the other senses as well.

His nearest approach to this ideal thus far is in use of colored lighting effects and backgrounds chosen to emphasize shades in the animals' fur and heighten the lifelike gleam in their eyes.

Now a Code Covers Burlesque Girls Besides Their Seven Veils

And They'll Get Time and a Half for All Overtime.

By Harry Ferguson.

One week from today the burlesque business gets its Blue Eagle and goes under one of the nicest little codes that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has ever manufactured down at the code factory.

Somebody put a lot of thought into that code. Things like that just don't happen by accident in this world of shift and change. Take the section on overtime, for instance. It provides that anybody who has to work overtime in case of an emergency shall get time and a half. It extends, of course, to those care-free gals who do a modern interpretation of the Dance of the Seven Veils.

A fellow who attended a burlesque show, that time his wife went back to Ohio to visit her family, told us that the gals start out with seven veils and drop one every five minutes or so. Every time a veil falls, according to our informant, the applause is something to hear.

But, Wait a Minute!

Finally there is only one veil left, and the gal stands on that thin and shifting border line that separates a theatrical artiste from a nudist. If that is not an emergency, somebody ought to appeal to the National Labor Board for a ruling, and if the applause lasts long enough the gal certainly is entitled to time and a half, under the terms of the code. That shows you how careful they were to work out the details.

Chorus girls are going to get $20 a week minimum wage, regardless of how many times they have to appear on the stage and sing "Dear Old Pal of Mine" three octaves off key. A barker, the gentleman who stands outside and yells "Twenty bee-yuti-ful giddy girlies—twenty—count 'em," will be paid a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour.

What! A Wardrobe Lady?

At first glance there seems to be only one inconsistency in the code. One section provides that the head of the wardrobe department shall receive a minimum salary of $35 a week. For doing what? For taking care of the gals' costumes, is what the NRA says. That seems like a lot of money to get just for collecting a peck of beads and a few veils after the show is over and putting them away where the gals can find them the next night.

When he got through approving the code, Johnson wrote a letter to President Roosevelt, saying that he couldn't tell whether the code was going to help cut down unemployment. He said burlesque depended a lot on "public taste," which shifts about a lot.

One week the customers want the gals fat, the next slim; one season they want hot-cha singers and the next ballads. Remind us to check up six months from now and report to you.

Foreign News Typist Walking Atlas of World

Has Written 56,000,000 Words in 38 Years on Cable Desk.

New York (AP).—Frank H. De Weir, one of the most prolific writers in the world, has completed his 56,000,000th word and started on his thirty-eighth year as a typist of foreign news.

It was he who typed the bulletin when the battleship Maine was blown up at Havana, February 15, 1898—and that was only one war.

De Weir's flying fingers have described 19 other wars. The "copy" which has passed through his typewriters—and he has worn out dozens—has described practically every event of major and minor importance in the outside world since 1897.

Dean of Manifolders.

De Weir is one of the "manifolders" of the Associated Press foreign service. As cablegrams arrive from correspondents scattered all over the world, a cable editor dictates the dispatches to a manifolder who types out manifolded copy ready for distribution by high-speed printer wires to newspapers.

De Weir is the dean of manifolders.

The work is nerve-wracking. It requires the writing of from 5,000 to 10,000 words daily, and these words include very imaginable foreign name and expression.

The work goes on at white heat through his 8-hour shift. Not a minute can be wasted in searches of georgraphies and foreign diplomatic lists.

Spells "Blagovenschchensk."

With De Weir on the job, cable editors are not often bothered by the need of such researches. He is a walking atlas and "who's who of the world." The location of Blagoveshchensk and how to spell it are simple things to De Weir.

"One of the first big stories I typed," reminisces De Weir, "was the Grand Charity Bazaar fire in Paris in 1897, when some of the first families of France were decimated in the blaze that killed 130 persons.

"Two other great disaster stories were the sinking of the Titanic and the torpedoing of the Lusitania. I remember young Vincent Astor coming up to the office the day the Titanic went down and, grief-stricken, learning the news of the death of his father, Col. John Jacob Astor.

War Days Strenuous.

"Some of the most strenuous days I ever put in were during the World War. The cable desk was swamped constantly with floods of messages. Censorship doubled the amount of work on the desk.

"Cable transmission across the ocean during the war sometimes took as much as five hours, while now it averages 5 minutes.

"That speeds things up, and the speedier things are the better I like them."

At odd intervals in his day, the veteran has a few minutes of relaxation. He spends those moments working out cross-word puzzles.

"I like them," he says. "They increase my vocabulary."

Chopper Keeps Title.

Middlebury, Conn. (U.P.).—William Dubay, Beacon Falls, champion wood chopper of New England, has no fear of competition. Wielding an ax with one hand, he chopped through a 6-inch rock maple in 20 seconds to win a county contest against a field of 40 entries.

Post's "Headlines of Yesterday" on Air

Convicts' Freedom As Tuberculosis Test Reward Hit

Denver, March 26 (AP).—A proposal to pardon 12 Colorado Penitentiary convicts if they survive injection of a serum aimed at tuberculosis prevention drew protests today from court and police officials.

Opposing any plan to liberate the men, they pointed out that 31 convicted murderers were on the first list of prisoners declared eligible for tests by Warden Roy Best.

"My police training has taught me that a man who will commit premeditated murder will do it again," said Chief of Police Albert T. Clark, of Denver, in voicing his protest. "This type of criminal is dangerous and should not be given any consideration for freedom."

"I am opposed to any short cut to pardons or paroles for criminals of that type," said Judge James C. Starkweather.

Mrs. James E. Shannon, of Denver, widow of a Denver policeman slain by Albert Dorchak, one of the prisoners on the list of eligibles, said she would "do everything I can to prevent the murderer of my husband from being freed."

Earl Wettengel, district attorney, and Judge C. C. Sackmann added their opposition to permitting some of the suggested convicts to be used in the experiments.

Mrs. E. A. Mills Given Divorce From Banker

Reno, Nev., March 26 (AP).—A divorce from Wilson Waldingham Mills, Detroit banker, was granted to Mrs. Elizabeth Avery Mills at a private trial here today.

She charged extreme cruelty. The court approved a property agreement, providing for custody of their three children.

Events, Figures of 20 Years Ago Go on Air in Post News Drama

Largest Company of Radio Actors to Perform Here Presents "Headlines of Yesterday;" Next Performance Scheduled Monday.

The Washington Post of 20 years ago went to press again last night with a company of 50 players and the National Broadcasting Co. Station WMAL reporting and editing the day's news.

It was the first of a series of radio dramas, through which life two decades old—its songs, its dress, its principal figures—will come into existence from the yellow pages of the newspaper's files.

Albert B. Fall addressed the Senate again. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray told the House just how tough was a Texas Ranger. The Texas Rangers themselves had ideas of their own on just how far a Mexican bandit should be permitted to go, and were expressing those ideas. And a few society liberals in the Nation's Capital were beginning to look upon the tango as something less than downright immoral.

After two months of preparation, digging through files, script writing and auditioning and rehearing, men and events from the past are being put on the air from a Washington radio station for the first time.

Record Number in Studio.

Assembled in WMAL's studios was the largest company of performers to present a radio program in the Capital. In addition to a cast of 50 actors and actresses, a six-piece orchestra linked the events with music and sound technicians provided appropriate backgrounds.

Scripts for the series are being written by Shannon Allen, Washington radio playwright.

The contemporary press furnishes his material, authenticated from the Congressional Record and other source documents with the aid of Dr. George F. Bowerman, public librarian.

Intimate biographical accounts are searched for hints on pecularities of voice and mannerisms of speech of now dead public figures and members of the company are coached in them. A library of the recordings of living personages is being collected.

Have Stellar Cast.

Casting the sketches and coaching of players is being done by John Shellie. Preparation of musical arrangements and orchestra rehearsals is handled by Rudolf Schramm, well-known Washington musician. Studio direction is in charge of Fritz Balger.

Washington's best dramatic talent has been assembled by Allen and Shellie for the company. It includes Anne Ives, Dennis Connell, Stanley Simmons, George Finger, Ruth Hartrick, Margaret Frawley, Hall Hopper, Justin Winkle, Laura Barrett, Helen Ryan, Howard Whitfield, Marjorie Silvers, all well known in Washington radio and dramatic circles. The juvenile members of the company are Banks Murray, jr., Phyllis Warner, Bob D'Orsay and "Baby" Gay Hesse.

The second of the "Headlines of Yesterday" programs will be presented next Monday night, under auspices of The Washington Post, from WMAL.

Winter Takes Final Fling Over Midwest

Chicago, March 26 (U.P.).—Winter today took what weather forecasters said probably would be its final fling at the Middle West, covering the area with snow in one of the heaviest storms of the season.

The low pressure area which brought the snow to the Great Lakes region moved up from the south. Rain was general from Kansas City to Columbus, Ohio, with snow in the region northward.

Tornado Rips New Orleans

400 Homeless, Scores Hurt as Storm Moves East.

New Orleans, March 26 (AP).—A densely-populated area of modest homes in lower New Orleans was converted into a mass of twisted wreckage within the twinkling of an eye today when a tornadic wind dipped down and scattered houses, automobiles and furniture over a two-mile sector.

Similar but less severe disturbances struck Lafayette Parish, Southwest Louisiana, and Tallulah, Northeast Louisiana. The New Orleans Weather Bureau reported a 75-mile wind moving eastward over Mississippi.

Twelve persons were hurt here, including eight women and an infant. Hospital attendants said some of them might die.

Scores were injured less critically.

Approximately 400 were left homeless.

All-Wagnerian Program To End Lenten Services

An all-Wagnerian program will comprise tomorrow's final musical meditation of the Lenten season at 5 p. m. in Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S streets northwest.

Dr. Albert W. Harned, organist, assisted by Miss Irene Koehl, soprano, and Miss Jessie Masters, contralto, will render Walther's "Preislied" from Die Meistersinger; "Liebestod," from Tristan and Isolde; Elizabeth's "Gebet" from Tannhauser and the grail scene from Parsifal.

Good Friday night at 8 o'clock there will be a musical service at the church, during which selections from Gounod's "The Redemption" will be sung by the choir of 50 voices. Dr. Harned will be conductor. Representative Clifford A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and Justin Howe will be guest soloists.

Jean Harlow Must Reply To Bern Estate Suit

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—Judge Thomas C. Gould ruled today Jean Harlow, movie actress, must answer in ten days the suit filed against her in behalf of the late Dorothy Millette to recover a share of the estate of Miss Harlow's husband, Paul Bern, film executive.

The judge overruled Miss Harlow's demurrer to the complaint of the public administrator of Sacramento County, who brought the action in behalf of the woman he contended was once the common-law wife of Bern.

Jury Work Slows Trial of Kirwan For Killing at Sea

New York, March 26 (AP).—Extreme care in the selection of a jury slowed the trial today of Andrew Donaldson Kirwan, accused of murder on the high seas.

The entire first day of the trial in the court of Federal Judge Robert A. Inch was given over to questioning of prospective jurors. Many failed to qualify in the face of the Government's insistence that they be not prejudiced against the death penalty.

The defense indicated it might seek to prove Kirwan was intoxicated at the time of the slaying and unaccountable.

Kirwan, a tall, thin youth with an affliction that causes his muscles to twitch, is charged with mortally stabbing Gilliam Sessoms aboard the S. S. President Garfield at sea last February 10.

In court to lend Kirwan comfort was his mother, Mme. Paul Dubonnet, 39, the former Jean Nash, dancer, known as the best dressed woman in Europe.

Pope Names Bishops For Indiana and Iowa

Vatican City, March 26 (AP).—Pope Pius today named Mgr. Elmer J. Ritter bishop of Indianapolis, and Mgr. Gerald T. Bergan, former vicar general of Peoria, Ill., as Bishop of Des Moines, Iowa.

Mgr. Ritter was the auxiliary to the late Bishop Joseph Chertrand, of Indianapolis.

Roosevelt Praised By Pope for Aid Extended Jobless

Vatican City, March 26 (AP).—Pope Pius praised President Roosevelt's work for the unemployed today in a private audience granted Bishop Henry P. Rohlman, of Davenport, Iowa.

The pontiff told Bishop Rohlman the President was engaging in a Christian effort and said he was pleased with a report of results of this work.

His Holiness said, also, that he was appreciative of Mr. Roosevelt's work in getting freedom of religion for Americans in Russia.

The Pope showed himself well acquainted with agricultural affairs, said Bishop Rohlman. The bishop was told by Pope Pius that he was fortunate to be located in an agricultural area, where, he said, people have so many advantages over residents of large cities.

Virginia Grants Month More To File Taxes

Change in Exemptions on Income Levy Brings Extension.

Richmond, March 26 (AP).—Virginians will have an additional month this year in which to file their State income tax returns, but they will pay more and there has been no change in the payment deadline, December 5, the State Department of Taxation announced today.

In view of changes in the exemptions, which were lowered under the Peery tax program passed by the 1934 General Assembly, the department today announced that returns are to be filed by July 1 instead of June 1.

The change, made for this year only, was authorized out of consideration for both the taxpayers and the tax department.

Forms Already Issued.

So far as the taxpayers are concerned, it was thought that lowering of the exemptions to $2,400 for married couples, $1,000 for single persons and $200 for each dependent would necessitate the revamping of figures in some instances, and the extra month was given with that in mind.

The tax department already had issued its forms on the old exemption basis, and some of them had been filled out and returned. These now will have to be changed, since the new provisions are retroactive to apply to 1933 incomes, the returns on which have to be made by July 1, and the payments to be made by December 5, 1934.

Stickers to Be Sent Out.

State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett said "stickers" have been printed and will be sent to the various localities to be pasted over the superseded provisions. The stickers carry the new provisions.

In cases where returns already have been filed, the tax commission said the best plan would be to refile a corrected return. It will be permissible, he said, for the local tax authorities to correct the old forms with the authorization, and information of the taxpayer.

CWA Surveys Kanawha River Homestead Site

Third Subsistence Project in West Virginia Being Pushed.

Charleston, W. Va., March 26 (Spl.).—William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, has announced plans are being pushed by the State unemployment relief administration to establish another large subsistence homestead project in West Virginia, similar to the first one at Arthurdale, in Preston County, and the one now under way in the Tygarts Valley between Elkins and Mill Creek.

The new project is to be somewhere in the Kanawha Valley region and Government representatives already have inspected sites on the river between Charleston and its junction with the Ohio River at Point Pleasant. David B. Traxler, of the State relief administration, is preparing a report of the survey.

The Kanawha project is another step in the program for rehabilitation of stranded families in West Virginia, most of whom are coal miners, Beehler said. It is one of three phases of the new relief system to supplant the CWA March 31.

The Kanawha project calls for a rural village with 150 to 300 homes. The Federal Government is to purchase the land and erect homes. Tenants will pay a nominal leasing charge, devoting part of their time to PWA work and part to farming.

Live Wire Cited In Injury Suit

Maryland Couple Also Ask $30,000 Damages for Auto Crash.

Westminster, Md., March 26 (Spl.).—Two suits have been filed in the Circuit Court here and later removed to Frederick County.

The Potomac Edison Co. has been sued by Dorry R. Zepp, formerly of Copperville, this county, who is now undergoing treatment for injuries received when he contacted a live wire while crossing a field. He alleges the company negligently allowed the wire to lie on the ground.

Dr. Lewis Woodward, this city, and his son, John Woodward, are sued by Fannie L. Rea and Walter N. Rea. Mrs. Rea says she was seriously injured when a car owned by the physician and driven by his son struck her machine. She asks $25,000 and her husband seeks $5,000.

Entries Opened for Annual Virginia Literature Contest

Richmond, March 26 (AP).—Virginia authors and poets were requested yesterday by officials of the Richmond Academy of Arts to obtain the prospectus and entry blanks for the third annual literature contest of Virginia authors.

Entries will be accepted up until April 5, from all native and resident authors.

Nationally known authors will serve as readers for the contest and will select the outstanding work to receive the Richmond Academy of Arts award, which will be accompanied by a small monetary prize. Manuscripts must be delivered or mailed to the academy on or before April 10.

Miss Hattie Belle Gresham, chairman of the literature committee, said that any number of poems might be submitted, provided the total number of lines did not exceed 200.

Short stories must not be less than 2,000 words or more than 5,000 and not more than three stories will be accepted.

Announcement of the personnel of the jury will be made later.

Carroll County Likely to Pass $175,000 Issue

School Bonds Held Needed to Remedy Conditions Now Unsatisfactory.

Westminster, Md., March 26 (Spl.).—Local civic organizations, sponsors of the $175,000 Carroll County school bond issue to be voted on next Tuesday, predict its passage, although all previous proposals to bond the county have been rejected.

Proceeds of the issue, if it is carried, will construct a high school building here.

Westminster sadly lacks educational facilities, say proponents of the bond issue, pointing out that "1,050 pupils are housed in 9 buildings, practically every one of which either is unfit for use or can be used only temporarily under prevailing conditions."

The committee responsible for the referendum announced this week that the movement had the indorsement of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, the Women's Club, the Homemakers Club, the Civic League, the Gavel Club, the American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary.

Although Carroll County in the past has discouraged bond issues, backers claim that in this case politics have been eliminated.

The legislative bill authorizes a referendum provides that the construction of the building, together with the letting of contracts incidental thereto, shall be carried out by a committee of "nonpartisan, nonpolitical, hard-headed, able business men."

Carroll County now has one of the lowest banded debts of any county in the State, the residents in most cases preferring the "pay as you go plan" of financing public improvements. In 1922 a bond issue of $700,000 for road building and school construction was turned down, and again in 1927 the people voted against asking $600,000 for similar purposes.

New Market, Va., March 26 (Spl.).—When CWA activities in Shenandoah County cease Saturday, dealers in the county will have been paid nearly $7,000 less for materials and supplies than was originially allotted.

Administrator H. G. Chandler states that to date $10,495 has been paid local dealers and that $6,900 remains on hand.

Chandler said all CWA activities in the county, including partially finished street work and sewer extensions in the various towns, county sanitation work, a sewage disposal plant in Woodstock, and airport construction here, will cease March 31.

New Market's airport project, which was started March 12, was understood to have been scheduled for completion. According to Chandler, however this work will terminate with other projects.

Resolutions passed by the Rockingham Game and Fish Association oppose any change.

Representatives of the Shenandoah County Association recently met with members of the Rockingham County Association and it was agreed that bass season in the valley section should open July 1, as now, instead of being changed to June 15, as is effective east of the Blue Ridge.

Work Halted to Readjust Cost and Funds.

Woodstock, Va., March 26 (Spl.).—Building of a local high school plant, the preliminary work of which has been going on under CWA, will be halted pending readjustment of the cost with the amount of money available.

After authorizing construction of the plant and directing the school board to obtain a $32,000 loan from the State literary fund, the board of supervisors applied to the PWA for $16,000.

Upon opening of the bids, however, the supervisors found the lowest bid more than $6,000 in excess of funds available. At a recent joint meeting of the school board and supervisors the State architect was directed to make changes in the specifications which bring the cost within the limits of available funds. New bids then will be asked.

The request was for the following increases: Schedule 1 (residential service rate), schedule 2 (residential service rate) and schedule 3 (commercial service rate), all to be raised from 6.5 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 100 kilowatt hours, to 6.75 cents.

The three schedules carried a 7-cent rate prior to January 16, when the commission, with the consent of the company, ordered the rate slashed by approximately $366,000.

Baltimore Traffic Lights Give Warning Before Burning Out

Baltimore, March 26 (Spl.).—New electric-light bulbs being installed in the automatic traffic signals here give a week's notice before they burn out.

Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither today announced that the new type of bulb has been generally adopted by the police traffic division in all of the 650 automatic traffic control standards. Already new bulbs have been installed in 328 standards.

"They are known as the 'two-filament light,' and were invented by a Baltimorean, Charles Adler, jr.," Gaither said today. Adler is an inventor of traffic regulation devices.

"In the past," Gaither continued, "the efficiency of the electric semaphores has been impaired from time to time by darkening of one or more of the colored lights, resulting when the bulb burned out.

"The new type of bulb gives warning by casting a shadow in a corner of the lens.

"We have found that the new bulb consumes only about one-quarter of the electricity of the older bulbs. The use of the new bulb will result in a saving of approximately $8,000 a year in the cost of current."

17 Fire Deaths Bring Virginia 'Homes' Probe

Catastrophe at Lynchburg Results in Transient Bureau Checkup.

Richmond, March 26 (AP).—An investigation of all transient homes in Virginia under the transient bureau of the State organization of the Emergency Relief Administration was ordered today by William A. Smith, Virginia administrator.

Smith, who had just returned from the Lynchburg Transient Home fire, fatal to 17 or more men, said the investigation was to ascertain to what extent these buildings are protected against such disasters.

The investigation was placed under direction of Col. William Meyers, director of the State safety work for the VERA and CWA.

Transient homes are located in Richmond, Norfolk, Bristol, Charlottesville, Danville, Fredericksburg, Lynchburg, Roanoke and Staunton.

In addition, there are two large transient camps, one in former Blackstone Military Academy buildings, at Blackstone, and the other in an old summer resort building at Yellow Sulphur Springs, in Montgomery County.

A third camp, for Negro transients, now is being placed near Chatham.

Transient headquarters here reported the bureaus throughout the State took care of 3,428 males and 389 females in February.

Fire Prober to Make Report in Capital

Lynchburg, Va., March 26 (AP). After a 48-hour study of the transient bureau fire, which so far has claimed 17 lives, Alan Johnstone, field representative of FERA, decided to end his investigation today and return to Washington to make a full report to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

All but two bodies had been identified this morning. Two colored men died late yesterday.

They were Mannie Taylor, of Glen Ellen, Va., and John Trapp, of Detroit.

At least four others are regarded as likely to die.

Bodies of James Alexander Green, white, and James Miller, colored, were sent to relatives in Charlotte yesterday. The body of Jack Swift, Prosperity, W. Va., is to be sent to Beckley, W. Va., today.

On his way to Washington, Johnstone will pause in Richmond to discuss the disastrous blaze with Gov. Peery.

Virginia Scans Would-Be Rum Sellers' Records

Care in Issuing Licenses to Be Exercised, Says Norfolk Chief.

Norfolk, Va., March 26 (Spl.). Beer and wine shop owners in Virginia are wearing saintly expressions because Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the State liquor control board, today declared only "the good" will be issued licenses to sell these drinks in Virginia.

"There will be no exceptions," Tyler said, "and the purpose of the board will be to examine closely into each application so there will be no necessity for exercising the power to revoke licenses. In many instances, where the applicant is known, there will be no delay, but where the objection or protest is made, the matter will also be gone into thoroughly."

Chairman Tyler advised applicants for wholesale as well as retail licenses that the board's printed form of application, which is expected to be ready for distribution Thursday, must be used in seeking permits, and that the application, properly filled out with evidence of publication of the 10-day notice required by law, must be accompanied by a certified check for the annual license fee.

More than 300 notices of application have been given in Norfolk, and more than 600 in Richmond. It is estimated that the board will have from 2,500 to 3,000 applications for beer and wine licenses on hand when it takes up the work of issuing the licenses April 2, ten days after the law became effective.

2 More Captured After Jail Break

Phillipi, W. Va., March 26 (Spl.). Barbour County officers today reported recapture of two more of the four penitentiary convicts who tunneled their way out of the county jail here last Wednesday.

They are Edward Streets, 49, of Laurel Creek, and Ralph Stewart, 38, of Bear Mountain, who were trailed to Thomas, Tucker County, where they were found hopping a train for Baltimore.

Albert Rosier, 25, of Bear Mountain, was captured recently at Grafton, and his uncle, William Rosier, 45, also of Bear Mountain, is at large.

Father's Home-Coming Ended In Lynchburg Fire Tragedy

Lynchburg, Va., March 26 (AP). Saturday was to have been homecoming day for James Marshall Roberts, 50-year-old victim of the Federal Transient Bureau fire.

Roberts, a former Lynchburger, turned wanderer several years ago. For one or two years at a time he would go away without sending word of any kind to his young daughter, Mrs. Aubrey Grubbs, of Lynchburg.

He had been away three years this last time. Friday he registered at the transient bureau, presumably expecting to search for his daughter the next day. He was not sure of her address. Saturday morning came the fire and Roberts perished along with other victims.

His daughter did not know that he was in town. She picked up a paper yesterday and read the list of the dead.

Her eyes met the name, James Roberts, and the address, Rock Hall, Md. She remembered that her father had been working on a farm near Baltimore. Mrs. Grubbs' husband and another man who knew Roberts were positive in their identification at the morgue.

175 Miles of Virginia Roads to Be Lined With Trees.

Richmond, March 26 (Spl.).—The Garden Clubs of Virginia opened their annual spring dogwood-planting campaign here today when they formally requested the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce to aid in influencing Virginia civic organizations to plant dogwood in public parks.

H. J. Neale, landscape engineer of the Virginia Department of Highways, has advised the Garden Clubs that 175 miles of highways on the primary system of the State will be beautified this season by the planting of dogwood.

Mr. Neale said: "Private individuals interested in planting dogwood on the highways are urged to furnish nursery-grown stock or native-collected stock that has been transplanted for one or two years. It takes from one to two years after transplanting for the trees to overcome the shock."

Chairman of the dogwood committee for the Garden Clubs this year is Mrs. Allan Perkins, of the University of Virginia.

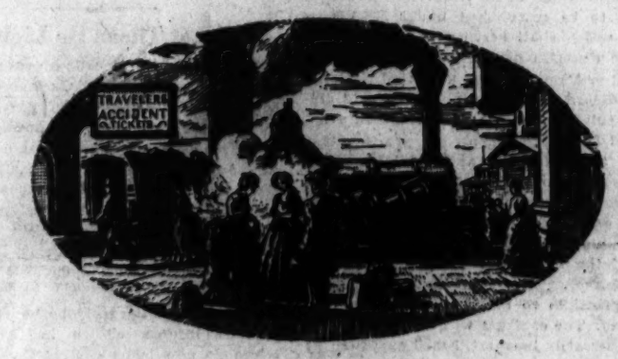
THE TRAVELERS



Progress of 70 Years

SEVENTY years ago, on April 1, 1864, the first accident insurance policy in America was issued by The Travelers Insurance Company, Hartford, Connecticut.

WHILE traveling in England in 1859, James G. Batterson, the founder of The Travelers, had conceived the idea of the Company. His home city, Hartford, was already famed as a center of fire and life insurance but in England he was offered a form of insurance of which he, with all of his insurance associations, had never heard—an accident ticket.

Instantly, he wondered why America shouldn't have a company offering similar insurance. As he rode on the English train and enjoyed the satisfaction of the insurance protection which the ticket provided—a substantial amount that had cost a few pence—he wondered why accident insurance shouldn't cover all the accidental hazards of life, as well as those of travel, and why policies shouldn't be issued for a year instead of merely for a day or a few days.

Returning to the United States he found the business outlook decidedly unpropitious for his new project. He decided to wait.

But in 1863 he wearied of longer postponing his plans. He recognized that uncertainties always existed and determined to go ahead. The Travelers Insurance Company was chartered and issued its first insurance contract April 1, 1864.

TO its pioneer line of accident insurance The Travelers soon added life insurance, later liability. Through the creation of The Travelers Indemnity Company the various casualty insurance lines that cover loss of property were taken up: burglary, robbery, theft, steam boiler, plate glass, collision and machinery insurance; and, later, through The Travelers Fire Insurance Company, fire, windstorm and inland marine forms of insurance were added.

Besides being the pioneer in accident insurance, The Travelers Companies have been the first to insure automobiles. The first life insurance policy providing an income to the beneficiary instead of lump sum settlement was a Travelers contract.

The funds entrusted to The Travelers Companies have been invested conservatively. In 1933, $27,400,000 of U. S. Government bonds were added, making a total of $112,200,000, in addition to cash of over $18,000,000. The assets of The Travelers Companies are distributed as follows:

	Dec. 31, 1933
U. S. Government Securities	16.1%
Other Public Securities	12.3
Railway Securities	10.7
Public Utility Securities	10.5
Other Securities	5.6

Loans on Company's Policies	17.7
Cash on Hand and in Banks	2.7
Interest Accrued	1.4
Premiums Outstanding and Deferred	3.9

After seventy years of service to the American people, in good times and bad, The Travelers offers the benefits of wide experience, ample resources, and complete insurance service throughout the United States and Canada.

Independent Artists.

Americans have always been loath to appreciate their own artists. Only within recent years has the artist living in this country had any encouragement to make use of the material that lies around him. In architecture the American spirit was first felt, beginning as far back as the world's fair in 1893. Despite many obstacles the architectural radicals fought against the academies and eventually, as New York all too well makes clear, won their victory for a native art. In the realm of painting and drawing it has taken longer, but since the day, some eight years ago, when Thomas Benton was discovered in an odd corner of an architectural exhibition in New York, the native mural artist, at least, has come to the fore. In other expression than murals, attention has of late increasingly focussed on the American-bred and American-trained artist.

Next month Washington will be the scene of a truly American art exhibit. The work of those who have been painting and sketching under the auspices of the Public Works of Art Projects will be placed on view. Hidden now in a few small rooms in the Treasury Building are murals, frescoes, paintings, etchings and drawings of all sorts. Some of them are of little account. But the greater number are proof of the excellent standard of work which the United States Government is getting at a very small cost. For the most part the paintings are of American subjects, ranging from apple venders on a New York street corner to an old farm yard well. But it is impossible to convey any adequate sense of their almost infinite variety.

The outstanding feature of this huge collection, now in the winnowing process, is the thoroughly native atmosphere that hovers around the paintings. From every region have come excellent works that are not of European derivation, that have not the mark of Paris on them, but are as wholeheartedly Virginia, New York or Texas, as the tidewater, the East Side or the plains. They are often as brutal as the life they depict, but they are also as independent as the land which gave them birth.

"Brake On Recovery."

The American Bar Association has issued a report recommending a number of changes in the Securities Act of 1933, "in order to cure some of the obvious defects and to remove the brake on recovery." The investigating committee that prepared the report believes that a complete revision of the law should be undertaken, with the aid of business men, bankers and lawyers, "familiar with practical problems." The immediate task, however, is to make the present law practicable, and to eliminate its major ambiguities, injustices and oppressive requirements. In other words, the aim is to provide for reasonable control over new issues and protection of investors, not to maintain an obstacle to new financing.

When the act first became operative, the impediment to revival of the capital issues market which it offered did not appear to be so significant as it does now. It resembled a dam erected across a dry stream bed, whose power to check the normal flow of water was not realized. But ample evidence is at hand to show that the Securities Act is at present a substantial barrier to the flotation of new issues. With railroad equipment trust issues, for example, selling at abnormally high prices and other high-grade securities more or less in proportion, it is apparent that a strong pent up investment demand exists which, with moderate encouragement, would provide effective outlet for new offerings of sound issues.

With the bulk of the unemployed attached to the heavy industries and acting as a serious drag upon the consuming branches of business, restoration of the capital market is vital to recovery. The facts are recognized by economists, business men and industrial advisers of the Administration. The cause of the paralysis of investment activity is so plain as to lend color to the charge that current legislation actually seeks to subordinate recovery to social changes of a revolutionary character. Whatever the motives of those who are responsible for the act governing new issues, its effects can not be other than revolutionary, unless it is radically revised. For under its provisions the Government will be forced to take over an increasingly large amount of financing that ordinarily would be done by private agencies.

The American Bar Association is in an ideal position to view the operation of the Securities Act objectively. And the reception accorded the amendments which it suggests will go far to provide a test of the real objective of the recovery program. If undermining of the present economic system is sought, the Securities Act provides an ideal instrument of destruction, since its retention will force the Government to take over the business of providing capital. If recovery is the aim, with preservation of existing economic institutions, the private investment market must be assisted by the simple process of amending the present stifling law.

A Notable Settlement.

Not merely impartial, but also admirably constructive, is the technique which President Roosevelt has followed in the settlement accepted by both parties to the automotive industry dispute. That settlement is, as we observed yesterday, essentially only a truce. Instead of attempting a rigid formula of solution it leaves to the future the working out of details prerequisite to the achievement of real industrial peace. But that is one reason why the settlement bears the impress of real statesmanship. It lays down principles to which no exception can be taken. And it places on the industry, where the task belongs, the duty of translating these principles into constructive machinery.

The issue which threatened a paralyzing strike was not whether labor organization is sanctioned by the Administration. That was affirmatively answered by Section 7a of the Recovery Act. The issue was the more debatable question of the happy medium between a form of organization enforced on management by an outside agency, and a form enforced on its employes by management. Of the magnitude of this unsolved problem Gen. Johnson, as National Recovery Administrator, has long been conscious. The solution which he and the President have found, with the approval of both sides, is justly hailed as a notable constructive step.

In the first place, a definition of far-reaching import has been given to Section 7a, that ambiguous paragraph which has been invoked alike as a charter for company unionism and for trade-union penetration under the A. F. of L. This definition denies trade unionism the presumptive right to organize "open shops." It therefore seems to insure defeat, or substantial modification, for the Wagner bill, which would outlaw company unions. On the other hand, the settlement gives definite guarantees to prevent discrimination against the penetration of trade unionism, if that is the form of organization freely chosen by the workers. The form of alleged coercion against which the A. F. of L. has most strongly protested is met by the provision that "no greater proportion of outside union employes than of other employes shall be laid off."

Another step forward, also contrary to the arbitrary philosophy of the Wagner bill, is the creation of a tripartite industrial board, to be established under NRA auspices, which shall serve as a court of appeal in disputes over the operation of the present settlement. The projected National Labor Board of the Wagner bill would create a political body, with membership appointed by the President.

The board for the automobile industry will be responsible to, but not appointed by, the President and with its representation of one employer, one employe and one neutral representative will sit at the headquarters of the industry and be a permanent part thereof. Extension of this decentralizing principle to other industries may be expected. The contrast with the centralized, and necessarily inexpert, board projected by the Wagner bill is pronounced.

By a single move, therefore, the Administration has turned back from the dubious line of regimentation, on which the Wagner bill is based, and pointed the way along the constructive line of supervised cooperation. Not the least significant feature of the settlement is the relative ease with which, if successful in operation, it could be extended to other industries.

In the attack on this acute problem the Government has done its part admirably. Whether or not the solution proves successful will now depend on the industry itself. Both management and labor have shown a constructive attitude in approving the principles invoked. It is now up to them to carry the same spirit into the difficult field of detail.

Our Immigration Policy.

Immigration has shrunk to such a small volume that it can not be considered a major problem even in these days of widespread unemployment. During several periods recently the number of aliens leaving our shores has exceeded the number coming in. The immigration law was found to be sufficently flexible to exclude all newcomers who might be added to the ranks of our unemployed.

A committee appointed by Secretary Perkins to study immigrant problems finds no reason for substantial amendment of the law. "It is unthinkable," the committee says, "that with millions still unemployed we should open our doors to aliens who would be leaving a refuge in their own country to seek work here." Consequently vigorous enforcement of the immigration law is recommended.

In some instances, however, the committee believes that unnecessary hardships are imposed upon aliens already in this country. Members of the same family are frequently separated by quota restrictions. Occasionally a breadwinner is deported, leaving his family, some of whom may be American citizens, to the mercy of charitable organizations. Aliens who have been legally admitted, who have established homes here and are in the process of assimilation as American citizens are often subject to discrimination, especially in seeking employment.

Deportation is condign punishment for aliens who have abused our hospitality. The committee believes that alien criminals should be prosecuted with special vigor. But in the case of an individual who has family responsibilities, whose deportation would involve community as well as individual hardships, a larger measure of discretion is desirable. Likewise the committee believes that it is unwise to deport an alien merely for illegal entry if he has been in the country for many years, established a home and proved himself to be a desirable citizen in his community.

Clumsy deportation machinery is sharply criticized. In some instances the same official has served as investigator, prosecutor and judge at some stage in the deportation process. The committee quite properly considers this procedure to be intolerable. Deportation hearings ought to be conducted before judicial officers whose positions are comparable to judgeships.

In making these recommendations the committee has in mind the welfare of the United States as well as the immigrants. We have about 7,000,000 aliens in this country. Their respect for American ideals and institutions is measured, to a large extent, by the fairness of the Government in dealing with them. Cultivation of their good will is the first essential in any comprehensive policy of assimilation.

A Lesson From Maryland.

Gov. Ritchie's address on Sunday, when the State of Maryland accepted a cross on St. Clements Island as a symbol of the beginning of religious tolerance in this country, was far above the level of the average ceremonial speech. Although the Governor payed proper tribute to the greatness of the Calverts, he did not gloss over that period when complete religious tolerance no longer existed in Maryland; when the State had fallen under the same Puritanical beliefs as kept Roger Williams' Rhode Island colony from becoming a seat of true religious liberty.

Under the leadership of the three Calverts, Catholics, Protestants and Jews alike were allowed to worship their own God and in their own established way. As Mr. Ritchie points out, the records reveal that those who were prosecuted for violating the dictum of the Calverts were certain Catholics who denied the others the right to enjoy their faith. But the most significant moment in this portion of the history of Maryland came with the passage in 1649 of the Act of Toleration. With its passage there arrived "the first break in religious freedom in Maryland, because it excluded non-Christians from its protection, and thus limited the complete religious freedom which existed under the Calverts."

There is a moral for today in this part of Gov. Ritchie's able recollection of his State's history. Maryland, by 1649, was already proud of its reputation as a center of tolerance and the Act of Toleration was passed to make law that which had previously been a tradition. The act, unfortunately, made possible that which it was designed to prevent. This lesson, it seems, is particularly trenchant today. It might well be taken to heart by those who see in much current legislation only the abuses which it is hoped to correct; not the danger of creating new abuses which did not exist before.

"Let There Be Light."

During the past decade no effort has been spared to popularize the sciences, and, except the young science of psychology, no science has seemed so perilously popularized as astronomy—the oldest of them all. Newspapers, motion pictures, the radio: Each lent itself to make astronomy, if not commonplace, at least familiar. Consequently, there were scientists and theologians who agreed in fearing the process might defeat its own ends by a surfeit of wonders.

That fear must surely be lessened by the popular interest shown in the 200-inch telescope now being cast at Corning, N. Y. On trains and in trolley cars yesterday one saw people of every sort turn to the columns reporting and explaining astronomy's new implement. Here, after years of experiment, was an instrument to tell us whether the universe is really expanding; here was a mechanism to solve the riddle of the Virgo nebulae!

Man is young, if you judge him by scientific standards; and, if you judge him by his love of discovery, man will long remain young. Tell any layman a new star has appeared, and at once he imaginatively shares with its discoverer all the sensations of that

"Watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken."

Say, as these scientists say of the Corning telescope, that a glass has been achieved to capture rays which, though new to earth, were born 1,200,000,000 years ago—say that, and we will all remember, with the wonder with which we first heard it read, the origin of light recorded in Genesis. It will take more than a decade of "popularization" to dull in man, the seeker after marvels, that science of which the very essence is marvel.

And a lot of grandpas who had been laughing at our modern mild winters froze to death during this one.

Another example of unequal distribution is the way a woman puts on fat.

Trials of Mail Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Air Mail by Express" makes me wonder if you have a copy of the "History of the Railway Mail Service, a chapter in the history of Postal Affairs in the United States," published by the Government Printing Office—1885?

If past experience of the Postoffice Department with the various attempts by private parties to expedite the mail service to the detriment of Government promotion is any criterion, there will be a short shrift to private Air Mail Service as a competitive factor.

A study of the book will present to the reader all of the troubles of the Postoffice Department from its inception down to 1885 in transporting the mails and the effect of private express lines on Government transportation, and the methods used in handling this proposition.

The First Decade (1835 to 1845) is especially interesting respecting the problem of rail transportation of the mails. For one instance it is stated:

"May 10, 1839, it was ordered that the proposition of the railroad company to carry the mail on the route from Hamburg to Charleston, S. C., including the distance between the Charleston postoffice and the depot, for four years, at $200 a mile per annum, be accepted, the railroad being permitted to leave Charleston at any time between 6 and 7:30 a. m." (P-32).

This was the longest continuous line of railroad at this time in the United States—138 miles, Charleston to Hamburg, S. C.

Another quotation:

"September 18, 1839, an allowance was ordered to the Georgia Railroad of $200 per mile for service already performed."

These facts establish the rate paid for mails on railroads in the early period of railroad mail transportation, as an incentive for encouragement of a more speedy service than by other means available for such service. The passenger service over this route was at the rate of 5 cents a mile.

Brickbat for Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a time when many people, for the supposed benefit of the Nation as a whole, are being deprived of their Constitutional rights and started on the first stages of the regimentation which the Administration plans ultimately to impose upon us, the great moguls of organized labor are permitted to toy with the welfare of every one in these United States. With nothing more at stake than the rehabilitation of certain dying labor unions, William Green and his cohorts threaten a crisis which might conceivably lead to something akin to civil war. Mr. Green may not be aware of it, but the majority of the people are sick and tired of the arbitrary and unreasonable acts of his unions. They are beginning to feel that the Government, in connection with all the rest of its investigating and restraining, might just as well dig into the workings of the unions and learn how they spend the money collected from their members, the salaries paid to their officers, the extent of their lobbying tactics, &c.; also, that all unions should be placed under the same Governmental restrictions and control that are being imposed upon industry.

We tell a grocer in Rochester that he no longer has the right to sell two quarts of milk and a loaf of bread for 18 cents. And yet Mr. Green presumes to retain the far greater right to call his disastrous strikes. SING JAYLEE.

Regulated Ice Cream.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We note, in the report of the Senate Committee on the District milk supply, that the only recommendation for legislation is, not toward the purpose of the investigation to lower milk prices and relieve the rigors of the Government pay cut while expanding the farmers' market for fluid milk, but toward higher prices for ice cream to make the pay cut more rigorous and curtail the farmers' market for cream.

It is the sheerest subterfuge to suggest that the ice cream sold in Washington has endangered the public health and must be "regulated." Even the excuse that such cream is sometimes bootlegged and sold as fluid cream does not excuse the health office for lack of vigilance nor relieve it of the necessity for future vigilance, for no one pretends that the District Health Office can or will bar all cream that has not been produced on local, inspected farms. If the price were not so high as to constitute a severe hardship on the consumer and seriously curtail consumption, local farms could not furnish enough of such cream, and there is no possible reason why they should.

Politically Speaking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing amuses me more than some of the Representatives sent to Washington. For votes they will help undermine their own country. I have learned it from the time I landed in this country in 1897. It did not take me long to know, politically speaking, that I was not in a free country. But I knew and understood the American flag and how you got it. I knew that the people of America were not living under a political flag, so I passed the politician up for what he had to say to me.

There is a vast difference between a politician and a statesman. I am making a charge that a politician will sell his country, and he did. You had to go to war for that insult. Mind you, a foreigner coming to this country asking for special privileges, and they got it from the American Representatives. They formed the German-American Alliance in America. For what? The politician was after the vote. He did not have brains enough to know that he was mortgaging his own country to a foreigner. Any way to get the vote in America. That is his scheme. We have paid dearly for that. How they like to be paid for their patriotism!

For 12 long years the American junkers were ruling this country. They tried their dardnest to put this country in the hole. Now, the present legion commander is willing to wreck this country. He says, "Give me the politician and his corruption and we will get the bonus." Mr. Soldier Man, I would never sell my vote to a politician.

On Class Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with a great deal of pleasure the letters in The Post, but when it comes to soldiers' pay one would think that our soldiers were the poorest paid in the world and the worst treated. When good people in 48 States are in desperate straits, it is no time to pay a bonus. We all want soldiers and civilians cared for on an equal basis. We should have a National old-age pension.

We have always had too much class legislation. Let us treat all alike. Special privileges are doomed as the people are "fed up."

Starting Point for Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What were those promises made by the President during his campaign? The writer being a soldier on the honor roll of the Government for disability in line of duty was refused a pension due to provisions of the economy act. This was, it seems, a scheme to maintain the credit of the United States Government. But while there is a saving of more than $400,000,000 on the soldiers, they spend billions of dollars for other "useless" projects.

Handkerchiefs.

Of the sophisticated spectators who in this city watched the exposure of superstition which forms the substance of Elmer Greensfelder's play, "Broomsticks," not a few have felt compassion for the benightedness of those who put faith in the hex doctor and at their next contract game have ceremoniously sat on their handkerchiefs with no thought of benightedness. Superstition is indeed the child of ignorance, but observation of its ritual is often a mere matter of habit; it may be a survival from the nursery, a tribute of remembrance paid to early association, says the New York Sun.

To woo luck at cards by sitting on one's handkerchief is a widespread practice. In that treasury of strange beliefs, "Kentucky Superstitions," published in 1920 by the Princeton Press, those indefatigable collectors, the Thomases, report it as a familiar expedient to "break bad luck" in that State. Here are some examples:

"Make a lovers' knot of a handkerchief and pull the ends (each end being named?); the end that stays in most tightly shows the one that loves you the best." "Put your handkerchief on the growing wheat at night; in the morning rise and get the handkerchief before sunrise; on it you will find the initials of the man you will marry." "It brings good luck for a bride to carry another bride's handkerchief." "Use a red silk handkerchief for neuralgia." "If you find a wet handkerchief, you may know that all your tears have been shed and that you will live happily." "You will have good luck if you take a handkerchief, go backward, and throw it over your left shoulder into a wheat field." "To become a witch, go to a mountain top at dawn, shoot through a handkerchief at the rising sun, curse Jehovah three times, own the devil as your master; when you shoot through the handkerchief, blood will fall from it." This sign post on the road to sorcery is from the mountains.

One more handkerchief supernaturalism: "If there is enough rain on Easter Sunday to wet a pocket handkerchief, there will be a good crop year." This is a year to perplex the superstitious; under the New Deal good crops will be bad crops and bad crops will be good crops. Let the Dark Powers read the meaning of that prevalent superstition.

The Post Impressionist

"Happily Ever After"

Postoffice, Tuesday.

"You've known me intimately for five years," said Fraley. "I suppose you've known my father, by reputation, pretty much all your life—he's front-page news about twice a year; about once a year he's editorially eulogized. You must have wondered why I never speak of him, but you've had the decency not to ask. Now I'm going to tell you. I hate my father."

* * * *

"Mother and my father," he began, "had been married 19 years when I was 18, an only child. They seemed to worship me—quiet, old-fashioned people in a little old-fashioned college town. My father was as much the scholar then as he is now; his acquaintances were all fellow faculty members. You can judge how self-restrained New England mother was when I tell you her only close friend was the college president's gold-spectacled secretary, a Miss Sarah Tibbetts, about mother's age—getting into her forties—plain, quiet, busy, competent, like mother. But not nervous. Mother began to develop nerves. I don't mean temper. Just silent, depressed over nothing at all. My father was a prince about it.

* * * *

"Then one evening, when I came home from classes, mother called me into her bedroom, locked the door and said:

"'Your father wants me to divorce him.'

"Like that. I was knocked out—couldn't believe it.

"'Neither could I, at first,' mother answered. 'But it's so. I don't know what to do; I've nobody to consult. Sarah isn't qualified to advise me; you're too young. But I won't divorce him, or let him divorce me; I won't—ever! . . .'"

* * * *

"My father called me into his library. He said mother was crazy, had this unfounded fixed idea, was telling it all around that old-fashioned town and would ruin him at the college. He said:

"'I haven't the heart to have her committed to an institution; it would be too awful for her, too awful for me, and there you'd be with everybody knowing there was this taint of insanity in your blood. I had in the best alienists while you were away for the vacation, but they all agree: Nothing will disabuse her poor, sick mind. Just because she thinks I want to leave her, she won't leave me. She adores you; you'll have to induce her to divorce me—some harmless ground like incompatibility.'

"He said a lot more. It was easier to believe him—a man like him—than to believe mother's version. She really was neurasthenic, at least. Besides, it was a choice between divorce or asylum.

"Anyhow, when my father'd talked for hours, I promised him I'd try.

"He took off his horn-rimmed glasses, wiped his eyes, gripped my hand, kissed me and then looked me straight in the face:

"'And, my dear boy,' he said, 'I know it's unnecessary between you and me, but, just to go on record against the slightest breath of slander that some gossip in this college town might raise, I want to give you my word that I shall never remarry. I shall wait—wait patiently—for your mother's cure.'

* * * *

"Well, I managed it with mother. It took some doing, but I got her around to it at last. My father had been right; she adored me. Phew, it was a nasty job! It was all the worse because she was so silent. I had to do the talking. But I did it because I thought I was proposing what was best for her—because I loved mother.

"She went away and got the divorce. I was to spend my vacations with her.

* * * *

"Just before anybody knew anything about the divorce, my father resigned from our college to go to a big university in a big city. Between the two jobs, he was to have one of those European exchange professorships at Grenoble, I believe; some French-speaking university, anyhow.

"The night before he was to start for New York to sail, I happened to go into his library without knocking. He was addressing a hill of square envelopes from the directory of the university to which he was to return. There were a couple of boxes of engraved cards on the desk beside him.

"He tried to sweep the whole mess into a drawer when he looked up and saw me. Still, I managed to grab one of the cards.

"It was dated a month later from Grenoble, or Lausanne. Of course, it was an announcement of his marriage, at that place and on that date.

"This was all I saw—no name except his—before he grabbed the card back from me.

* * * *

"He started to splutter something. I wouldn't listen.

"I just walked out of the library. Out of the house, too.

* * * *

"I didn't see him before he sailed—lived at a frat house and kept my mouth shut. The wedding came off, over there in Europe, according to schedule. Father wasn't important enough in those days for the newspapers to publish much about it, and the big university in the big town, where his new job was waiting for him when he came back, wouldn't have minded anyway. That's exactly what he'd figured on.

"But when I'd read the three-line news of the wedding, I long-distanced mother. She said:

"'Yes, I knew it was Sarah. That day he broke the news to me—that he wanted me to divorce him, I mean—I asked her advice—the one woman, I told her, whose advice I could ask. Sarah said to me: 'But I'm the one woman that can't advise you because I'm the woman your husband wants to marry, and I want to marry your husband.'"

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

I WOULD give a pretty penny to have seen the twinkle in those friendly eyes of Mr. Roosevelt when he struck upon the phrase "social engineering" in his statement on the settlement of the threatened automobile strike. Nobody appreciates a joke more than he. No one is happier over an accomplishment.

I'll bet, not knowing, of course, that when this thought came to him he leaned back in his chair and roared.

BARGERON.

"I would like you to know," he said (meaning the people), "that in the settlement just reached in the automobile industry we have charted a new course in 'social engineering' in the United States."

* * * *

All that had been done, of course, was that he had prevented a threatened strike in the industry. There can be no minimizing of this, even if the outbreak comes later.

It was manifestly one of the major crises through which his Administration had gone. The life of his NRA was threatened. The employes were demanding that the law be carried out for them as well as it had been for industry. They had an undeniable case.

On the other hand, the industry was determined that their plants were not to be unionized. They talked privately of being determined first to close their plants.

For one, I could not see how Mr. Roosevelt could possibly get out of the hole. That he did in a way apparently satisfactory to both sides attests to his mediating capabilities.

There is no wonder that he felt exuberant in the end.

* * * *

And if it isn't exuberance when a man refers to the settlement of a threatened strike as "charting a new course in social engineering," then I misunderstand the moods of men.

We have been having strikes and threatened strikes and the settlement of them ever since labor was first organized. The settlement has always been referred to as that. This is the first time, to my knowledge, that it has ever been called "charting a new course in social engineering."

You know, there is no escaping the fact that there is downright poetry in this Administration. Everything they do, they give some pretty singing term. There is the "more abundant life" they have. Every one of them, those of the Administration, use it every time they make a speech. I don't think any of them know exactly what it means and certainly their auditors do not. But it is warming, it is promising, it has rhythm.

Now does it mean that the unemployed are to be returned to work? An unemployed person returning to work would certainly have a "more abundant life" than he had been having. There is, though, a connotation of something even better still in this term. And it is amazing how it has caught on. I have heard any number of people say: "I haven't the slightest idea of what is happening but somehow I have the feeling that out of this will come a 'more abundant life' for all of us."

For one thing, it has it all over the "full dinner pail" for beauty. That was a low-brow expression, I always thought.

* * * *

Now you mark my word that the phrase, "charting a new course in social engineering," will be picked up all over the country. I wouldn't be surprised if the automobile workers didn't take their cue from it and start to calling themselves "motor artisans" and, if they ever get that union, which I doubt, they may dub it a "guild."

We are living in better terminology these days. There can be no doubting that. There is a moving, animated spirit to the expressions which are handed down to us from on high, a rippling, rollicking, gay spirit.

In the case of "charting a new course in social engineering," I am satisfied that it was the spirit of happy accomplishment—and spring.

Lay-off Spared 40,000 Clerks

Postoffice Exempts Those in Third-Class Institutions.

Exemption of about 40,000 postal workers from Postmaster General Farley's furlough order, requiring workers in the field service to be furloughed without pay for four days during the remainder of the fiscal year, was announced last night by the Postoffice Department, according to the Associated Press.

The exemption applies to assistant postmasters at third-class postoffices; clerks at third-class postoffices, and to job cleaners receiving less than $720 a year.

The announcement also said that "the order in no way affects the employment or compensation of special delivery messengers."

The department explained that none of the workers affected by the ruling were in the classified service. Most of them work at the pleasure of the postmaster and are employed for varying periods of time.

There are 10,025 third-class postoffices.

Consumers Score Tax on Foreign Oil

Head of D. C. Clubwomen Among Protestants.

Vigorous protests against the proposed tax on oils of foreign origin were received yesterday by Senators from heads of numerous consumer groups, including Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Wiley said she could not speak for her federation, but said, "Personally, after consultation with experts, it seems to me placing revenue tax of 3 cents per pound on coconut and other imported oils will not force price of butter up, but will cause our people to forego the use of margarine."

She further emphasized that the proposed measure, if passed, would work a hardship because it threatens an increase in the price of soap, which, some estimate, could be as high as 50 per cent.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

WHEN, as a boy, I put my head close to the rug to get the proper and heart-filling perspective on a $2.48 "Overland Limited" rumbling up over a 39-cent tin switch, I dare say I was worshiping "The Locomotive God" as passionately as did William Ellery Leonard.

A few years and I thought time had disposed of that adoration. But yesterday I picked up a book called "Trains" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50)—and from here on you may, if you want, discount all I say. For Robert Selph Henry tapped that well of nostalgia and left me fair silly on the subject. Like the book? I had rather read it than eat, and did.

* * * *

"Trains" is a slim, quarto volume, chock full of photographs, which tells of the development of railroading in this country. When we know that the seed of the book grew from a talk before a boys' school, we can see where it stands. Honest enough to take the reader seriously, it explains the air-brake and the block system and the genealogy of the locomotive without an overdose of technicality. Historical in its outlines, it rambles around pleasantly—now telling of the first locomotive whistle in 1837 and now of the day in 1869 when Charles Crocker's Central Pacific coolies laid down 10 miles of track (a record never approached before or since). But there is no exhaustive treatment of railroad history. Nor of the vast subject of competition and regulation. Mr. Henry makes it a bow, and passes on to the topic of how a freight train is assembled and sent out on the line. If I call that infinitely more appealing, I must explain that I had only one train on the rug. My nostalgia has no dealings with railroad competition.

From Peter Cooper's "Tom Thumb," the first locomotive built in America (which lost a race with a horse on the B. & O. in 1830) to the Union Pacific Diesel drive streamline train recently constructed, Mr. Henry describes and pictures the "Iron Horse." That term, by the way, is no insulated figure of speech—even today the man who comes out of the round-house and takes charge of a locomotive to tune it up is called the "hostler." If you like locomotives, you will have a feast. Here, in picture and text, are all of them—Mogul and Decapod, Berkshire, Mountain, Mikado and Mallet. The largest of this last type run on the Virginian Railway; they have 20 drive wheels and can pull a train of 17,000 tons up a slight grade.

We learn about the first Pullmans, the first railway mail car (on the maiden trip of which, in 1862, worked a mail clerk named Fred Harvey—when he went into the cafe business he left something of a name), even the first recorded railroad wreck in 1833 (John Quincy Adams and Commodore Vanderbilt were in it, the latter injured). Terminals and signal towers, valve-chests and coupling pins, brakemen and train dispatchers, there's very little of the working technique of a railroad left unmentioned. Mr. Henry caps it off at the end with a list of freight car initials.

If you are partial to this sort of thing you'll like "Trains" very much indeed. Mr. Henry is an official of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway; he is also a recognized historian, author of "The Story of the Confederacy." Within his brief and simple limits he's done a superb job. The photographs alone would distinguish the book. I could wish it had a map of the country's main lines—although there's a pictorial historical map in the flyleaves. And I could wish the cover were better designed. Beyond these two little detractions, I have nothing but praise.

When Alphonse Daudet died in 1897, he had been suffering for 13 years from the constant and excruciating agony of locomotor ataxia. The world knew he took cures in the south of France, but the world did not know what he went through. Daudet would not even groan before his wife.

But through all that time he kept working. He wrote two further books on his immortal comic character, Tartarin of Tarascon. Four or five novels and books of short stories, two volumes of memoirs and six long plays followed before he died. An agony which paralyzed him and bent him double could not conquer him.

What he thought of himself and of his pain, set down in manuscript notes, lay undiscovered among his papers for 33 years. Now it appears in a little volume called "Suffering" (Yale University Press, $2), translated by Prof. Milton Garver, with a personal commentary by Daudet's last secretary.

"One learns by suffering," Daudet puts as his motto. He describes his pain, gives little pictures of the other patients at the baths, makes epigrams out of agony. To read his words is like touching a live wire. Their impact is unforgettable.

Saintsbury may be right when he called Daudet "the most lamentable failure of a great novelist that the latter nineteenth century produced." But the word "failure" is on the other side of the earth from Daudet as a man.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Last year, when I was staying at my favorite hotel in Augusta, Ga., Mary Roberts Rinehart, accompanied by her son, stayed there overnight on her automobile journey toward Florida. She had a genuine case of the flu, and the physician commanded her to remain in bed for a week, as she had a high temperature. But early the next morning, accompanied by her son and her temperature, she came downstairs, got into the car and continued her journey. All this was very natural. Apart from her skill in writing, her chief characteristic is courage. She spends every summer on a ranch in the Far West, and is undaunted by the numerous misadventures she has received from wild riding. During the World War she went alone into the most extraordinary places along the Western front in order to report correctly what was actually going on. She has an intense love of life and immense gusto in living it, with enough mental vitality for a dozen persons.

Her autobiography is one of the best books of this kind that I know. It is as exciting as any of her novels, and has the additional appeal of fact.

She never wrote as a child or young girl; only after her marriage. It is greatly to her credit that, although she knows by actual observation more about the horrible things in human depravity than almost any of our novelists who specialize in such material, she has made her books interesting without depending on such sensational features for attracting attention. For years she was a night nurse in the emergency wards of a great city hospital. Nothing more need be said concerning her knowledge of what life can be at its worst.

Her success has depended on the fact that her innumerable readers are sure that anything and everything she writes will be interesting. She knows good stories and knows how to tell them. Her mystery play, "The Bat," was one of the best. She was one of the first of our novelists to see that the surgeon was the most spectacular figure in modern life—more impressive than the Medicine Man ever was among the heathen—and in her novel, "K," she took him for her hero.

Her latest book, published this year, "The State Against Elinor Norton," is a murder story of an entirely new kind.

Turkish Women Lose Famed Harem Figures

Istanbul (U.P.).—Turkish feminine physique is changing from the plump, cushiony type suitable for the harem divan, to the wry, whippet-like form of the modern sports girl.

And it's all being done with the aid of "jerks," or as they are termed by the Turkish inspector general of physical education, "health and harmony movements."

Turkey has had a central school of Swedish gymnastics since 1926, and the government encourages mixed mass demonstrations all over the country on a set gymnastic holiday each year.

Crescent Place Home Sold to Eugene Meyer

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer have purchased the three-story and basement stone and brick residence at 1624 Crescent place northwest, from John Campbell White, now stationed at the American Embassy in Berlin. The transaction was handled through the office of Story & Co.

Mr. Meyer, who is president and publisher of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer have occupied the residence for the past five years.

Bill Designed to Bring Out All Hidden Money

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday he was having drafted a bill to recall all outstanding currency and to issue new money in its place in an effort to bring hoarded money out of hiding.

Holders of existing bills and coins would be required to turn them over to the Government in exchange for new money.

Institute Plans To Enlist Youth In Public Life

College Men and Women Offered Opportunity to Study Here.

Plans for offering young men and women training for service and leadership in public affairs were announced yesterday by Otis T. Wingo, jr., secretary of the organization committee of the National Institution of Public Affairs.

Under an arrangement similar to the selection of Rhodes scholars, the students of the institution will be chosen from juniors, seniors and graduates of universities and colleges throughout the country. Present plans call for the first students to come from Washington early in 1935.

The institution, self-governing, privately financed, nonpartisan and nonpolitical, but enjoying the cooperation of the National Administration, will bring a group of young people to Washington for two or three months of training in the functions of the Federal Government.

Educators to Head Training.

Numerous educational and civic groups have endorsed the plan and offered their cooperation.

The training program will be supervised by an education director and an educational committee composed of Dean Walter James Shepard, president of the American Political Science Association and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Ohio State University; Dr. Charles Riborg Mann, director of the American Council on Education; Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, former president of the University of Texas and former dean of the graduate school of American University; Dr. Charles E. Clark, dean of the Yale University School of Law, and Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, director of the institute for government research, Brookings Institution, and former president of the University of Oregon.

Fundamentals of leadership, as related to National affairs, will be given emphasis in the program.

To Form College Clubs.

In addition to the Washington activity, the institution will promote the formation of nonpartisan public affairs clubs at colleges and universities throughout the country. These clubs will study the practical operation of government and concrete aspects of public affairs and their members will be encouraged to engage in the campaigns of their own political parties. Civic duties and responsibilites will be the keynote of the institution's Nation-wide educational program.

The advisory board, which will act as the governing body of the institution, includes Edward A. Filene, president of William Felene Sons & Co., of Boston; Dr. Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College; Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post; William E. Sweet, former Governor of Colorado, and Maj. John Sanford Cohen, editor and president of the Atlanta Journal.

The administrative activities of the organization committee are being carried on in Washington under the direction of Secretary Wingo.

Student Advisers Chosen.

The student advisory committee, organized to represent the student viewpoint in the institution's activities, consists of Robert Marcus, of the George Washington Law School and treasurer of the National Student Federation of America; Miss Elizabeth Read, graduate student at Columbia University and vice president of the National Student Federation; William H. Collins, of Williams College and member of the board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. of New York; C. Girard Davidson, of Tulane University and the Yale Law School; William L. Brady, of Emory University and editor of the National Student Mirror, and John A. Lang, of the University of North Carolina and president of the National Student Federation of America.

The plan for the institution was originally proposed by Chester H. McCall, assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, at the convention of the National Student Federation in Washington last December. McCall made the proposal at the suggestion of Secretary Roper, who for several years has advanced the principles of the institution plan.

The training program will include lectures by Government officials, forums for discussion, debate and analysis; observation and assignment to actual Government work, special case problems and the writing of a report or thesis.

20 Paris Churches Are Being Built

Archbishopric Floats Its First Loan.

Paris (U.P.).—Having floated a loan for the first time in its history, the archbishopric here is speeding construction of a score of new churches.

Cardinal Verdier raised 20,000 francs through the issue of diocesan bonds to fill some of the fiscal gaps in his program. Total expenditures will run into 20 times that sum.

The aim of the archbishop is twofold: to alleviate the scarcity of shrines and to relieve unemployment. Started last October, the program has given work to thousands.

Unlike Rome, with its 1,000 belfries, Greater Paris, has only 200 parish churches to minister to the spiritual needs of its 5,000,000 metropolitan and suburban inhabitants. There are about 70 auxiliary churches.

Open Safety Pin Taken Out of Girl's Throat

Ogden, Utah (U.P.).—Jeanette Stephenson, 15, recently swallowed an open safety pin and went to a basketball game.

Later the pin was located even with the sixth rib, deep in her gullet. A bronchoscope and a long, thin pair of forceps removed it.

Candidate Tells Voters Of His Unkept Promises

Montreal (U.P.).—Alderman J. H. Brien, of Rosemount Ward, has established a precedent in Canadian politics. He went before his electors recently and told them of all the 1932 promises he had not fulfilled.

Offered the candidacy for the ward in the forthcoming April elections, the alderman analyzed eight promises made and carried out. Then he added four more promises which he had made, but did not carry out.

"Now," he said to the crowd, "you know what I have done and what I have not done. Are you satisfied?"

"Yes!" yelled the crowd.

"O. K. Then I run again!" yelled the alderman.

Farmer Finds Mill After 150-Mile Hunt

Grantsburg, Wis. (U.P.).—Frank Anderson, Frederic, Wis., farmer, recently completed a 150-mile trip in search of a grist mill where he might have a load of grain ground into flour.

The circuit embraced nine towns and two States. He found that in each case mills either were converted into power plants, fish hatcheries and other projects or were out of operation. Despairingly, he started the long trek homeward, only to discover a mill suitable to his purpose in a village 25 miles away.

JAMES JOHN DAVIS, Senator from Pennsylvania. Born in Wales, 60 years ago, and brought to America at the age of 7. A month later, at Sharon, Pa., landed his first job driving cows to and from pasture, his pay being $1.25 a month. Left school at 11 to earn 50 cents a day in a nail factory. Then a helper for his father, a steel puddler. Worked in some 50 mills. At Elwood, Ind., headed his local union, became city clerk, then county auditor. Promoted the Loyal Order of Moose from a straggling group of 300 to a national membership of more than 600,000, establishing Mooseheart, near Chicago. Secretary of Labor under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. Resigned the same day he took his seat in the Senate after being elected in 1930. His trial last year on charges of running a lottery, for the Moose, threatened to ruin his political career, but his acquittal preserved the Horatio Alger story of his career. Now a prosperous Pittsburgher, astute politically, he prefers to be known for his youthful struggles in a steel mill, as "Puddler Jim."

"If the Greeks had really wanted to hold him they never would have fallen for that wooden gun Sam pulled on 'em when he came back the second time on that freighter Crown Point."

"You mean Honeboy Insull, the one who had his whiskers shaved off by a date merchant's wife in the Senate aircraft inquiry and fled to Orlando with the Brooklyn club disguised as a new manager?"

"No. The fellow I mean got away by dyeing his hair so he would look like a stock dividend on a basis of 100 shares of new for every two of the old stock."

"I don't remember exactly what became of him, but I agree with Lindbergh that it was unfair to cancel him without a trial."

"Do you think the United States will ever get him back?"

"Sure. It's just a matter of arranging new contracts without any collusion. In fact, New York is already arranging a welcome reception for him when he sets foot on American soil. You know who's in charge of it—that fellow who is on all those reception committees."

"Grover Overholt?"

"That's the one."

Story of a Fruitful Valley Gone to the Dogs

By Robert Quillen

Many years ago a certain green valley was inhabited by friendly people who raised sheep and lived in peace and contentment.

At some remote period a few wolves had come into the valley, and because of them, though they had long since disappeared, each man kept a few trained dogs to guard his sheep and assist in driving them.

One fateful day a dog belonging to one herder attacked and killed a dog belonging to another.

The man who was wronged brooded over the matter and made secret plans to get even. He imported dogs of a new breed, trained not to herd sheep but to fight other dogs, and one day these vicious brutes attacked the sheep dogs that began the trouble and killed the last one of them.

Thus vengeance was done, but, alas! retaliation never ends. The man whose dogs were slain imported fighters, and these attacked sheep dogs all up and down the valley, so that every man had to choose whether to have his dogs killed and his sheep left unguarded or to keep a pack of dogs of no earthly use except for fighting.

The result was inevitable. Soon every man in the valley had a pack of trained fighters and battles between the packs were frequent and dreadful.

But as pride and necessity prompted each man to enlarge his pack, the day came when the cost of feeding his dogs was greater than the total revenue provided by the wool of his sheep.

This was folly too great to be endured and at last the men held a meeting to find a way out of their difficulty.

One of them who was much respected got to his feet and said: "Neighbors, we are being very foolish. These fighting dogs are eating us out of house and home. We must do something."

Then he took a drink of water and added: "I wish to say in conclusion, in case any of you have big ideas, that I've got a pack of dogs that can lick the daylights out of any pack in this valley."

So the meeting broke up. And now the sheep in the valley die because their wool is clipped so close, and the people scarcely have enough to eat because it costs so much to feed the dogs.

Washington's Inventory Helps Refit Old House

Valley Forge, Pa. (U.P.).—Guided by an inventory found by Albert Cook Myers, which lists the furniture of the home at the time George Washington occupied it, the Valley Forge park commission has refurnished the historic structure here.

The first President rented the little green-and-white shuttered house from Isaac Potts, a young clergyman, for six months in 1777.

The residence was erected in 1758 and was the most pretentious of any in the vicinity at the time. It was restored to its original condition as nearly as possible in 1887. The commission says that the home now looks exactly as it did when Washington lived in it.

Financial Expert Assigned to Tokyo

Departure Follows Sending of Rogers to China.

K. M. Bratter, Department of Commerce silver expert, has been sent to Tokyo to study the financial situation, according to the Associated Press.

While there was no official announcement of his assignment, it was said to be in line with plans to increase the number of Government financial observers in various parts of the world.

The fact that his departure coincided closely with that of Prof. James H. Rogers, ordered to China for the same purpose, was said to be without special significance.

Homesteading Plan Indorsed By First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Soon Visit Reedsville Again for Inspection.

Subsistence homesteads over the country will prove a boon to thousands of American families who still cling to their independence, yet are near destitution through no fault of their own, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday at her weekly press conference.

Pointing out that the dole is not yet considered necessary or even expected in this country, and that the majority of needy families insist on a chance to support themselves rather than governmental gifts, she called this spirit of self-reliance a typical American tradition.

The subsistence community and governmental experment farm at Reedsville, W. Va., which she has frequently visited and in which she has taken a personal interest, is an example of the manner families which have suffered from the depression can and will come back if given a chance, she reminded.

Asserting that she intends to return soon to Reedsville for another inspection and personal discussions with mine families there, she predicted that these families and many others this spring will stage a come-back and renew their independence by raising their own produce.

Although the farm projects at Reedsville will be started this spring, she said the proposed mail-box factory there will not be established.

The First Lady told women reporters she will visit the display of models of subsistence homesteads to be shown April 24 at the Corcoran Art Gallery. A larger exhibit is planned later at the Commerce Building.

Asked about results of the balls held over the Nation on the President's birthday to aid the Warm Springs Foundation, she said the interest thus aroused has already been of benefit to crippled children of the country.

Tomorrow afternoon, a delegation of Italian-American dressmakers from New York City will present to her a medal. Saturday afternoon, she will plant cedars of Lebanon at Arlington Cemetery in connection with services of the Near East relief.

Naturalists Praise Bug Collector, 70

12-Inch Atlas Moth Is Among Specimens.

Salt Lake City, Utah (U.P.).—As a collector of bugs and insects, J. W. Sugden, 70-year-old Salt Lake pattern maker, has won the praise of noted naturalists throughout the country.

His collection includes specimens gathered at various times since he was a small boy.

He has a giant Atlas moth from the Philippines which measures 12 inches across the wings; a big blue owl butterfly of Brazil, which is as large as the giant moth, and a brilliant orange butterfly from the jungles of India and Madagascar.

Although he has traveled extensively in search of new specimens, he said that most of his foreign specimens were obtained through trading those he has found in the intermountain regions.

Texas Pilot Picked To Teach Germans

Dobie to Instruct About Handling Boeings.

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.).—Pilot Richard L. Doble, of Dallas, who flew the first air-mail plane into Dallas on May 12, 1926, and who has piloted mail, express and passengers from here to Chicago since that time, will sail for Germany soon to teach foreign pilots the art of handling Boeing transports.

The Deutsche Lufthansa has purchased from the Boeing Airplane Corporation several new transport planes identical with those being flown on the Dallas-Chicago route. The planes are to be operated between Berlin, London and Paris.

Doble was selected from among United Air Lines' pilots to teach the German airmen. He has been given two months leave of absence.

Mexico Assists U. S. In Fighting Fruit Fly

Nuevo Laredo, Mexico (U.P.).—Mexican authorities are cooperating with United States and Texas officials in a campaign to eradicate the Mexican fruit fly.

Dr. Alfonso Dampf, federal entomologist of Mexico, was sent here by the government after a single fruit fly had been found in the garden of the American consul. An extensive drive will be made if the investigation warrants, it was understood.

Several experimental campaigns have been under way for some time to exterminate the Anastrepha ludens species, bane of orchardists, Dr. Dampf revealed. These may be extended over the nation.

Senate Action On Trade Loan Plan Delayed

Glass to Offer Substitute Permitting Reserve Banks to Serve.

(Associated Press.)

Action on legislation for Government loans to industry was postponed by the Senate Banking Committee yesterday to await a substitute bill by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who wants Federal Reserve Banks to make such loans from their own funds.

Elsewhere in the Capital it was made known that a dwindling supply of eligible commercial paper was forcing increased use of Government securities as collateral for Federal Reserve notes.

At the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Chairman Jesse Jones issued a statement saying he believed new legislation would be required to permit purchase of securities from solvent cities seeking funds for public works. Such a plan had been suggested by Mayor O. F. Holcomb of Houston, Tex.

Representatives who called at the White House to urge loans for home building and repairs reported President Roosevelt sympathetic toward broadening a home loan act for this purpose. His visitors, led by Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, suggested $1,500,000,000 be made available.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Reserve Banks had been obliged to continue pledging a considerable volume of United States Government obligations against outstanding Federal Reserve notes because of the small amount of eligible commercial paper on hand. Latest reserve figures put total holdings of bills at $84,000,000, lowest since before the war.

In 1932, during a heavy foreign gold drain on the United States and a shortage of eligible commercial paper, Congress changed the law to permit substitution of Government securities for commercial collateral.

The notes must have a 40 per cent gold backing, whether the remaining collateral is commercial paper or Government securities.

Hull, Iyesato Pass Greetings

Telegrams Affirm Bond With Japan as Prince Leaves Country.

To cement the cordiality lately reinjected into Japanese-American relations, Prince Tokugawa Iyesato and Secretary of State Hull exchanged telegrams over the week-end upon conclusion of the Prince's visit to this country.

Cabling from the S. S. Tatsuta Maru, en route to Yokohama, Prince Tokugawa said:

"On my first day on the Pacific I desire to express to you my sincere appreciation of the hospitality extended to me by you personally and by the American people generally. When you see the President please convey to him the expression of my respects and best wishes."

To which Secretary Hull replied:

"Your cordial message is warmly appreciated. Your visit, together with that of your son and your granddaughter, has given us great pleasure. I shall be happy to transmit your greeting to the President."

Good Eyes Needed For Marksmanship

Texan Says He Can Show Anyone How.

Houston, Tex. (U.P.).—Expert marksmen can be developed from ordinary men with good vision and steady nerves, according to Capt. Gray I Morris, who trained 1,400 snipers for duty during the World War.

Morris, now a business man here, was the only man detailed to develop marksmen during the war, as far as he knows.

The finest marksman he developed was a man who had been a trick shot artist on the stage, Morris recalled. His shooting was unusually effective at 800 yards or more.

Hunting deer, squirrels and birds in the piney hills of East Texas trained Capt. Morris as an expert rifle shot. A military academy was the "finishing school." His record was known when he entered the war, so he was given the job of training snipers.

Quaker City Women Favor Stronger Drinks

Philadelphia (U.P.).—Since the legalization of liquors, women are consuming mostly whisky drinks, according to several Philadelphia hotels.

"Old Fashioneds are the thing mostly asked for," the head waiter of one of the bigger hotels declared, "but I am sure that when the younger generation learns something of the milder drinks, they'll drop the strong whisky cocktails.

"In fact, I'm willing to predict that within two years, after they have learned to appreciate the difference in drinks, only about 1 woman in 50 will order an 'Old Fashioned.'"

Former Sultan's Palace To Be Paper Factory

Istanbul (U.P.).—Ancient Turkish architectural landmarks must give way before the modernization now in progress.

Despite the protests of the Turkish Tourists Club, the huge 60-year-old wholly marble Sultan's Palace of Tcheragan on the Bosphorus, a mile from the center of Istanbul, is to be turned into a paper factory.

It was used as the Turkish Parliament and Senate House until 1910, and has also served as a prison for Sultans' heirs. Abdul Hamid II shut up his brother, Mourad V, there for 27 years.

WomenLaunch District Drive For Symphony

Mrs. Roosevelt and Others Support $60,000 Goal of Orchestra.

With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as one of the guest speakers, the women's committee of the National Symphony Orchestra Association formally opened "National Symphony Week" at a buffet luncheon yesterday in the Carleton Hotel, beginning the final stage in the campaign to complete the $60,000 sustaining fund needed for the support of the orchestra next season. Walter Bruce Howe, secretary of the association, was toastmaster.

Carl Engel, chief of the music division of the Library of Congress, the first speaker, declared it would be an everlasting blot upon the cultural reputation of Washington if the symphony orchestra, were allowed, through civic apathy, to disintegrate after its three years of steady artistic growth. He pointed out the peculiar condition of Washington, as compared with other cities which support orchestras.

"Unlike the capitals of Europe," he said, "our Capital is not the cultural and artistic center of the National life. It differs also from other American cities which are focal centers. Washington is a political and social resort; its most influential and affluent residents are transient, having their interests in promotion of artistic endeavor elsewhere. Our citizens who live here the year around are people of moderate resources whose generosity is necessarily limited.

"Our symphony orchestra is one of our most important assets which we can not afford to lose as long as we can retain it by our sacrifice of self for civic welfare. Our problem would be solved, if the orchestra were made in actuality what its name implies that it is—a National Symphony, supported by the Government and used by the Government as an educational medium in our National musical life."

First Lady Cites Benefits.

Mrs. Roosevelt began her brief address with the statement:

"I am one of the transients, I fear, of whom Mr. Engel has spoken. I am deeply interested, however, in the National Symphony, which is very important for a number of reasons. It gives great pleasure to those who attend its concerts; it offers educational advantages to the children of Washington; it offers to the visitors who come to our Capital from all parts of the country the opportunity to hear the best music and to carry home with them the idea of the importance of music in their community lives.

"The Nation's Capital should always have the best that it is possible to have in art, in education and in Government. The importance of an orchestra in this scheme of things can not be overemphasized. One function of an orchestra is the stimulation of latent musical talent, and in supporting our orchestra we are doing our part in encouraging the development of our native musical ability.

"In the past, our American talent has been obliged to go abroad to attain recognition. That condition is changing rapidly, thanks to the growth of musical appreciation in our own country. Where we were formerly, as a nation, afraid to trust our own judgment, we are now establishing our own standards and criteria.

"As individuals, we can not have certainly in our own musical judgments unless we have been accustomed to hear the best music from our early youth. The National Symphony is offering that very advantage to the youth of Washington. If only for that reason, it deserves the support of everyone interested in musical education. Even if we have our homes in other parts of the Nation, we should, as long as our interests bring us to the Capital, share in the responsibility of the Capital's musical standing."

Other Speakers Heard.

Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, stressed in his remarks the spiritual values of music in the formation of character.

"The Nation is entering a new phase of its development," he said, "and music will, I believe, play an ever more important part in that development."

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peebles, director of the Community Center Department, spoke about the children's concerts given by the National Symphony and their importance in education.

Music as a unifying principle in human life was the theme of the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Hans Kindler, the last speaker, expressed gratitude for the help he has received during the last three years in building up the National Symphony to its musical standard.

"Without your support," he said, "we could not have accommplished what we have. If the orchestra should not be able to go on, it would be a betrayal of our trust, of our responsibility to the task undertaken. I sincerely hope the orchestra will continue for the benefit not only of the present music lovers, but also of our children's children."

Radio Waves and Ripples

TO the cheerful neigh of its speedy steed, a horse car swinging lazily like a waddling peasant woman grinds up the tracks of Ninth street. Perched on shining straw seats within is a bustle. The lassie wearing it is gazing in rapture at her gallant swain whose brown side whiskers are floating on the breeze. They are going to a picnic ...it being a balmy Sunday afternoon.

Up front with his brawny arm guiding the bold conveyance is a young motorman...or whatever they called them in those days. There's a rose in his cap and he is happy, is the skipper of the horse car.

That was about 51 years ago. Tomorrow, this same "skipper," the oldest motorman in point of service on Capital Transit Co.'s surface lines,, will be interviewed over WMAL at 3:15 p. m. by C. Malvin Sharpe, assistant to the president of the company.

The "skipper" has served on the line from the Ninth street wharves to the Soldiers' Home for 51 years and in that time has traversed more than 1,300,000 miles. N. B. C. couldn't put the microphone on board a trolley car...the line costs are too high. But the effectiveness of the "skipper's" reminiscences and memories of the old days of rapid transit won't suffer thereby. Another conductor will appear on the program to tell what he knows of the Elegant Eighties. Their names will be announced when the program goes on the air.

OUTSIDE of scraping and scratching through reams of publicity material teeming with unpronouncable, unrecognizable and thoroughly unattractive names, radio scribes aren't particularly "up" on classic music. It's perfectly human to be lulled to sleep by the vibrant tones from a base viol . . . or to be inoculated with some fairy serum through the drowsy, flimsy beauty of chamber music. It's more than human to feel your blood tingle from the rousing strains of Victor Herbert or John Philip Sousa or even a dose of Verdi via "Carmen."

With the lights turned low and shadows from the fire flicking on the walls, mix something legal and tune in on WJSV at 9:30 tonight. You will hear the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, directed by the "gifted young conductor," Paul Lemay.

The group will present a carefully balanced program of light classics . . . some of the popular compositions by Weber, George Schumann, Liszt and Tschaikowsky. The numbers are "Euryanthe" from the fantastic opera by Weber; "The Dance of the Nymphs and Satrys," a scene of revelry in the wooded hills of Greece, by Schumann, and Victor Herbert's arrangement of Liszt's "Liebestraum" and Tschaikowsky's "March Slave."

What does an announcer do on his off day?

He pulls on his slippers, settles himself comfortably in his favorite chair and tunes the radio to his own station.

We present in evidence the spectable of Robert Youse and John Mayo calling Station WMAL Manager Carlton Smith yesterday after some one else had made the station announcements Stanley Bell should have made.

Bell was busy rehearsing Headlines of Yesterday, the Post's new dramatic series, which went on the air for the first time last night.

The announcer boys thought Bell had a stomach ache, or something.

IT wasn't far short of a minor triumph in the Eternal City when scrappy Fiorello H. LaGuardia became New York's fusion mayor. If you've followed the public prints you know that LaGuardia has a uncomfortable way of appearing where he's least expected . . . presiding as magistrate at the police lineup . . . waging a crusade to rid the city of petty vice and wearing a stiff shirt over his bulging chest so that he may shake his fist with the rest at Madison Square Garden.

"Da Preem" is Italy's fistic triumph but Fiorella (eesa nize fellow) is New York's and Rome's too.

There's another black-eyed fighter out on the coast in San Francisco . . . another son of vine-draped Italy. He's Mayor Angelo J. Rossi. While not quite so well known as his New York compatriot, Mayor Rossi has much of La Guardia's inbred vision and sense of the dramatic.

Today Mayor Rossi, seated in his office in San Francisco, will reach out 3,000 miles across the continent . . . clasp hands figuratively with New York's "Hizzoner" and speak over an N. B. C. network on "Not Less Government, but Less Governments." Held in connection with the National Conference of Mayors in San Francisco, the first session opens today. Conferees will hear Mayor Rossi over a public address system in the International House on the University of California campus.

Mayor LaGuardia will have his say on Friday, March 30, when he will speak from the N. B. C. studios in Radio City in New York. His subject is "Unemployment Insurance." Both addresses will be heard at 7 p. m.

Saturday night at the Press Club, President Roosevelt was the chief guest. Throughout the building a cordon of more than 50 police were spread to guard the President from "cranks" who have invaded the White House of late.

On the same floor in the studios of WRC the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom were having a little gathering, with Clarence Darrow and Representative Kathryn McCarthy (Kansas) scheduled to appear as speakers. Meanwhile, crowds filled the lobby and guards closely scrutinized credentials of all who sought to gain entrance to the building.

Came 11:55 . . . five minutes before the program was to go on the air . . . and no speakers. Naturally, Fred Shawn, assistant manager of WRC, began to tear whole handfuls of hair from his pate. So he dashed downstairs, plowed his way through the crowd and found Lawyer Darrow and his Representative companion pinioned in the middle of the crowd. Police wouldn't let them upstairs . . . credentials or no credentials.

But Fred straightened everything out just in time. And the crowd gaped as the venerable lawyer and Representative McCarthy were allowed to enter the elevator.

The Minister from Greece, Mr. Charalambos Simopoulos, spoke over WMAL Sunday. He took his young son with him. The lad is much interested in radio, having been one of those who took part in an international broadcast from the same studio shortly before Christmas, when children of foreign diplomats presented their Yule messages on the air.

"Your son likes the studio and knows quite a lot about radio, doesn't he, Mr. Minister?" said Carlton Smith, who was putting on the program.

"Yes," answered the Minister, "my son is very much interested in radio, but it is all Greek to me."

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had sufficient motive for murdering Montague, with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy. Stamm's mother, who is mentally unbalanced, insists that the "dragon" removed Montague because he was an "enemy of the family."

The following morning the pool is drained, but there is no sign of a body. Instead, in the thick mud of the bottom they see the imprint of a scaly hoof and a huge, three taloned claw!

Searching Montague's clothing, Vance finds a scented note in feminine handwriting arranging a rendezvous on the far side of the pool at 10 p. m., the hour at which Montague disappeared. The not is signed "Ellen," presumably Ellen Bruett, who was to have been one of Stamm's guests, but who sailed for South America instead. Bernice Stamm remembers having heard a car start up during the search for Montague. Vance suspects the girl is attempting to shield some one.

"That note is far more reasonable than the footprints you speak of," she remarked.

"The note in itself is reasonable enough," Vance admitted. "But there are correlative factors which make it appear most unreasonable. For one thing, there's the car in which the ever-thine Ellen was to have waited. Surely, in the nighttime silence of Inwood, the sound of an automobile could have been heard at a distance of a few hundred yards."

"It was—it was!" she exclaimed. "I heard it!" The color rushed back to her cheeks, and her eyes glistened. "I didn't realize it until this minute. When Mr. Leland and the others were in the pool searching for Monty—ten minutes or so after he had dived in—I neard a car starting and the hum of the motor picking up as when the gears are being shifted—you know the sort of noise I mean. And it was down on the East road. * * *"

"The car was going away from the estate?"

"Yes—yes! It was going away—toward Spuyten Duyvil. * * * It all comes back to me now. I was kneeling there, at the edge of the pool, frightened and dazed. And the sound of this car drifted in on me, mixed with the sound of splashing in the water. But I didn't think about the car at the time—it seemed so unimportant * * * the suspense of those few minutes—I think you understand what I am trying to say. I completely forgot such a trivial thing as the sound of a car, until that note brought it back to me." The girl spoke with the intensity of unassailable veracity.

"I understand exactly," Vance assured her consolingly. "And your remembering the sound of the car has helped us no end."

He had been standing by the center table during the interview, and he now came forward toward the girl and held out his hand in an attitude of friendly sympathy. With a spontaneous gesture of gratitude, she put her hand in his; and he led her to the door.

"We shan't bother you any more now," he said gently. "But will you be good enough to ask Mr. Leland to come here?"

She nodded and walked away toward the library.

"Do you think she was telling the truth about hearing an automobile?" Markham asked.

"Oh, undoubtedly," Vance moved back to the center table and smoked for a moment in silence; there was a puzzled look on his face. "Curious thing about that girl. I doubt if she thinks Montague escaped in a car—but she unquestionably did hear a car. I wonder * * * she may be trying to shield some one. * * * A nice gel, Markham."

"You think perhaps she knows or suspects something?"

"I doubt if she knows anything." Vance turned and sought a nearby chair. "But, my word! she certainly has suspicions. * * *"

At this moment Leland entered the drawing room. He was smoking his pipe, and, though he tried to appear cheerful, his expression belied his manner.

Chapter XIII.
The Missing Man.

"Miss Stamm told me you wished to see me," he said, taking his stand before the fireplace. "I hope you have said nothing to upset her."

Vance watched him intently for a moment.

"Miss Stamm," he said, "did not seem particularly upset by the fact that Montague has departed this milieu."

"Perhaps she has come to realize—" Leland began, and then stopped abruptly, busying himself with repacking his pipe. "Did you show her the note?"

"Yes, of course." Vance kept his eyes on the other.

"That note reminds me of something," Leland went on. "The automobile, you know. I have been thinking about that ever since I saw the note, trying to recall my impressions last night, after Montague had disappeared under the water. And I remember quite distinctly now that I did hear a motorcar on the East road when I came to the surface of the pool, after having looked for the chap. Naturally, I thought nothing of it at the time—I was too intent on the task in hand; that is probably why it went out of my mind until that note recalled it."

"Miss Stamm also remembers hearing a car," Vance informed him. "By the by, how long would you say it was, after Montague's mysterious dive, that you heard the car on the East road?"

Leland thought a moment.

"Perhaps ten minutes," he said finally, but he added: "However, it is rather difficult to gauge the passage of time in a situation of that kind."

"Quite so," Vance murmured. "But you are certain it was not merely two or three minutes?"

"It could not possibly have been as soon as that," Leland answered with a slight show of emphasis. "You see, we all waited a couple of minutes for the chap to show up after his dive, and I had already gone into the water and made a fairly thorough search for him before I was aware of the sound of the car."

Far From Conclusive.

"That being the case," submitted Vance, "it is far from conclusive to connect the sound of the car with the absent Ellen, for it would not have taken Montague more than a minute or so to reach his waiting Juliet at the gate. Certainly he wouldn't have tarried en route, nor would he have lingered for a loving tete-a-tete in the parked car."

"I see what you mean." Leland inclined his head and looked troubled. "Still he might have decided there was no need for haste and got into some togs before driving off."

"Quite so," Vance admitted carelessly. "There are various possibilities, don't y' know * * *?"

The conversation was interrupted by Dr. Holliday and Stamm descending the stairs. They crossed the hall and came into the drawing room.

"I'm sorry to trouble you again, gentlemen." The doctor, his face clouded, addressed us apologetically. "When I first came here this morning, I found Mrs. Stamm markedly improved and I expected she would soon be her normal self again. But when I returned, a little later, she had relapsed. The events of last night seem to have upset her strangely, and she is now in a most unusual mood. She insisted on watching the draining of the pool, and the result threw her into a state of unprecedented excitement. There is, I believe, some fixed idea in her mind, which she will not confide to me or to her son."

Dr. Holliday shifted his position awkwardly and cleared his throat.

"I'm inclined to think," he went on, "in view of the fact that her interview with you last night seemed to relieve somewhat the tension of this pent-up hallucination, it might be helpful if you gentlemen would see her again.

"She may be willing to talk about this suppressed idea to you. It is worth trying, at any rate—if you don't mind. I suggested the interview to her, and she seemed more than willing—quite anxious for it, in fact."

Visit With Mrs. Stamm.

"We would be very glad to see Mrs. Stamm, doctor," Vance returned. "Shall we go up alone?"

Dr. Holliday hesitated, and then nodded jerkily.

"I think that might be best. It may be that this supposed secret of hers is being withheld, for some irrational reason, only from members of the family and those she knows."

We went immediately to Mrs. Stamm's quarters, leaving Dr. Holliday, with Stamm and Leland, in the drawing room.

Mrs. Schwarz was waiting for us at the door; evidently the doctor had told her we were coming. Mrs. Stamm was seated near the window, her hands folded in her lap. She appeared quite calm, and there was none of the sardonic tenseness about her that we had encountered the night before; instead, there was a look of almost humorous satisfaction on her wizened face.

"I thought you'd be back," she greeted us, with a low cackle of triumph. "I told you that the dragon had killed him. And I told you that his body would not be found in the pool. But you didn't believe me. You thought it was the ravings of an old woman's cracked mind. But now you know that I told you the truth, and so you've come back to learn more. That's why you're here—isn't it? Your foolish science has failed you."

She chuckled, and something in the sound of that hideous nasal laughter brought back to me the witches' cavern scene in "Macbeth," with the dragon's scale that was added to the cauldron.

"I saw you looking for the young man's footprints on the bank opposite and on the cliffs," she continued, in a gloating tone. "But the dragon rises to the surface of the water and flies away with his victims. I've seen him too often! * * * And I stood here, at the window, when the water was running out of the pool, and saw you waiting * * * waiting, and watching for the thing that was not there. And then I saw you walk out across the boards, as if you could not believe your eyes. Didn't I tell you last night that there would be nobody in the pool? Yet you thought that you could find something." She unfolded her hands and placed them on the arms of the chair, her fingers flexing and unflexing like great talons.

Tells of Footprints.

"But we did find something, Mrs. Stamm," Vance said gently. "We found strange footprints in the mud."

She smiled at him, like an older person humoring a child.

"I could have told you that, too," she said. "They were the imprints of the dragon's claws. Didn't you recognize them?" (The matter-of-fact simplicity of this astounding statement sent a chill up my spine.)

"But where," asked Vance, "did the dragon take the body of this man he killed?"

A sly look came into the woman's eyes.

"I knew you would ask me that question," she answered, with a satisfied, tight-lipped smile. "But I shall never tell you! That's the dragon's secret—the dragon's and mine!"

"Has the dragon a home other than the pool?"

"Oh, yes. But this is his real home. That's why it is called the Dragon Pool. Sometimes, though, he flies away to the Hudson and hides in its waters. At other times he lies beneath the surface of Spuyten Duyvil. And on cold nights he flies down the valley and seeks shelter in the Indian caves. But he doesn't put his victims in any of those places. He has a different hiding place for them. It is older than history—older even than man. It is a cavern made for him when the world was young. * * *" Her voice trailed out, and a fanatical look came into her eyes—a look such as I imagine shone in the eyes of the old religious martyrs when they were led to the rack.

"That's all most interestin'," Vance remarked. "But I am afraid it is not very helpful to us in our present dilemma. You are sure you could not be persuaded to tell us where the dragon took young Montague's body?"

"Never!" The woman sat up rigidly in her chai· and glared straight ahead.

Vance regarded her sympathetically for a moment, then terminated the distressing interview.

When we had again descended to the drawing room he explained briefly to Dr. Holliday the result of his conversation, and the doctor and Stamm took leave of us and went upstairs.

Vance smoked in moody silence for a while.

"Queer about her prognostications," he mused. "I wonder. * * *" He moved restively in his chair, and then, glancing up, questioned Leland regarding the superstition connected with the dragon's various abodes.

King Fuad was born at the Giza Palace in Cairo in 1868. He is the great grandson of Mohamet Aly, viceroy and the founder of modern Egypt, and is the ninth monarch of the dynasty.

He was educated at the Tudicum Institute of Geneva, the International Institute of Turin, the military academy and the school of applied artillery and engineering, also in Turin, and began his career as a lieutenant in the Thirteenth Regiment of field artillery in the garrison of Rome.

Overtricks.

While Shakespeare did not play bridge, in his writings he somewhere laid down an important principle which all bridge players must master sooner or later or pay the penalty in lost games. Shakespeare said, "The game's the thing," and by that is to be understood to make safe your contract before chasing after overtricks.

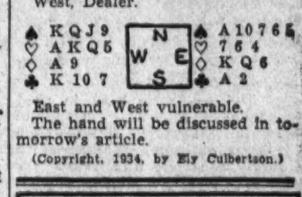
However, not all bridge players have learned this lesson, as the example below, furnished by Mr. John W. Jacobson of Toronto, Canada, proves. Perhaps West was just careless, but here is the hand:

East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

West was the Declarer at a contract of four spades, and North, anxious to preserve his tenace positions, opened a trump. West won with the Ten and at once returned a diamond, finessing the Ten in the Dummy. South permitted this card to hold the trick. West returned to his own hand with the heart Ace and led a second diamond. It is now obvious that if the Ace of diamonds is cashed, ten tricks can be made by a cross-ruff. However, West took a second diamond finesse, which lost to the King, and South returned a diamond, which was ruffed by North, who returned another trump. This was won in Dummy, the high diamond was cashed, and a low heart returned. West still hoped to make the contract if South had three hearts to the King or if North had to win the third heart lead. However, on the second heart North made the very fine play of the Knave, allowing South to hold the third round with the Ten and return a club to defeat the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

West, Dealer.



East and West vulnerable.
The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Spring Cleaning Is Made Easy By These Aids

Wallpaper Cleanser and Special Clothes Will Allay Drudgery.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

There may be flowers that bloom in the spring, and balmy breezes, and lots of things, but what housewife can fully appreciate them until she's gotten the burden of spring housecleaning off her mind? A prolonged winter is offering a respite, but one of these days the time will come, and with much beating of carpets, hanging of drapes, window washing and scouring, we'll greet the season.

It isn't too early now to start searching around for means to allay the drudgery. A local shop has some wallpaper cleanser which literally rolls the dirt away. It's also very good for window shades. It can be rubbed on in a few seconds, and the result is almost instantaneous.

That isn't all. The same shop proudly boasts a variety of chamois cloths for window washing. Rags are often more of a nuisance than a help. Sometimes they scratch the glass, and most of the time they leave specks of lint as hard to remove as the stains and soils. Chamois cloths are more satisfactory.

To Make Sheer Silk Intriguing.

The effect of sheer silk hose is always spoiled if the wearer has been too negligent to remove superfluous hair. Not that it's always negligence, either. A large number of women simply haven't the faintest idea how to do it. They know a razor not only encourages the growth of hair but brings it back stiff and bristly. They fear depilatories for the effect they have on the skin, or the discomfort in applying them.

One solution to the problem is a depilatory set recently put on the market by an old and reliable cosmetic concern. It includes a cake of special wax, which comes in a little pan all ready for heating, a spatula for applying it and a jar of soothing cream for after use.

This preparation not only discourages the growth of superfluous hair, but delays the return crop, which, when it does turn up, is thinner and downier than before.

* * * *

For Cheese and Crackers.

A cheese and cracker tray, which resembles the round end of a barrel, is proudly exhibited in a Connecticut afternoon shop.

Despite the hundreds of trays in the stores, this one is outstanding both for its simplicity and practical qualities.

An informal meal of cheeses, breads and beer is made to appear a thousandfold more attractive and tempting when it's served on something as appropriate as a natural wood tray.

It will be the ideal thing for the summer cottage, too, for it can be in constant use, take any number of scrubbings and never be the worse for wear.

Some ingenious shoppers buy trays and paint them to suit themselves.

* * * *

Brighten Up the Nails.

Well formed and carefully kept nails are sometimes stubbornly sallow in appearance. Despite bright polishes and trim cuticles, they never look well.

To remedy such a condition a beautician has concocted a preparation to be rubbed directly on the nails and left on over night, or for several hours anyway. It acts as a bleach.

* * * *

Stars in a Window.

A small bottle of perfume in a Connecticut avenue shop window has caused a lot of comment. It's a midnight-blue spherical bottle, dotted with almost invisible stars, and filled with a perfume, exotic, and compelling, called Dans la Nuit (Into the Night). It is placed in a box against a silver brocade background.

* * * *

For Nondescript Tresses.

A new vegetable rinse that tints the hair is neither a dye nor a bleach.

It can be easily applied, and just as easily washed off. Faded blonde locks, or hair that makes no claim to any particular color, can be changed in one rinse into a crowning glory.

There are 12 shades to choose from, one for every month in the year, if you want to fool your public.

* * * *

Reflected Drinking.

Be-mirrored cocktail sets are apt to make us as dizzy as their contents. A Connecticut avenue shop has some shiny silver shakers, with cups to match, on an equally shiny tray with a mirror base.

One set has a shaker in standard pitcher shape. A top, however, fits tightly in spill-proof fashion. Another is more modernistic to suit the "spirits" of the age.

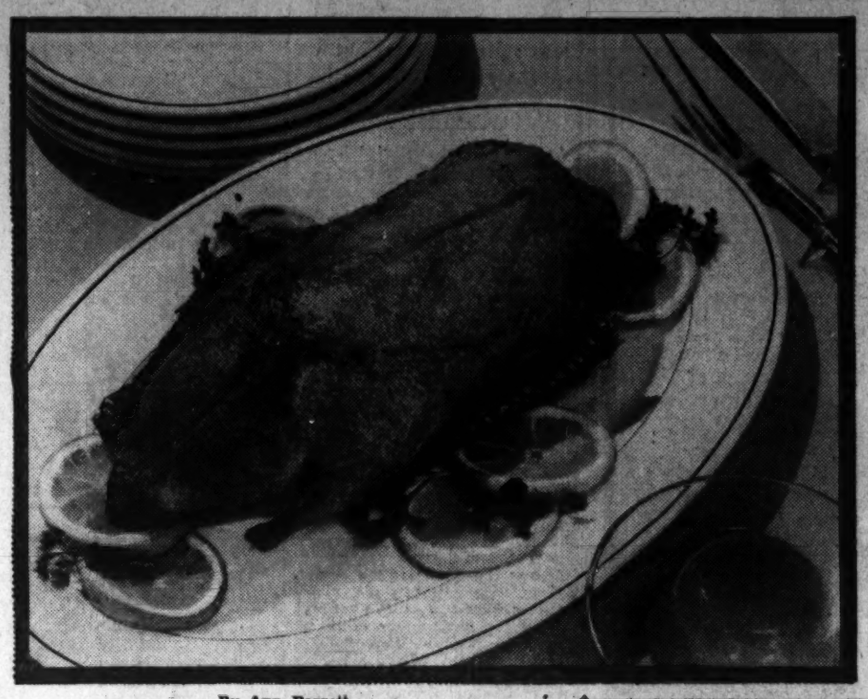
* * * *

For Smokers.

There are cigarette cases and cigarette cases, but few like those in a local gift shop. These are made of lightweight, natural colored leather, hand tooled and painted with Oriental scenes. They hold exactly one package of cigarettes. Price, 50 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Duck Is Central Character In Palatable Easter Dinner



By Ann Barrett.

THE DUCKLING in this story is a young and handsome bird, with a fine fruit stuffing. It's roasted to a state of rich and crackling brown. A colorful cast supports it in this Easter dinner drama: Broiled, buttered potatoes; new asparagus; shredded lettuce and riced-cheese salad with French dressing; grape sherbet with yellow Easter cakes, and coffee.

The Way With a Duck.

But to get back to the duck itself. Choose one between 4 and 5 pounds. Singe, wash and dry it, and sprinkle inside with ½ teaspoon salt. Then stuff with this mixture: 2 cups peeled, thin apple slices (first dusted with ¼ cup very fine cracker crumbs), ¼ cup currants, ¾ cup seeded raisins, ½ cup chopped walnuts, ½ cup cracker crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup fruit juice (prune or orange), 1 egg (slightly beaten with fork).

Then sew up the opening, rub salt into the skin of the duck, and put it in a roasting pan on its back. Brown it in a hot oven. Then reduce heat to 350 degrees F., and baste with fat in pan, till duck is done.

Broiled, Buttered Potatoes.

For broiled, buttered potatoes, choose 6 that are medium-sized. Peel them. Then slice them. Then let these stand in cold water two hours. Next, dry them thoroughly and lay in a shallow pan. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt. Set the pan in the preheated broiler, 6 to 8 inches away from the flame, but with the flame on full. Brush with more butter and turn as necessary to brown them.

For your shredded lettuce and cheese salad, use one of those special soft, rich and bitey cheeses that come in packages. Force it through a vegetable ricer or metal strainer, sprinkle liberally on the lettuce and top with well-seasoned French dressing.

Grape sherbet starts with ¾ cup sugar cooked up for 3 minutes with ¾ cup water. Meanwhile, soak ½ tablespoon unflavored gelatin in 3 tablespoons cold water, then add this to hot sirup, set mixture in pan of ice and beat till stiff. Next add ¾ cup grape juice, 5 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ cup orange juice and ½ cup crushed, canned pineapple. Let this mixture cool, then turn it into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator, or into can for crank freezing. When frozen to mush, remove to bowl and beat with rotary beater. Then whip ½ cup cream and fold in. Continue freezing (2 to 3 hours more in automatic refrigerator).

Oxfords, Pumps and Sandals Will Walk in Easter Parades

All Types Are Slightly on the Dressy Side.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, March 26.—What about those feet which are going to carry your Easter bonnet so briskly along in the great parade next Sunday . . . will they be as smart as the bonnet? They will be if they're in tune with it.

If it's a dressy outfit, then you'll want dressy shoes.

Oxfords, pumps, sandals . . . anyone of those is right. For even oxfords, so long a tailored shoe, have gone over on the dressy side now,

One or Two Eyelets.

In its dressy version the oxford will have only one or two pairs of eyelets. Or it may be a half-way compromise between a real oxford and a strap shoe, called the "open-throat" oxford. One of these is illustrated at the top of the sketch column.

Dressy oxfords are the right shoe to wear with a dressmaker type suit. . . . Or with semidressy coat-and-dress costumes.

The plain opera pump in either kidskin or patent is a classic among dressier shoes. One is sketched at the bottom of the column.

The third dressy shoe which will be seen this Easter is the sandal. And this, in kidskin or patent, will accompany the most dressy of dressy costumes.

One type is shown in the center sketch with open shank and cut-outs which are not too open for walking comfort, but just open enough to be dressy.

Leaflet on Color.

Then there's the question of what color shoes. And this is answered in a leaflet which is yours if you'll mail us the coupon and requested inclosures.

Amos Parrish,
The Washington Post New York Fashion Bureau, 500 Fifth avenue, N. Y.

I inclose stamped, self-addressed return envelope and loose 3 cent stamp. Please send your leaflet, "Correct Shoe Colors for My Spring Costume."

Ground Steak Goes High Hat And Delicious

Well-Known Hamburger Leaves Bean Wagon, Becomes Edible.

A great many things can be done with hamburger. One can make meat balls, and serve them with the always popular fried onions. One can concoct a meat loaf, which, hot or cold, will be welcomed on the dinner table or in young hopefuls' lunches.

Not only is hamburger cheap, but it is delicious when cleverly prepared by the hostess. An informal party may be made an occasion well spent if one can enjoy hamburger barbecues, slipped between soft rolls and flavored with a little relish of barbecue sauce.

Here are a couple of recipes to be used when the family budget and appetite is low.

Mexican Beef Balls.

2 pounds ground beef
1 large onion, sliced
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
½ teaspoon chili powder
2 cups tomatoes
Red pepper
Salt
Flour
1 cup cornmeal.

Brown the sliced onion in the bacon fat, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Add the tomatoes and season to taste with salt, red pepper and chili powder. Season the meat also and work in just enough flour so that it can be molded into balls the size of a walnut, and add to the tomato sauce. Thicken with corn meal and cook slowly until the meat is done, about 30 minutes. Add water if the sauce becomes too thick. .

Beef and Corn Pudding.

2 pounds ground beef
1 can corn
1 tablespoon bacon drippings
1 cup meat stock, or water
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 tablespoon browned flour
Salt and pepper
Grated cheese

Brown the onion in bacon drippings, then add the browned flour. Add the meat stock or water and season to taste with salt and pepper. Put alternate layers of corn and ground beef in a buttered casserole dish. Pour over this the sauce. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the meat is done, about 45 minutes. Just a few minutes before serving, uncover and sprinkle the top with grated cheese. Return to the oven long enough to melt the cheese.

Suppers Are Made Palatable With Ease

Informal Meals Pepped Up With These Attractive, Tasty Dishes.

Winter's return engagement has upset the plans of many housewives whose minds were set on spring dishes. However, the present weather affords an opportunity for cozy meals before a grate fire.

No one who has an inviting hearth, a little table in front of it and a tea wagon on which to bring in the supper will mind the delayed arrival of spring.

Here's a palatable dish for supper for a small group. Spread slices of toast with butter, then with a paste of mashed sardines. Arrange on plate and pour a hot rarebit over them. This with a few bottles of beer and a crisp green salad with French dressing will make your supper complete.

Creamed meat and olives over hot biscuits is a sort of dish one remembers long. It's simple as can be, looks appetizing and tastes delicious. A bowl of vegetable salad served with it makes it an almost perfectly balanced meal.

If you serve the salad menu, preface it with a cup of steaming hot soup, and accompany it with thin crisp slices of melba toast.

Hearty Luncheon Salad.

2 cups cold, leftover meat, cut in cubes
1 1-3 cups diced vegetables (any leftover cooked vegetable)
¼ cup French dressing
3 hard-cooked eggs
½ pound Swiss cheese
2 stuffed Spanish olives
Mayonnaise

Marinate cubed meat and vegetables in French dressing. Chill thoroughly. Serve in nest of crisp lettuce. Top with mayonnaise and sprinkle with paprika. Cut hard-cooked eggs in thin slices around the meat alternately with cheese slices. Place sliced stuffed olives in center of egg rings. Force egg yolks through sieve and sprinkle over entire salad. Serves six.

Creamed Meat and Olives.

2 cups cold, diced leftover meat
¼ pound mild American cheese, diced
6 stuffed olives
1 recipe white sauce

Dice meat and cut cheese fine. Slice olives and add to hot white sauce with diced cheese. Cook until thoroughly heated. Serve over hot buttered biscuits or buttered toast.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Digestion at Different Levels.

About the hardest blow given the soda habit in recent years is one that came from the laboratory of Dr. Lloyd Arnold. His research was done on another problem, but in the course of the work he found some facts that go strongly against this habit.

Younger persons have no business taking soda when they feel a little indigestion, or eating vegetables that have been cooked with soda, or biscuits that contain too much of it. The arguments against using soda habitually are doubly as forcible in the case of elderly people.

The stomachs of elderly persons are poor acid makers, since they have less than their share of acid. In spite of the best they can do, the level of alkalinity and the bacteria that multiply in alkaline material rises from 1 to 20 feet higher than normal. For an elderly person to take alkali, such as soda, is potentially more harmful than in the case of a young adult.

Some old people think they do well when they drink sour milk or other sour foods or drinks, or even when they take dilute mineral acids medicinally. Here is a reason. A part of the bowel trouble in babies is due to alkalinity in the alimentary tract. They get a cold or a fever. The stomach stops secreting acid. The level of alkalinity and the bacteria that thrive below it rises higher and higher. Acute bowel trouble results.

Many people give babies orange juice and even stronger acids. Buttermilk will sometimes agree with the child when ordinary milk causes trouble. Anything that reverses peristalsis tends to cause the disturbance. Among these causes are vomiting, nausea, gall bladder attacks and even spells of dyspepsia with great belching.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If March 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 8 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If March 27 is your natal day, you must cultivate the habit of being optimistic. You can always sum up countless fears, aches, pains, and dismal forebodings, if you give your imagination free rein, and allow yourself to dwell on the melancholiac aspects of life. It will give you great comfort if you will memorize: "No evil can pollute thy (my) thought." The great Englishman, Sir Philip Sidney expressed a beautiful sentiment when he wrote: "They are never alone that are accompanied with noble thoughts." Learn to think cheerfully, and build air castles, not dismal quagmires of discordant imaginings.

The child born on March 27, when old enough to understand, should be taught to appreciate nature, and encouraged to take an interest in the botanical wonder contained in even the least pretentious gardens. Flowers will always give children born on this date a great deal of joy and contentment, for many times their fragrance will act as a sedative, when their nerves become "jumpy" or their spirits wilt. The child, whose birthday is March 27, is of an artistic nature and keenly appreciative of the beautiful. Having sensitive natures, harshness, or severity must be avoided when discipline is necessary. Being clever, they will readily respond to reasoning.

The woman born on March 27 will be wise to develop more initiativeness, and not be afraid to reach a definite decision when need arises. Sometimes we can contract the habit of being overprudent, which is just as grievous a fault as being reckless. Women, born on this date, should marry, for they make excellent wives and wonderful mothers. Housekeeping is one of their strong points, and they make charming hostesses.

The man born on March 27 will do well not to let his cleverness make him ever self-confident, so he will be enticed to enter into speculative ventures. Be cautious about ever allowing a friend to persuade you to pull his chestnuts out of a fire of his own making. If you stick to your own "knitting," you will make a decided success.

Successful people born on March 27:

Tayler Lewis, educator.
George S. Coe, financier.
Francis H. Storer, chemist.
Genevieve Ward, actress.
George F. Baker, banker.
Henry S. Carhart, electrician.

Last Heroic Husky Of Nome Dash Dies

Old Sye Belonged to Team Led by Balto.

Cleveland, March 26 (U.P.).—Old Sye, last of the immortal Alaskan team of huskies that made an epic dash across frozen wastes in 1925 to bring aid to diphtheria-stricken Nome, has passed on to dogdom's happy hunting ground. With the weight of 17 years hanging over his grizzled head, Old Sye died yesterday at his kennel in Brookside Zoo.

As in the case of Balto, leader of the string, and his five other teammates, only a few attendants were on hand to mourn Old Sye's passing. He began to feel ill only a few days ago, according to zoo attendants. Old Sye and his teammates were brought to Brookside Zoo in 1927 after school children had contributed pennies to purchase the dogs from a Los Angeles museum. The string cost $2,000.

Capt. Curly Wilson, zoo keeper, said today that the sled upon which the huskies dragged serum through a raging Arctic blizzard to succor Nome, will be put on display in the administration building. A monument commemorating the dogs' heroic dash will be moved from the kennels to a more conspicuous spot in the park. Whether Old Sye's body will be stuffed and mounted, as was Balto's, has not been determined.

Mrs. O. L. Emerick Wins Garden Club's Trophy

Purcellville, Va., March 27 (Spl.). Mrs. O. L. Emerick, with an exhibit of pussy willow and evergreen, won the President's Trophy at the meeting of the Purcellville Garden Club held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. J. Hansbarger. She will hold this for one month when it will again be up for competition. Mrs. Russell Gregg won second place.

A part of the club's program at the next meeting will consist of planting a wild flower garden on the Lincoln High School grounds.

Dr. Bowerman, Librarian, Will Be Host Tomorrow

Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library, will be host to a group from the University of North Carolina Library School tomorrow morning. Coming to Washington especially to study methods of library organization, these representatives will hear Dr. Bowerman speak on organization and methods of gaining appropriations for libraries. They will also attend the meeting of the District of Columbia Library Association tomorrow night.

Women Lawyer Ban by Garnett Arouses Fury

Verbal Bombardment Hits Criticism of Pearl McCall's Work.

ATTACKING District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett's stand against women assistant district attorneys as "unjust" and "antiquated," women lawyers of the District yesterday announced that they would continue their fight ultimately to place a woman in the district attorney's office.

They declared that Mr. Garnett's opposition only served to convince them there was a special work in his office which only women could do.

PEARL McCALL.

Mrs. Bernita Shelten Matthews, a prominent practicing attorney of the city, has sent a telegram to Mrs. Roosevelt inviting her to aid women fight against what she terms "unfair discriminations" Mrs. Martha R. Gold, member of the executive committee of the Women's Bar Association, made indignant reply to Mr. Garnett's statement that the women who had served as assistants to district attorneys before he took office had spent their time "chasing fugitive husbands" and "worrying about canned goods."

Political Dig at Garnett.

"I offer no defense for the women who formerly held the positions of assistant district attorneys," Mrs. Gold said. "Their work speaks for itself, in spite of the derogatory remarks and implications made by the new district attorney.

"But we should be pleased that Mr. Garnett has sought thus early in his career to make public his attitude toward women. The office of district attorney has been the stepping stone, in many instances, to the judiciary; and the veiled attack on hundreds of members of the bar, who if Mr. Garnett should ever hold the position of judge, would be compelled to appear before him in the prosecution of their cases, should be a protection against such a calamity."

"Women in public life are no rarity," Mrs. Gold continued. "Today we see them in high places, as governors, senators, a dozen or more members of the House of Representatives, two Federal judges, one member of the Cabinet, a minister in the foreign service, as women judges in State, municipal and juvenile courts."

Mrs. Gold then summarized briefly the work done by Miss Pearl McCall and Mrs. Rebecca Greathouse, assistant district attorneys at the time Mr. Garnett took office.

In Defense of Women.

"Mrs. Greathouse never lost a case in the Court of Appeals," she said. "She was competent, capable and busy. She handled all the condemnation cases in the pure food and drug act, which Mr. Garnett describes as 'worrying about canned goods.' She handled the naturalization cases, and the condemnation cases in liquor seizures. She had an excellent record.

"Miss McCall served as assistant district attorney for 13 years and her accomplishments will endure for many more. She collected the evidence that resulted in the cleaning up of the fake universities operating here. She was most successful in persuading husbands who refused to support their families to return to their wives, thereby alleviating much hunger, poverty and distress. She sent many men and women to prison for performing illegal operations. She closed a notorious disorderly house, after other prosecutors had failed to do so. Her work was competent and satisfactory."

One of the innovations Miss McCall instituted was a demand for the trial of men offenders, together with their women companions, in social offenses.

In reply to Mr. Garnett's statements, Miss McCall said:

"Evidence of Mr. Garnett's attitude toward women attorneys is the fact that when he was installed in office the men who were dismissed were allowed to remain on the pay roll for a month. This courtesy, if such it may be called, was not extended to the two women who were acting as assistant district attorneys.

Garnett's Data Under Fire.

"It would be interesting to know just where Mr. Garnett obtained his information regarding the activities of the two women who were assistant United States attorneys. During my 13 years in that office, I never saw Mr. Garnett in the U. S. attorney's office. In all those years I never saw him in court. I was discharged within 15 minutes after Mr. Garnett took charge of the office. Such information as he claims to have regarding my activities, or lack of activities, can not be based upon personal knowledge."

Miss Marie McCatheran, woman attorney of the District who graduated from the National University Law School in 1932 with honors, and has since practiced law successfully here, wrote to The Post stating her resentment of Mr. Garnett's attitude.

"Mr. Garnett's statement, 'if there are capable women lawyers he hasn't met them,' is at best a clever and evasive way of saying that there aren't any capable women lawyers," she said. "I am in a position to say that if Mr. Garnett hasn't met any capable women attorneys, it is because he has closed his eyes and ears and doors to capability on the part of women. Not content with his own narrow-minded and erroneous opinion of professional women, he has issued a statement which bids fair to damage seriously the 20 or 30 actively practising women attorneys in the District of Columbia, who make their living by their sheer capability."

Kindler Bows Low.

"I CAN'T TELL you how I appreciate your coming to our meeting and speaking for the orchestra," said Dr. Hans Kindler, bowing low to the Lady in Blue as she entered her car.

"Indeed—we all appreciate it and thank you," added Walter Bruce Howe, as he assisted the Lady (via her elbow) across the car's threshold.

"Why, I was glad to come and I wish you all success with your orchestra, Dr. Kindler," said Mrs. Roosevelt as she sank onto the back seat cushions of the motor with tag number 102. She added a personal word to each gentleman, smiled and rolled away.

• • • •

Mrs. Roosevelt had been chief honor guest at a large luncheon at the Carlton yesterday in the interest of the drive to raise the second half of the $60,000 necessary to keep the National Symphony Orchestra going next year. Her's was the best speech of several fine speeches made by prominent men and women of the Capital.

• • • •

Mrs. Roosevelt—who looked most charming in royal blue velvet gown and hat, with a pointed black fox scarf—emphasized the importance of such an orchestra in promoting the musical education of young America.

"Americans until now have not generally been able to respond with spontaneous sureness of judgment to the performances of musical artists. That is one reason we have been so slow to advance our own artists. Talented young Americans have had to go abroad to achieve recognition."

• • • •

European audiences are made up of people used to music all their lives. They know when performances are good or bad and why. That is the most important reason of all, I think, why we should do everything in our power to advance musical education in the Nation's Capital, to which the people of the Nation turn for inspiration and education in every line."

• • • •

Previously, Mr. Howe had introduced Mrs. Roosevelt as "one who was formerly a Washingtonian, and one who is now Washington's foremost citizen."

Mrs. Roosevelt smilingly responded to the honor given her by the standing throng of guests. She said she might be a transient but felt herself "a real Washingtonian all the same."

The Colonel Mourns.

WANTED—one swagger stick!

From Florida comes the impassioned plea of Joe Stehlin who (if you can't disprove it) was the first American to fly a plane which bore the emblem of the United States with the Lafayette Escadrille. During those days it was that he acquired his swagger stick.

• • • •

After the war was over the swagger stick went with him to Russia, where he flew a combat plane for the forces opposing Stalin. When the latter won that war, Joe wandered over to China, where it is understood he flew on the side which offered him the best pay.

• • • •

Col. Stehlin arrived in Washington in his red panties last Armistice Day to attend the Armistice Day ball. It was then that his most prized possession—the above-mentioned swagger stick—changed hands.

• • • •

And so—if some reader should run afoul of said stick, will he (or she) please notify this column to the end that Col. Joe can be so advised. He is now busily engaged in selecting sites for safe-landing airplanes for Uncle Sam's birds.

Philippine Chef to Demonstrate At Congressional Cooking School

He Will Cook Rice in the Fashion of His Country at National Day Today; International Dishes to Be Prepared Tomorrow.

PEDRO AYTONA, Filipino chef of Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, knows all about rice. That is why he has been chosen to cook it today at the Congressional Club cooking school.

His method is simple, but it never fails. So when he arrives at the Willard Hotel this morning, he will begin the five-step routine which is essential to turning out a choice dish of rice.

After washing the rice five or six times, he will cover it with enough water to rise about two inches above the rice, and place over a medium flame. When the water boils, he will stir the rice from the bottom of the pan to prevent it from burning.

Philippine Rice Recipe.

After adding a teaspoon of salt to every pound of rice, he will allow the rice to boil until the water is almost evaporated. When it is almost dry, Pedro will place a top on the pan, turn the flame as low as possible, and steam for about 15 minutes. The rice is then ready to serve or to combine with other vegetables.

"This is exactly the way rice is cooked in the Philippines," said Pedro, "except no salt is added in our country. We like our dishes hot with pepper, just like the Spaniards, but not salty." Pedro should know. For the Filipinos and the Chinese are the most adept people in the world at preparing rice.

Pedro has been in this country since 1915. Coming over with an Army officer, he has remained to prepare choice dishes for several households.

Favorite Rice Recipe.

His favorite recipe that includes rice is Chicken Chop Suey. Ingredients include 3 sliced onions, 2 pounds of rice (cooked according to above method), 1 can of bean sprouts, 2 pounds of quartered mushrooms, ¼-pound of almonds, salt and pepper to taste, and 2 stalks of celery, 2 boiled chickens, and 2 green peppers (all cut up finely). Onions are fried, then other ingredients are added. This should be allowed to cook, over a medium flame, for about 30 minutes. It serves 10 people.

The cooking school, conducted by the Congressional Club, will be held this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Both sessions will begin at 1:30 o'clock.

Miss Mary Turner, of the Potomac Electric Power Co., will be demonstrator and all equipment will be furnished by the company.

Today will be National day at the school, and recipes to be used will include baked ham, 24-hour salad, cheese souffle, upside-down cake.

Tomorrow, international dishes will be prepared, such as ragout d'agneau epinard, borsch, fattiga riddare and Canadian scones. All recipes will be taken from the Congressional Club Cook Book.

One of the special features of the school will be a cake contest. Women of Washington are invited to bring cakes to be put on exhibition; prizes will be given for the best. Mrs. Richard Duncan will have charge of this feature.

Mrs. Guy D. Goff is chairman of the cooking school. She will be assisted by Mrs. A. H. Gasque as chairman of supplies and Mrs. Thomas Cochran as chairman of display.

Mrs. C. C. Dill, president of the Congressional Club, is chairman of the cook book committee, and Mrs. Ross Collins, assisted by Miss Lyla Townsend, is in charge of sales of the cook book.

Miss Strayer to Speak To Free Lance Writers

At the next meeting of the Society of Free Lance Writers, on Thursday evening in the Shoreham Hotel, the technique of feature and fiction writing will be discussed by Miss Martha Strayer, Charles Edward Russell and Felix Conrad Schwarz, chairman.

Manuscripts to be entered in the society's annual short story contest must be turned in to the chairman at this date. The prize winners will be announced at the banquet to be given at the Shoreham April 12. The committee in charge of the banquet are Col. Edmund Sayer, Mrs. James Mooney, Mrs. Thomas Willis, Miss Katherine Kennedy, Mrs. O. L. Schwarz and Frank Binks. Prizes will be presented by the treasurer of the society, Dr. Andre Benetau.

Tuckahoe Place To Be Opened Garden Week

Old Estate on James River One of Earliest in Virginia.

Richmond, Va., March 26.—A rare privilege to visitors to Virginia this spring will be the opening of Tuckahoe for four days, Wednesday to Saturday, of Garden Week, April 23 to 28.

Situated on the upper James River, 13 miles from Richmond, it is believed to be the earliest frame building of importance still standing to the west of the falls at Richmond. The combined weight of authority places the building of the house prior to 1700, by or for Thomas Randolph, third son of William and Mary Randolph, of Turkey Island, generally called the "Adam and Eve" of old Virginia. There is no way of ascertaining the size of the original plantation, but it is certain that it was many times greater than the 600-acre farm which still pertains to the original house.

Except for a period of 68 years, it would not be inaccurate to say that out of the 234 years of its existence Tuckahoe has belonged for the first 130 years to the direct male descendants of the original builder, and for the last 36 years to his direct descendants by the female line.

Plantation Likeness Kept.

The present owners are Harold Jefferson Coolidge, sr., Harold J. Coolidge, jr., Lawrence Coolidge and Roger S. Coolidge, and a constant effort is being made to preserve the early plantation character of the old buildings, grounds and garden, while keeping them habitable according to modern standards.

The old house still stands, built in the shape of the letter "H" with paneled rooms. It has been gradually restored room by room, and furnished as opportunity afforded, either with the original or at least historically sympathetic furniture. So also the outbuildings, including the old kitchen, the master's office, and the schoolhouse where Thomas Jefferson—himself a descendant of William Randolph, of Turkey Island—learned his letters and left his first childish autograph. The quarters of the house servants, with the smokehouse and the ruins of the field quarters, have been carefully preserved and, where possible, restored and adapted to their original uses.

Read Under Cedar Arcade.

The buildings are reached from the River road by a straight narrow lane nearly a mile long, lined thickly on each side with cedar trees, many of which have grown until their branches interlace in Gothic arches high overhead, while offering glimpses between their trunks of broad acres of cultivated land and grazing fields.

The lawn, with enormous trees and heavily shaded view over the low grounds stretching to the waters of the James River, three-quarters of a mile away, is dotted in spring with the bulbs and fruit blossoms so much prized by garden lovers, and one can still trace the old brick stairway leading from the house down a steep bluff to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, which for many years formed the only practical means of communication with the outside world.

As Harold Jefferson Coolidge has written: "The chief glory of the place, apart from its historical traditions, is the box maze, still in fine condition. There one sees trimmed hedges of suffruticosa unsurpassed and perhaps unequaled in this country."

NRA Widens Field Of the Librarian

Leisure Makes Readers; They Want Expert Guidance.

New York, March 26 (Spl.).—One profession—that of the librarian—is expanding instead of contracting. The greater leisure afforded under the NRA is causing an increasing demand for librarians, according to a Nation-wide survey made by Charles C. Williamson, dean of the School of Library Service at Columbia University.

Persons with new leisure on their hands are not only reading more widely, but are seeking guidance in their reading, Dean Williamson believes. He says:

"As leisure increases, the reader's adviser becomes a more and more important person in the libraries. There is, and can be, no particular course given to fit a person for this position. It is a delicate personal relationship, and requires a special kind of personality. Emphasis in all library service courses is placed upon its importance and upon its tasks. It is a position which one reaches only after serving an apprenticeship in the more routine roles in the library.

"While libraries do not teach people to read in the mechanical sense, yet their immediate task is to supply the kinds of books people can and want to read. For this reason there is particular emphasis on the training of a reader's adviser, whose guidance is valuable particularly to those who have a little forward training."

Heart Attacks and Apoplexy Happen Occasionally, However

Dr. Hoffman Is Head of Emergency Rooms of Treasury Department; Vastly Prefers Present Job to Private Practice.

Government work—with its regular hours and regular pay—attracts men and women who are already established in their professions as well as beginners who have had little training or experience. One woman physician gave up a lucrative private practice to accept an appointment with the Government.

This is the eighth in a series of articles telling of women who hold interesting Government positions.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A WOMAN HAS as much chance as a man for success in the medical profession, providing she sticks to general practice. It is when she specializes that she is at a disadvantage, believes Dr. Katharine Hoffman, on the staff of Children's Hospital and in charge of six emergency rooms for the Treasury Department.

"For some unexplained reason, a man specialist is able to win confidence where a woman can't," said Dr. Hoffman yesterday at her office in the Treasury Building. "But that rule doesn't apply to general practitioners, I've found. Most of the women doctors whom I know have large practices."

Four years ago Dr. Hoffman gave up a profitable private practice of her own to become head of the Treasury Department's emergency rooms. Under her direction are ten registered nurses whose work ranges from administering headache remedies to taking care of apoplexy cases.

"Most of our cases are first aid ones," explained Dr. Hoffman. "What causes most of the injuries? Well, believe it or not, it's the waxed, slippery floors in some of the buildings. In fact, so many Government workers have hurt themselves by skidding and falling on waxed floors that contracts for most of the new buildings specify nonslippery floors.

"Colds and headaches are next on the list," she continued. "The number of those cases seems to be about the same year after year."

Dr. Hoffman is convinced that age plays a minor part in the many treatments given by her staff—an average of 150 treatments a day. About as many young men and women avail themselves of the emergency rooms service as do older ones, she has found.

Women visit the rooms more frequently than the men do, however. In three months, 7,350 treatments have been given to women while, in the same length of time, only 3,086 were given to men. Sixty-two per cent of the 9,000 workers under Dr. Hoffman's care are women.

Some Serious Cases.

All 9,000 workers are entitled to the privileges of the emergency rooms, free of charge. In a case where the patient needs more than the first aid treatment or a simple remedy, he is advised to go to his family doctor or, when injured in line of duty, to go to physicians provided by the Government in compliance with the compensation act of 1916.

"Sometimes we are forced to take care of extremely serious cases because there is not time to take the patients to their own doctors," said Dr. Hoffman. She referred to heart attacks and paralytic strokes that have caused several deaths in the emergency rooms.

"But deaths are a rare experience with us," the woman physician added. "Most of our workers stay home on sick leave when they are seriously ill. Or, if they become desperately ill on the job, we usually manage to get them to a hospital. Our rooms, you see, are not equipped for anything but emergency first aid. We perform no operations."

The Treasury Department's emergency service was established in war time by Dr. Martha C. Burritt. Only two other Government buildings—the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, and the Government Printing Office—had adequate first-aid equipment then.

Dr. Hoffman Doctor's Wife.

Dr. Burritt retired in 1930. Dr. Hoffman was appointed to take her place, beginning in the fall of that year.

Dr. Hoffman, daughter of Brig. Gen. C. J. Symmonds, lived a nomadic existence during her girlhood, including a few years in Cuba, a few years in the Philippines, and short stays at most of the Army posts in the United States. When the family came to Washington, Dr. Hoffman, then Katharine Godfrey Symmonds, enrolled at George Washington University. After she had received her A. B. she stayed on until she had completed the medical course. She is now the wife of Dr. H. S. Hoffman, on the staff of Emergency Hospital and assistant medical director at George Washington University.

Working for the Government is more pleasant than having a private practice, Dr. Katharine Hoffman has found.

"I have regular hours here," she said. "There are no night calls and, best of all, no bills that can't be collected. A private practice is more exciting in some respects, but it's far less comfortable," she concluded.

Read in tomorrow's Post of a young woman lawyer who travels throughout the United States, representing the United States Government in important cases.

Easter Clothes To Rival Cars In Streamline

Will Be Bluest Parade in Years; Sailor Hats to Be Popular.

New York, March 26 (AP).—If Palm Sunday weather is any indication, the Easter parade next Sunday will be really windblown, the gusty breezes right in line with the new spring clothes.

This year's parade, which will bring out the new clothes on every city's main street, will be streamlined and sailor-hatted, too.

And it will be the bluest parade in years. Navy blue suits, shoes and hats will far outrun all other colors.

This probably will be the most widely worn Easter costume:

A blue suit of some type. White or pastel accessories. As to flowers—gardenias or violets.

Prpbably the next most popular garb will be a redingote wrap, worn over a print dress. Cartwheel hats, orchids, bracelet sleeves and wide-pointed lapels also will be seen.

It will be a more conservative parade than many of the predecessors—for instnce, the parade of 1913, when slashed skirts and hats with up-flung "beanstalk" trimming appeared.

For comparisons, here are some Eastern costume notes from other years:

1890—Hats were simply a wreath of wire netting with a mass of flowers on top. The blooms seemed to be springing from the head. Men wore suits that made them look like "ye olde fire laddies."

1900—The year of the bell-shaped silhouette. An Easter hat had a puffy brim, a rosette, some green grapes, black flowers and a cherry or so.

There Will Be Pain.

By Katherine Smith.

There will be wounding; quickened steel
Too surely, sharply draws
Your youthful blood; there will be pain
And I will be the cause.

Yet, though I hold the sword and watch
The deepened reddened stain
With horror, I could still forget
If I could bear the pain.

Skirts Take the Limelight

Dressmaking Details Turn Floorward in the Evening.

Lovely ladies will switch formally through spring evenings this year with even more grace than usual. All due to the frou-frou business on the bottom of the skirts of most of the evening dresses put out by the big boys of Parisian dressmaking.

This center-the-interest-on-the-hemline trend announces itself in different ways. On the black dress in the photograph Augusterbernard puts disks of black tulle to make a wide ruching around the skirt.

Trains go on being prevalent. But a train is no longer merely a train. They have added interest in being cut in strange new shapes. Occasionally points trail along polished floors. Sometimes fan-shaped peacock's tail affairs trail along after well-groomed women.

Some evening dresses have bottom borders of different materials. Others, not so formal, sport long tunics that stop a foot or so from the floor. Some of the designers don't go in for this hemline-interest business with quite so much vehemence; most of their models depend chiefly on more subtle tricks such as mere suggestions of flares in the skirts. These flares are cut so the fullness starts around the region of the knees.

Although Mae West's trend was very short-lived you will see dresses that steal her stuff in their great wide ruffly flounces that go around the skirt. These no longer have a gay-ninetylsh aspect, as all other frou-frou has been done away with. And this is the case with most of the evening things in this season's collections. There is nothing fantastic about them. Very ladylike and lots of class.

Augusterbernard works a little fantasy with the aid of black tulle.

Too-Scanty Shorts Banned in Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 26 (U.P.).—Scanty bathing attire was barred from the streets of Bermuda today by the chief of police.

General notice was served on guests of hotels and boarding houses that bathing suits and "too short shorts" would not be allowed on the public highways, and persons improperly dressed would be prosecuted. The police action was caused by the flimsy attire being affected by many tourists, especially young people present in Bermuda in large numbers during the Easter season.

Police are confining their activities to the highways for the present, although it was hinted the beaches may be given attention later. The principal offenders against the official sense of modesty are girl cyclists, who dress as scantily as they dare on their way to and from the beaches.

Hollywood WAMPAS to Select 13 "Baby Stars" From Among Free-Lance Players

Final Choices Of the Judges About Decided

Know Winners Tomorrow; Buck Comes to Town; Theater Chat.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Word comes direct from Hollywood that this year's list of 30-odd nominees for WAMPAS "baby stardom" reflects a fairly accurate cross-section of the eternal struggle being waged by young aspirants for recognition in the West Coast film colony.

It is pointed out by Mr. Robbin Coons, one of the film capital's more minute observers, that a survey of the candidates—out of the total number of which 13 will be elected to the definite honor of "baby stardom" tomorrow—makes clear that those who aspire to movie fame can acquire a considerable degree of screen experience and still remain virtually unknown in the cinema world.

This year something of an innovation has been inaugurated by the selection of the candidates from among the younger free-lance players. Those with contracts have been barred from the competition. Scattered through the list are a few names that may mean something to movie fans with good memories, but only a few.

George M's. Daughter.

For instance, there is Helen Cohan, daughter of George M. Cohan, the American theater's foremost personality, and both granddaughter and namesake of a distinguished figure of an earlier day in the theater. Miss Cohan rather naturally gravitated to the stage and introduced something of Broadway stage experience to the screen when she made her debut before the cameras with Will Rogers in "Lightnin'."

Those who give any heed to the casts of two-reel comedies will probably recall Dorothy Dix and Dorothy Granger. Miss Dix was leading woman in the "Torchy" series and also has appeared with Andy Clyde, Buster Keaton and with Ken Maynard in a "Western." Miss Granger is the buxom young woman who burlesqued Mae West in "She Outdone Him" and only last week appeared on a local screen as one of the wives in an amusing Leon Errol comedy, "No More Bridge."

A Gale Breezes In.

Jean Gale, another on the list of candidates, is one of the famous Gale Quadruplets, Joan, Jane, June and Jean, familiar to patrons of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue.

Mary Kornman was the blonde heroine of the old "Our Gang" comedies, and is now grown up. Jean Lacy has played comedy leads. Lucille Lund won an "All-American" beauty contest and played the feminine lead in "Saturday's Millions."

Mary Mason once held an RKO contract, but was almost completely neglected on that lot. She recently has been appearing to advantage on the Pacific Coast stage and not so long ago had a leading role with Sally Eilers in "Walls of Gold" and the feminine lead in a Tom Keene "Western."

Claire Myers, Denver's nominee, who has been a Los Angeles resident since she was a small child, goes to M.-G.-M.'s dramatic school and appeared with Jimmy Durante in "Meet the Baron" and is to be seen in "Hollywood Party" and "Finishing School."

Canadians, Too.

Cecilia Parker and Yvonne Pelletier, both Canadian born, began as mere children under contract to Fox; Gloria Shea known for her voice, once held a Warner contract; Irene Ware recently also was under contract to Fox, while Luana Walters and Jacqueline Wells have played minor parts in various productions.

All parts of the continent are represented in the list of nominees from which the lucky 13 will be chosen and it seems a happy thought that the WAMPAS this year have decided to give the real "outsiders" a chance to prove whether or not their talents are such as to justify the faith that their ultimate selection will tacitly express.

Frank Buck not only "brings 'em back alive," but has the robust faculty of coming through trying days alive himself!

Yesterday, for example, he arrived in the Capital slightly after the hour of noon, was met at Union Station by Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's and a distinguished party of greeters, was escorted uptown under police escort and for the greater remaining part of the afternoon held court at a semi-formal levee in the Willard Hotel.

Last evening he was present as an honored guest at the world premiere of his latest picture, "Wild Cargo," at the National Press Club, whence, between 11 and 11:30 a special broadcast was made to Admiral Byrd and his party in Antarctica.

That, I dare say, was about as busy a day as any Mr. Buck ever put in lashing a hungry tiger into a frenzy behind the stockade of that celebrated compound on the outskirts of "Singapore"—or wherever it is!

Buck Lists Worst Enemies.

After a quarter century of danger in the world's most impenetrable and ferocious jungles, acquiring rare specimens of wild life that now are to be found in a thousand zoos, in the menageries of circuses and otherwise scattered over the face of the earth, Frank Buck, perhaps beyond any other adventurer in the wilds, is competent to single out the ten most deadly foes of mankind to be found in the Malaysian wilderness.

Unhesitatingly, he places the tiger at the top of his list as "Public Enemy No. 1." Beginning with that beautifully striped and utterly savage animal he sets down the complete ten, in the order of their threat to the peace of mankind, as follows: Tiger, black leopard, selodang (forest buffalo), king cobra, sloth bear, rogue elephant, Russell's viper, black spitting cobra, rhinoceros and crocodile.

Any one of these would be bad enough as a competitor in isolated combat; approached in a jungle morass where they might as easily as not decide to make an organized attack, they would be pretty terrible—as Mr. Buck will tell you.

Personally, we much prefer "Pete," the ring-eyed dog!

Another distinguished arrival in Washington yesterday was Mme. Maria Jeritza, celebrated diva, who will appear in the National Theater tonight in the title role of Rudolf Friml's newest operetta, "Annina." This will be Mme. Jeritza's first appearance here in light operetta and Friml's first full-length musical in something over five years.

G. W. Does Noted Play.

"Journey's End" will be presented by Cue and Curtain, the dramatic organization of George Washington University, on Thursday and Friday, April 26 and 27, in the Wardman Park Theater.

"Journey's End" will be recalled as the play written by R. C. Sherriff, a British amateur, which, after a successful run in London, was imported to these shores, where it scored one of the outstanding hits of its season as the grimmest and truest of all the dramas to come out of the Great War.

It subsequently was made into a picture in which the stellar role was played by Colin Clive, last seen on a local stage as leading man with Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake."

His work in two forthcoming Paramount pictures—Earl Carroll's "Murder at the Vanities" and Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin"—was completed last Saturday and Duke Ellington and his orchestra, recently heard as a topline attraction at the Earle, on March 29 will open at the Paramount Theater in Los Angeles, with Ivie Anderson and "Snake Hips" Tucker as featured specialists. On April 5, Ellington and his instrumentalists will make their debut at Frank Sebastian's Cotton Club in Culver City, Calif., following which they will play a week of one-night dance engagements before going into San Francisco for a run.

Dots and Dashes.

Romaine Stevens, Helen Shields, Dorothy Winchcole and Howard Whitfield, all former students of the Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts, conducted by Steven E. Cochran, manager of the National, have been prominently cast in "Devil in the House" . . . This would be a three-act drama by Murray Sheehan and Margaret Wright . . . It will be given its world premiere by the Bartfield Players on the evenings of April 5 and 6 . . . It is Miss Isabelle M. Parks who happened to listen-in to the Fifteenth Anniversary Program of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians recently, and so got herself whipped into a fury . . . In all of his talk before the "mike," Fred never once made mention of Washington . . . And Washington had a great deal to do with his early start . . . He has played here a greater total number of weeks than in almost any other city in the country . . . Yet we didn't merit a mention . . . In presenting "Good-bye Again," in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School Auditorium on Saturday, April 14, the Montgomery Players offer locally the first nonprofessional performance of this recent Broadway success . . . The official Carnera-Loughran championship fight pictures are soon coming as close to the Capital as they ever get . . . W. E. S. Wilcox is playing them at his Seco Theater, in Silver Spring, Md., on this Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday . . . Sidney Lust will have them at his Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, on April 3 and 4 . . . The combined musical clubs of the United States Naval Academy announce "So What?" their annual musical comedy production on Saturday of this week, March 31 . . . Your dramatic critic is invited to attend . . . And probably will . . . Why not?

Surprise! Surprise!

Well, at any rate, it didn't snow yesterday!

Impresario Spitalny and His Sensational Sirens

This noted musical conductor and his all-feminine ensemble are currently presenting one of the most unusual acts ever seen on a Washington stage—unusual both in the richness of its instrumental intervals and the vocal proficiency of its chorals. Included in the personnel are instrumentalists, singers and dancers of notable skill, who contribute to a versatile and consistently entertaining performance.

Straight From the Studios

Sam Goldwyn Engages Ace Musical Comedy Producer; Dorothy Dell and Grace Bradley "Put On Act;" Picture Pageant Along Boulevard.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, March 25.—Sam Goldwyn does nothing by halves. He brings foreign actresses all the way to Hollywood on a chance they will make good; he selects one of the most noted theatrical designers to work on forthcoming productions and has now topped himself by signing Alexander A. Aarons, New York stage producer.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU.

Aarons will join the Goldwyn producing organization immediately. That the film entrepreneur plans more musical pictures is evidenced by the new acquisition, since Aarons is favorably known on Broadway as co-producer with Freedly of such hit shows as "Lady Be Good," "Girl Crazy," "Hold Everything" and "Tip Toes."

Young Actresses Make Good.

Two of the screen's younger actresses have made good and are being rewarded with long-term contracts. They are Muriel Evans and Steffi Duna.

The blonde Miss Evans, who in the past year has appeared in several important film roles, was last week granted a new contract by M. G. M. She is a Minneapolis girl, and started her career in dramatic stock there. Later she was a "discovery" of Robert Z. Leonard, director. She is a dancer as well as actress.

Miss Duna made an excellent impression on R. K. O. studio executives for her performance with Francis Lederer in "A Man of Two Worlds," and last week also came into possession of a long-term agreement. Her next role has not been decided as yet.

Postponement Is Announced.

Due to casting difficulties, "Canal Boy" will not be made this season, according to Charles R. Rogers, producer. Instead, "I Loved an Actress," written by Gregory Ratoff, and assertedly written about Mrs. Ratoff (Eugenie Leontovich), will be substituted on the schedule.

Rogers is attempting to secure Adolphe Menjou and Miriam Hopkins for the leading roles. Miss Hopkins was just recently assigned to "She Loves Me Not," with Bing Crosby.

Leading Lady Sought.

Quest for a suitable leading lady for "Grand Canary," which is to star Warner Baxter, goes forward, and the production will be held up until at least the twenty-eighth inst.

So far, besides Baxter, the cast includes Marjorie Rambeau, John Halliday and Zita Johann. Irving Cummings will direct.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Louise Fazenda is the newest addition to the M. G. M. roster. She was signed Saturday on a long-term contract.

When Charles Laughton returns to England after playing Louis XVI in Hollywood, he will take the leading part in a film of Baroness Orczy's, "The Scariet Pimpernel," with Alexander Korda as his director.

There will apparently be no dearth of musical pictures as the year progresses. While the present "cycle" of tuneful films is about over, or so everyone thought, M. G. M. comes forward with an announcement of another comedy with music, called "Student Tour."

"Student Tour" will enlist the services of two stellar lights of the comedy field, namely, Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth. Experts at different types of fun-making, the pair will be cofeatured in the new production, which will relate the adventures of college boys and girls on a trip around the world.

Monta Bell is to produce the picture and Charles Reisner has been assigned to direct it.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, March 25.—Karen Morley and her husband, Charles Vidor, had fully intended going down to the desert and building a little house on a lot they own down there.

But they have changed their minds. That wonderful baby of theirs should have a lot of things, and also the baby needs a trust fund started. Also their new home is just suffering for a new Badminton court. So, instead of the desert trip and house, that's how their money will go.

KAREN MORLEY.

Dorothy and Grace Scrap.

Film workers on a set suffered a bad ten minutes in a tense atmosphere of barbed feminine wrangling at the Paramount studio when Dorothy Dell and Grace Bradley exchanged personalities from which all courtesy was deleted.

Miss Bradley was rehearsing a dance when in walked Miss Dell to rehearse a song she will sing in "The Man Who Broke His Heart."

Asked what she thought of the dance, Miss Dell answered: "The dance is good, but I don't think so much of the dancer." Miss Bradley gasped. When Miss Dell finished her song, Miss Bradley asked caustically: "Do you really expect to sing like that in a picture?"

An then came words in a torrent, to the horror of all spectators, but before the riot call went out, the two gals burst out laughing and threw their arms around each other. They're old pals from Broadway, and they'd only been joking to kid the crowd.

Mary MacLaren Author.

Mary MacLaren is not only making an acting comeback in talking pictures, but she has also turned author.

In collaboration with Laurie Brazee, script clerk at the Radio studios, she has written an original screen story called:: "Bachelor's Canal." The story is based on Miss MacLaren's experiences and observations in India, where she lived for two years with her former husband, a colonel in the British army. The locale is a famous canal in Kashmir, where unmarried army officers from all over India go to vacation and romance.

Heard On The Boulevard.

Hugh Williams has solved the problem of how to keep his family in London appraised of what he does in Hollywood. Making his debut in a Fox picture he recently bought a home-movie outfit and is busy having pictures taken of himself, and the projecting outfit will be sent to London. He says it obviates letter writing . . . Victor McLaglen on the set of "Murder at the Vanities" teaching Gail Patrick to speak Arabic. And there's nobody around to criticize his accent.

Joan Crawford sending an unknown admirer an autographed picture of herself. It happened this way. A 10-year-old girl fan of Joan's wrote her a heart-broken letter telling how her most cherished possession—a print of Joan—had been stolen. "And it was in a nice silvery frame, too," wailed the youngster. So the great-hearted Joan is sending another picture to replace the purloined article—and it is autographed and in a real silver frame, too . . . Bob Montgomery having a little experience as trust officer. He put a nickel in a pay telephone at M. G. M., got a busy buzz, and upon hanging up, to get his nickel back, was amazed by a shower of small coins falling out of the instrument. He gathered up $12.50 and turned it in to the cashier for the telephone collector to come and pick up.

Gayety

"GOLDEN CROOKS." Hirst-Lake production, starring Billie Arlington. Wanda DeVon and Wade & Wade, with Georgia Clarke, "Bubbles" Yvonne, June Rhoades, Viola Jordan, Al Weber, Willie Gordon, Brownie Sick, Phil Stone, Howard Paden and Kane & Harris. Staged under the direction of Frankie Bryant. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Once again Col. James J. Lake has taken an excursion into the past and returned with a show-stopping comic, this time in the person of Billie Arlington, who this week is making his reentry into the "smoker circuits" after a lapse of nearly a decade.

Bozo Snyder started it, and Billie keeps it going, this parade of talent that makes the current crop of burlesque comedians look like something less than the funnymen they are supposed to be. With no especial fanfare of trumpets or sounding symbals, Billie makes his entrance, but when he concludes his music (?) number he is greeted with an ovation that the hallowed walls of the Gayety have not heard in years.

Tremendous is a mild word for that reception, and, for the first time in easy recollection, a comedian is forced to respond with a "thank you!" All his work is great, and he is ably assisted in his various numbers by Brownie Sick, Viola Jordan and Howard Paden.

The other comics are only slightly less good—and despite all billings to the contrary, it is the men of the company who this week claim all the honors. There is Al Weber, whose blending of an Ed Wynn make-up and Joe Penner presentation adds to the jollification, and Willie Gordon, as the Jewish comic, is not without his moments of pungent funning.

Howard Paden is the principal straight, with Brownie Sick acting as alternate.

Ovation number two was accorded the return engagement of Wade & Wade, the extraordinary eccentric-tap duo, whose work is well known here.

While not in numbers exactly what one would call minor, the girls of the company must be relegated to a position of lesser importance. Of the principal, Wanda DeVon is aces, closely followed by "Bubbles" Yvonne, with Georgia Clarke and June Rhoades completing the roster of possessors of the "these, them and those" for which shekels are shoved under the wicket. As prima donna of the week, Viola Jordan will pass muster.

Kane & Harris is an above average adagio team, whose several numbers add color and movement to the scenes.

World Is Ready For War Again, Tydings Warns

Tercentenary Speaker at University Sees Only "Dismal Outlook."

"The world is prepared for war," Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday told a huge assembly gathered at the University of Maryland in celebration of formal opening of the State's Tercentenary.

"Men do not seek to allay international hatreds and jealousies," he continued, "It seems as if they are promoting these abnormalities of human conduct. It is a dismal outlook.

"Since the Armistice in 1918, armies have grown and not decreased. France has a standing army of 600,000 trained and equipped men; Italy, 350,000; while our own great country ranks twelfth in the size of its standing army and those of Spain, England, China, Japan, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Russia and Poland outnumber ours.

Calls Present Troubled.

"Our past is a story of the slaughter of 10,000,000 men upon 10,000 battlefields; of the clang and clash of mighty armada upon the seven seas; of the sordid and selfish plottings of kings and knaves for power, wealth and gain.

"Today we live in equally troubled times. The forces of greed and tolerance have taken a new from and caused the suffering of millions of people all over the earth.

"Against this chaotic background the wide vision and the circumstances which marked the founding of the colony of Maryland 300 years ago stand out like a beacon light.

Cites Tolerance Ideal.

"In truth, that happy event was like a sparkling jewel set in the history of the universe. The stature of the man who conceived the ideal of religious tolerance looms large, both in comparison with the times which preceded his life and, indeed, with those that have followed it.

"It is doubtful if any event since the birth and life of Christ has so greatly influenced the lives of men as has Maryland's contribution to civilization."

Senator Tydings was met and escorted to the university gymnasium, where the exercises were held, by members of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Roster of Milk Producers Had Steady Growth

Maryland and Virginia Unit Controls Most of Capital's Supply.

[The tenth of a series of stories on the cooperative farm organizations of Virginia.]

The oldest milk producers' association serving Virginia dairymen is the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., with headquarters here.

Although incorporated as a cooperative marketing association in 1920, it dates back to 1907. In the early days the association served primarily as a protest organization to induce the dealers to raise the price of milk. It then had no paid officers.

After incorporating in 1920, the association employed a manager and established permanent headquarters in Washington. Many dairymen shipping milk here joined and turned responsibility for selling their milk over to the association. The organization now has over 1,150 members who supply 90 per cent of the fluid milk used here.

The association has been beset with difficulties. In 1921 the officers were unable to obtain from the distributors what they considered a fair price for milk not needed for fluid milk or cream. The association therefore spent $45,000 to equip a plant to handle whatever surplus milk the distributors were unwilling to purchase at top prices. The membership expanded rapidly, and in 1923 a second surplus plant was established in Frederick, Md. Throughout 1924 the milk handled through these two plants averaged 7,500 gallons per day.

Surplus Was Problem.

In 1924 the directors brought in a new manager, John McGill, jr., who had had experience in handling milk in Cumberland, Md. During the same year the association adopted the basic-surplus plan for paying the members for the milk they delivered to the association. Under this plan the sales of fluid milk at the top price are equitably allotted among the various producers, and whatever milk they produce above this basic quantity is paid for at a lower price, depending upon the price received for cream used for ice cream.

The association has maintained a reasonably fair price to the members, although the volume of milk handled has more than doubled between 1925 and 1931, when it reached 22,244,274 gallons.

As consumption declined in 1932, the association called on the members to curtail their production. The majority responded, but some maintained an overlarge production. In May, 1933, the association adopted the three-price plan whereby producers who send in more milk than their pro rata share of the milk used for fluid milk and cream receive only the low price of ice cream ingredients for their additional production. This plan has worked equitably and has been effective in adjusting production to consumption.

Now Controls 90 Per Cent.

In 1930, the association convinced all large dealers on the Washington market that they would benefit to buy their entire milk supply from the associatiton. This development gave the association control over the marketing of about 90 per cent of all of the milk coming on to the Washington market.

The association employs two field men to assist members to meet health department requirements to ship the kind of milk that distributors pay premium prices for. The field men also check the milk to make sure that members receive full pay.

For these various services, the association charges the members brokerage of 1 cent per gallon. Only about half of this amount is needed to pay operating expenses of the association. The rest goes into the reserve fund which now is almost half a million dollars. This large reserve fund puts the association in a strong bargaining position.

The association is managed by directors. Five represent Virginia producers, five Maryland producers, and one is from West Virginia. Over half of the milk comes from Virginia. Frank S. Walker, of Orange, Va., has served as president for several years and was reelected in 1934.

"Mystery Man" Sought as Girl Dies of Poison

Young Matron Says Draft Was Forced on Her; Sees Suicide Possibility.

Portsmouth, Va., March 26 (AP).—Police today sought to solve the mystery surrounding the death of 17-year-old Elnora Ferrell.

In her dying statement in a hospital here last night the young married woman, a waitress here, told police a man near her home Sunday seized her and forced poison down her throat.

Police admitted the possibility of suicide, but found no bottle the girl might have used and dropped.

H. E. Harris, her brother-in-law, in whose house she lived, said he was awakened about 4 a. m. yesterday by Mrs. Ferrell, who ran to his room screaming in agony. He took her to a hospital, where she died last night.

The girl told officers that after working late at the restaurant she walked home and started to enter by the back door. While ascending the steps, gloved hands grabbed her, and while one of them forced open her mouth the other poured the acid down her throat. Her assailant then fled she said.

An inquest will be held after the story is probed further.

Tax Increase in Sight.

Brough Given D. C.-Virginia Boundary Job

Arkansan Appointed by Roosevelt to Act for Washington.

Former Governor Also Has Made Name as Educator.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed Charles Hillman Brough, former Governor of Arkansas, as a member of the District-Virginia boundary commission recently authorized by act of Congress.

Brough has had a distinguished career as an educator as well as a statesman. A holder of Ph. D. and LL. D. degrees, he was professor of history, economics and philosophy at various times at Mississippi College, Hillman College and the University of Arkansas. He has recently been a special lecturer at the latter institution.

Brough will represent the District on the commission. A second member is to be named by the Governor of Virginia, and a third will be chosen by these two members. The boundary bill authorizes $10,000 for the investigation and report.

Titles to considerable property just across the Potomac River is involved in the boundary question, and for this reason the bill was sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia.

One of the questions to be decided by the commission is whether the District-Virginia boundary should be drawn at the present high-water mark of the Potomac River or at the high-water mark that existed when the land was ceded to the Federal Government by Maryland. At that time the southern bank of the river was located at what is now Roaches Run, south of the Washington-Hoover Airport.

Consequently, the local municipal airport issue is tied up in the inquiry.

Woman Sues District For $200,000 in Fall

The District government was named defendant in a suit for $20,000 damages because Etta M. Covell, 3500 Fourteenth street northwest, slipped on a pebble on the sidewalk and received serious injuries.

The suit charges that on March 29, 1931, the plaintiff was walking on Holmead place when the accident occurred. She claimed she remained in a hospital for 11 weeks.

Hit by Bottle, Youth Expires; Milkman Held

Driver Asserts He Swung Missile to Ward Off Attack.

A milkman was held for action of a coroner' jury yesterday, after Richard Winstead, 20, reported victim of an early morning street fight, died in Gallinger Hospital.

The milkman, Harold Miller, 2800 block of Bunker Hill road northwest, was arrested for questioning by homicide squad detectives. He is alleged to have struck Winstead with a milk bottle during an argument March 18.

Miller told Detective Sergt. John W. Wise that he wielded the bottle in self-defense. He was delivering milk in the 400 block of Maryland avenue northeast, when Winstead attacked him, the milkman said.

Winstead, who lived in the 1600 block of Avon place northwest, was reported to have smashed headlights of the milk truck after Miller refused to give him a bottle of milk.

The milkman told police he used an empty bottle to protect himself.

"The man swung at me," Miller is quoted as saying, "and I picked up an empty bottle and hit him. I didn't think the blow was hard enough to hurt him seriously."

Winstead, after first-aid treatment at Providence Hospital, was charged with being drunk and disorderly at the Fourth Precinct station. He was lodged in a cell, and several hours later complained of a severe headache. His condition was at first reported as "not serious," but examination at Gallinger Hospital revealed he suffered a fractured skull.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald withheld an inquest date pending investigation.

But the Police Teletype Wasn't Kidding.

Unintentional humor was recorded on the police teletype system yesterday. A report clicked over the wire. It was headed:

"Petit larceny—nuts."

Continuing, the message stated that David Labroasa, 2900 block of Twelfth street northwest, reported the theft of some assortment nuts. He said several packages of walnuts and peanuts were taken from his stand near Thirteenth and G streets northwest. He valued his loss at $20.

Contempt Rule May Set Last "Bootie" Free

Justice O'Donoghue Will Render Decision Tomorrow.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue of the District Supreme Court tomorrow will rule on whether Jack E. O'Hearne, the District's last "prohibition" prisoner, will be freed from District Jail.

O'Hearne's case is complicated by the fact that he is serving 10 months for contempt of court. The contempt grew out of a violation of the prohibition law, and upon that O'Hearne pins his hopes.

Justice Jennings Bailey sentenced O'Hearne to 10 months and a $1,000 fine for violating a personal injunction issued when Federal authorities reported that he was a persistent violator of the law.

O'Hearne's contention is that since his sentence was based upon violation of the now-repudiated Volstead law, he should be freed along with the others who have been discharged from jail because of "public repudiation" of the prohibition laws.

Harry T. Johnson, sentenced to a year to 18 months, was liberated last week by Justice O'Donoghue, who held that since he was a violator of the prohibition law, which had been repudiated, he was entitled to freedom.

Romeo, Where Art Thou? And Echo Answers, "Jail!"

Romance laid a heavy hand on Romeo McDaniels, colored, in Police Court yesterday.

He was charged with assaulting a woman companion. Judge Isaac R. Hitt picked up his record.

"Romeo," he said, "here's a love letter for you. According to this record, you have been here 19 times on misdemeanor charges. Six months in jail."

Chewning Burial Rites Held at Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., March 26 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Betty Chewning, 50, who died in the Mary Washington Hospital Thursday night, were conducted yesterday by the Rev. E. V. Peyton, at Wilderness Church.

Mrs. Chewning is survived by her husband, three sons, Fred, of Culpeper, and Eugene and Stewart, of Spotsylvania Courthouse; three daughters, Viola, of Washington, and Alma and Sophia, of Spotsylvania Courthouse; three brothers, and one sister.

30-Cent Slash In D. C. Taxes Up to Bureau

Blanton Proposal's Future Hinges on Action by Board Tomorrow.

Attitude of the House District Appropriations sub-committee on the proposal of Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, to reduce the District tax rate from $1.50 to $1.20 will depend on what the Budget Bureau does with the $4,000,000 supplemental estimates, it was indicated yesterday.

The sub-committee will start marking up the District bill tomorrow, and if at that time the supplemental estimates have not arrived it is likely that it will look with favor on Blanton's proposal as a means of absorbing the 1935 surplus.

It is understood that Blanton's proposed shake-up in District personnel will not be ordered, however, at this time, although the Commissioners have agreed to take it under consideration.

Neither is it considered likely that the three Mapes bills, which Blanton advocated as a means of reducing the District tax rate as low as 90 cents, will be considered at this session.

The 1935 bill, carrying a budget of about $36,000,000, is expected to be approved by the sub-committee. This means that the $5,700,000 Federal contribution provided this year will be repeated next year.

District officials made a vain plea that this amount be raised to somewhat nearer the former basis of 60-40, or at least to the $9,000,000 level that it adhered to for several years.

The Senate, however, is expected to fight for a larger contribution. It probably will seek to fix a percentage to govern future District appropriation bills, so that District officials will not be confronted with uncertainty each year in drawing up department estimates.

Woman Asks $50,000 For Injuries to Child

Injured by a truck December 19, 1933, Norman O'Neill, a minor, through his mother, Mrs. Susie O'Neill, 921 East Capitol street, yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme Court against Mary Shapiro, 715 Ingraham street northwest, owner of the truck.

The suit asks $50,000 damages.

Sued on Promissory Note.

George N. Ray, 1223 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday, in District Supreme Court, was named defendant in a suit filed by Cary A. Hardee, receiver of the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. The suit seeks to enforce payment of a promissory note with a face value of $5,746.35, allegedly overdue.

Stuck!

First the Ham, and Now the Jail-House.

Because things seem to have a habit of "sticking to his fingers," Dallas McNair, colored, 29, went to jail for 60 days yesterday.

McNair was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Police Court, charged with stealing a ham from the O Street Market.

"Judge," he pleaded, "that ham just seemed to stick to my fingers."

Judge Hitt passed sentence after the man's record showed numerous other "sticky-finger" cases.

7,000 to Get Relief Jobs Here April 1

CWA Will Dismiss 1,500 Skilled Workers in City Today.

Highway Department Studies Proposal to Hire 4,000.

Jobs for 7,000 workers in need of relief were approved yesterday by the work planning and job assigning committee of the District CWA, to become effective on April 1, after the termination of the CWA program.

The CWA will today dismiss 1,500 skilled workers, who may have difficulty in obtaining positions under the emergency works program, since all employes on the new projects must be taken from the relief rolls.

Many of these skilled workers, who were never the subject of direct relief, are not on the list of needy cases, and a great many of them are not eligible for relief. Their dismissal is expected to delay the completion of the swimming pools at the Banker and Takoma Park Recreation Centers, which are about 75 per cent completed.

Pools to Be Delayed.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA, estimates that the dismissal of these workers wil delay completion of the pools until late in May.

Proposals to employ 4,000 additional workers are being studied by the committee. The plans were submitted yesterday by the District Highway Department. Action on this proposal will be taken today, when additional projects are to be considered by the committee.

The programs given approval by the committee were offered by Gallinger Hospital, the U. S. Navy Yard, the District Sanitary Engineer, Water Department, Smithsonian Institution, District Repair Shop, and the District National Guard. Other proposals from District and Federal agencies will be considered during the week.

15,000 Jobs Projected.

Projects to be considered call for the employment of 15,000 men. There are now 10,000 men on the CWA pay rolls and this will be reduced today to 8,500. When the CWA was at its employment peak, there were 19,000 persons engaged in District and Federal projects.

The plan of Capt. Clark is to limit costs of materials to 10 per cent of the total funds allotted from Federal headquarters. There has been no allotment granted as yet; but the amount for the District is expected to be announced within a few days. All employes will be restricted to a minimum work week of 24 hours.

The stores robbed and their approximate losses were Efird's Department Store, safe cracked, $2,500 to $3,000; F. and W. Grand Co., 5 and 10-cent store, $2,500; Willard's Cleaners and Dyers, small amount of cash and clothing; City Laundry, $20 and clothing.

Gogo, Where Art Thou Going? Nowhere! And Everyone's Gaga

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. HUGO R. RENNERT.

Pymy Slave's in Spain and Mrs. Rennert Can't Get Him Out.

Gogo—sound the g's hard, else he may be confused with dog-faced boy—is having a difficult time gaining entry into the United States despite the persevering efforts of a Washington society matron, Mrs. Hugo R. Rennert, jr., who is his sponsor.

It isn't because Gogo has the height of a 3-year-old child, although he is 30 years old, or because he plays the guitar, that there are complications. The trouble is that Gogo is a slave, and slavery, when frankly called that, is outlawed in this country.

The pygmy, all 36 inches of him, is now in Seville, Spain, as houseboy to Gen. Nunez de Prado, who is captain general of Andalusia and Mrs. Rennert's stepfather. His owner wishes to give him to the Washington society woman and she is willing to accept the offer, but obstacles sprang up yesterday at the State and Labor Departments and the Spanish Embassy.

The State Department said a slave would not be permitted to enter this country. Miss Perkins' Labor Department, whose immigration bureau also is interested in such matters, expressed the same sentiment. Nor could Mrs. Rennert obtain permission from the Spanish Embassy, which refused to admit Gogo in the Nation's immigration quota because he is a Liberian.

Mrs. Rennert is discouraged, but she hasn't given up hope.

"He is very intelligent and I am very anxious to see him, but I think we are going to have trouble getting him in," she declared yesterday. "I think he will like it here."

The pygmy's other accomplishments besides guitar playing are French and Spanish, waiting tables, running errands and making himself a useful household servant. Mrs. Rennert emphasized she would not keep him as a slave, but give him the status of a house servant.

He has been in the family six years, said Mrs. Rennert. Gen. de Prado bought the dusky chattel on the island of Fernando Po.

Just what are Gogo's reactions to all this stir is unknown. While American and Spanish dignitaries are emitting opinions and Mrs. Rennert is pleading his case, the person most affected is going about his chores in Seville as usual.

Whether Gogo prefers to come here as a freeman in the employ of Mrs. Rennert in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, or stay where he is, as a slave, has not been learned. In the argument over principles, he's been quite forgotten.

Way to Tell Sex of Baby Chicks Taught as Timely Easter Tip

Federal Scientists Help Hatchery Men to Solve Old Puzzle; Vitamin C Place in Sun Again Brought to Fore.

By Robert F. Whitney.

Lady or gentleman, future egg-layer or friend chicken? That's the problem every time a baby chick shakes off its shell and is born.

It seems that each baby chick keeps his (or her) choice of vocation a secret for several weeks until the young cockerels begin to sprout a comb and try out their young voices in imitation of the adult chanticleer.

And it's an important problem in some circles. Picture the chicken farmer whose specialty is eggs and who buys 5,000 baby chicks from a hatchery, hoping to get 2,500 pullets to add to his flock of layers.

The farmer doesn't know the sex of the chicks he buys and when it turns out that practically all of the 5,000 are young cockerels, it is hard luck. But such things happen often.

For the last four months the Department of Agriculture has been working on the problem. Yesterday it was announced that specialists had been trained who are 90 per cent perfect in guessing the sex of baby chicks.

The department also announced that it is publishing a bulletin giving directions so chicken raisers can make their own predictions—so they can learn to tell, with fair accuracy, just how their chicks will turn out.

This practice was learned from the Japanese, where professionally trained men are employed at large hatcheries to determine the sex of the new-born chicks. These men can handle as many as 5,000 baby chicks a day.

Results of important research on rheumatic fever—heart disease of children which occurs in the late winter and early spring—has been announced at the Public Health Service. The work indicates that lack of Vitamin C is one cause of the disease.

The experiments were performed upon guinea pigs which were fed for three weeks on a diet lacking in vitamin C, the vitamin which prevents scurvy. These animals were then inoculated with streptococcus germ. Later they were killed and dissected.

Examination of their hearts showed injuries similar to those found in human cases of rheumatic fever. Normal guinea pigs which were not deprived of the vitamin were not affected by the germs.

Vitamin C is found in fresh fruits and vegetables. Lack of it caused scurvy—that dread disease which was found on ships where for long periods men lived without any fresh foods.

Children who have rheumatic fever are usually those from poor homes. It happens in the season when fresh fruits and vegetables are most difficult and expensive to get. Scientists have thought for some time that the disease is caused by some factor which makes the body susceptible to streptococcus infection. The new experiments add further evidence to that belief.

Board to Issue Rum Licenses Despite Deeds

Prettyman Rules Nearby Owners May Sue Licensees.

Ancient covenants in property deeds against the use of certain real estate for the sale of liquor will not prevent the issuance of liquor licenses, to applicants who have establishments on such property, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, declared yesterday.

Agreements in the property deeds were invoked by property owners in the Mount Pleasant section and owners of real estate along Fourteenth street from Florida avenue to Park road, in an effort to bar liquor licenses in that area.

These agreements were used as arguments before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, but Chairman George W. Offutt ruled that the question was for the courts to determine, since the board is not vested with authority to determine matters of law.

The question was then referred to Mr. Prettyman, who ruled that the liquor board may grant licenses in spite of agreements, but that the licensee has no protection against any court action taken by owners of adjoining property for violation of the covenants.

In another opinion the corporation counsel ruled the Baltimore & Ohio Railway must pay one-half the total cost of the Piney Branch Subway, and not only one-half the cost of the actual right of way, as was contended by the company.

Milton Phillips Dies From Heart Attack

Milton Phillips, 57, employed in the Department of Justice for the last 23 years, was fatally stricken with a heart attack on his way home yesterday to Barnesville, Md. He was taken off the train at Boydsville. Phillips was a past master of the Masonic Lodge at Poolesville, Md.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Algia Poole, of Duck Lodge, Md.; three sons, James Edward, of Washington, and Byron and Bruce Phillips, of Barnesville; a daughter, Mrs. Charles White, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Worthington Wood, of Woods Lock, Md.

North Capitol Receiver Files Assessment Suit

John S. Bryan, receiver for the North Capitol Savings Bank, yesterday instituted suit in the District Supreme Court against Eugene S. Burgess, 236 Seventh street southeast, for a 100-per cent assessment on 260 bank shares standing in his name.

The suit, filed by Hill, Ross & Hill, declared Burgess had failed to pay an assessment levied by authority of the Treasury Department. He is alleged to owe the receiver $10 a share.

Franciscan Monastery Loses $18 to Robbers

Thieves entered the Franciscan Monastery yesterday and escaped with $18 from a cash drawer. The money was taken from the drawer of a souvenir counter, police were told.

District Law On Insurance Held Obsolete

Deputy Superintendent Urges New Code at Hearing.

Asserts Policy Holders Would Be Better Protected.

The District insurance code was characterized as antiquated yesterday at a hearing on a bill to establish a new code, before the insurance subcommittee of the House District Committee.

John B. Payne, deputy superintendent of insurance, who helped draft the bill several years ago, was the principal witness before the subcommittee, headed by Representative Harlan (Democrat), Ohio.

The present code is inadequate and the present staff of the superintendent of insurance is too small, he said, whereas the proposed code would give the District government better means to protect policyholders.

The code would cover all insurance operations save those of fraternal companies, Payne said, and would establish a proper relationship between insurance laws in the District and those in other States.

License fees in the District are too high, he said, and it is impossible to keep an adequate check on licensed solicitors.

The present code does not provide properly for court disposition and liquidation of insolvent insurance companies, Payne added, and tax collection regulations are so complicated that they have caused the District to lose considerable revenue within recent years.

Howard W. Casey, representing the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, of New York, and the Acacia Insurance Co., of Washington, approved the bill in general, but offered several amendments.

J. A. Marshall, superintendent of insurance, and Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, registered their general approval, but said they would submit amendments.

Seder Will Mark Passover Season

Jewish Center Will Offer Rites for Veterans.

The Jewish War Veterans and the Jewish Community Center will commemorate the Passover holidays for the Jewish community of Washington by a community Seder Friday at 6:30 p. m. in the Center Auditorium.

The ceremony will duplicate the services held for the American Expeditionary Force in Paris in 1919. Al Shefferman, who conducted these services, will officiate at the center rites. All Jewish veterans in nearby hospitals will attend as guests.

The committees include Nat Silverberg, Tobias Cooper, Albert Jacobson, Joe Barr, Dr. Meyer Ostrower, Dr. Ivy Pelzman, Mrs. Judith Harmel, David Wiener, Edward Rosenblum, Maurice Bisgyer and Abe Shefferman.

Dr. Gibbs to Head Booster Committee

The 1934 booster committee of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association was appointed yesterday, with Dr. M. G. Gibbs as chairman, and Lewis A. Payne, vice chairman.

Others appointed were R. P. Andrews, Frederick Buckholz, C. H. Dikeman, P. M. Dorsch, T. R. Fitzgerald, Charles H. Frame, Franklin W. Harper, Louis Levay, Mark Lansburgh, Bert L. Olmsted, William E. Advent of Lively Ball Makes Giants Question Mark of Major Leagues

Their Ability To Repeat Is Doubted

N. Y. Experts Viewing 8 Exhibition Defeats With Alarm.

Trading of Davis Seen as Proof of Terry's Uncertainty.

NEW YORK, March 26 (U.P.).—The world champion New York Giants within the past week have become the question mark of the major leagues.

This is somewhat heartening, because just a year ago Bill Terry's outfit was not even a question mark. It was just a puny little punctuation, like a comma, that the writers could insert at will into any desired niche in the National League's second division.

At this time in 1933 the Giants were training at Los Angeles, and war correspondents with them were so disgusted at the pathetic performance of the "hitless wonders" that some of them actually asked their offices to transfer them to a club that might be going somewhere.

Again some of the camp followers of the New Yorkers, down at Miami this season, are beginning to send tear drops trickling over the wires in reporting the misdeeds of the Terrymen. However, their stories generally are tempered with caution. The writing boys can not forget the trouncing the Giants gave their predictions in 1933 by smashing through to the world championship.

Opinions Have Changed.

However, the general confidence of experts and fans in the champions has been dissipated recently. When the Giants started training on March 1, the baseball world was supremely confident that they would repeat for the pennant, at least. But their record of eight defeats against seven victories in training, and their crowning ignominy of losing a five-game series to the St. Louis Browns sapped this reassurance.

The baseball selectors have not started their predictions yet, but it's a safe bet that not more than three out of ten will pick the Giants to repeat for the National flag.

Manager Terry no longer seems certain that his team will drive through to another championship, depending largely upon excellent pitching and airtight infield play. He admitted this over the week-end when he traded his regular centerfielder, George Davis, to the Cards for George Watkins. Davis is an excellent defense player, but was disappointing as a hitter in 1933. His batting mark was .258. Watkins, while not so keen in the field, outhit Davis by 20 points.

This trade was taken as a tip-off that Terry believes the livelier baseball will make a difference to his Giants and that they can not remain "hitless wonders" and win over such clubs as the Cards, Cubs and Pirates.

Miami Sun Blamed.

Virtually all correspondents with the Giants have emphasized the fact that the men are like wornout garters—their snap is gone. They believe too much work under Miami's blazing sun has left them lethargic. In this instance, it is recalled that the Dodgers trained at Miami in 1933 and wound up the most disappointing club in the majors. When the Dodgers shifted to Orlando this year, President McKeever of the Brooklyn aggregation was frank in blaming Miami's warm climate for part of the Dodgers' misfortunes. However, the Giants may step out and prove that Miami had nothing to do with the Brooklyn debacle.

Meanwhile baseball followers throughout the country are waiting eagerly for the championship season to open; waiting to see just how the Giants will fare under the regime of the lively ball.

Moose Five Holds Edge.

Winchester, Va., March 26 (Spl.). Figures compiled at the close of the court season show the Winchester Moose to have played 18 games, 15 of which were won. They annexed 708 points to their opponents 503, never failing to score less than 13 points in any game.

O'Farrell Does Not Claim Flag But Predicts Improved Reds

All Hustling Under New Owners, He Says, Sees Help From Vance and Derringer; Foresees Contender by 1936.

TAMPA, Fla., March 26 (AP).—If their performances in the grape-fruit circuit are a criterion, the Cincinnati Reds will no longer be the push-over of the National League this season. Under new ownership and management, the Reds have an entirely different outlook in baseball life, as a consequence of which they are showing more hustle and spirit than at any time in recent years. Ancient pitching arms, batting eyes that were beginning to dim and legs that creaked last season all show a tendency toward recovery under the new administration.

"It is remarkable what a little more confidence in the future will do for a ball club," says Manager Bob O'Farrell, who has now been halfway round the National League and spent most of his baseball life in the company of pennant contenders.

O'Farrell Enthusiastic.

"Frankly, I was not very optimistic about this season, when I signed a two-year contract to pilot the Reds, but I am already convinced we have a greatly improved team.

"I do not mean to suggest we will be a pennant factor. Our first objective is to get out of last place. We might advance a couple of notches in the standing. But we will give every club in the league a real contest because all the players have an entirely different attitude this spring. Pitchers who got discouraged last season, knowing the team was going nowhere, will show big improvement. The veterans will give us everything they have, because they know that their jobs are at stake. The Reds are going to be rebuilt at every necessary spot, but those who produce for us now will not have to worry about their jobs."

Three Changes Effected.

Since O'Farrell took command under the organization headed by Powel Crosley, jr., as president, and Larry McPhail as general business manager, the principal player changes have involved the purchase of the old strikeout king, Dazzy Vance, from St. Louis, and the acquisition of Tony Piet, second baseman, and Adam Comorisky, outfielder, from the Pittsburgh Pirates in exchange for Red Lucas.

"Lucas won only ten games for the Reds last year and I am confident Vance will win a lot more than that this season," predicts O'Farrell. "Dazzy has shown me so far that he is not only determined but ready to pitch another season of good ball. He is 41 now and hasn't much longer to go in the big show but he has a lot of stuff.

"I look for a real comeback by Paul Derringer, still young and possessed with as much ability as any right-hander in the league. Silas Johnson, Larry Benton, Benny Frey, Sylvester Johnson, Ray Kolp, Jim Lindsey, Don Brennan, Fred Blake, Keith Frazier, Allyn Stout and Walter Hilcher give me plenty of pitching talent to pick the rest of the staff from. Vance, Benton, Si Johnson and Derringer likely will draw the main assignments.

May Bench Himself.

O'Farrell, in search of all possible hitting strength, will not hesitate to bench himself in favor of the raw-boned Ernie (Schnozzle) Lombardi, who atones for his lack of mechanical smoothness behind the plate by his ability to knock the ball to far places. Lombardi, when in the mood, has a clean-up wallop no less potent than that of Chick Hafey, the bespectacled outfielder. Piet, Comorosky and Sunny Jim Bottomley, the stylish first baseman, give the Reds a well-balanced attack.

The left side of the infield will be weak unless Mark Koenig, the former Yankee shortstop, and Earl (Sparky) Adams, veteran third baseman, can fill the bill. The replacements are limited, including Les Mallon, former Phillie, and Gordon Slade, former Dodger and Cardinal. The outfield, besides Hafey and Comorosky, will offer either Harry Rice or Johnny Moore, both tourists.

"We will strengthen the club at every possible turn this year," says O'Farrell, "but what we are really pointing for is a pennant contender by 1936. Toward that end we have combed the minors for some real prospects but it will be a season or two before you hear much about them."

Morristown High Gains Berth in Conference

Bristol, Va., March 26 (Spl.).—Morristown, Tenn., High School has been accepted as a member of the "Big Five" high school athletic conference of upper East Tennessee, the membership to become effective December 1, 1934. After that date, the conference will be known as the "Big Six."

When the Big Five was organized six years ago, Morristown was expected to become a member. However, schedule difficulties prevented its entrance at that time, and for six years the conference has continued with its original five members—Bristol, Johnson City, Kingsport, Elizabethton and Erwin.

At the recent spring meeting of Big Five officials, a number of conflicts were removed and Morristown was voted a member of the conference. Conflicts in the Morristown football schedule could not be eliminated for this fall, and the school will not enter the conference until the beginning of basket ball season.

Morristown will be a regular member of the conference, playing a complete schedule with other members of the conference in football, basket ball and track. Morristown is coached by Petie Siler, one of the deans in Tennessee coaching circles.

New York Vs. Chicago

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, March 26 (Spl.).—The seventh annual intercity Golden Gloves bouts of Chicago and vicinity amateur boxers against the New York ring champions are scheduled for Madison Square Garden Wednesday evening. These are the fights in which winners and losers of the Golden Gloves finals in each city forget their battles, their grudges and their private personal ambitions and band together against the common enemy. To the Chicagoan, the New York boxer is anathema. To the New Yorkers, the Chicagoans sell at 5 cents the dozen. This is a healthy state of affairs.

Wednesday night there will be a great public boxing of ears in which 32 young men engaged will let off a lot of steam and the spectators to the number of 19,000 or so who will be in the big sport theater will do likewise. Everybody feels better for the blessing of the exhaust valve of sport. Win or lose, everything that happens at the Garden Wednesday night will be for the best.

Take the Chicago boys. They will be a lone little band in a strange city, fighting a battle a thousand miles from home with every man's hand against them except the faithful retainers, trainers and coaches they bring with them. Do they need sympathy? Hell, no. There is no grander and more glorious feeling than to be making a lone stand in the very heart of the enemy country.

You'd like to hear some friendly voices, but you feel much sorrier for yourself if there are none and hence have a much better time. How they will burn with the injustice of it all! Each time we hit them there will be a great and happy roar from the crowd. Each time they hit us there will be a deprecating silence and 19,000 people will pretend that it never happened. The Chicagoans will grow furiouser and furiouser. And what fun they will have!

On the other hand, the athletes of New York will know the pure ecstacy of fighting before the home folks, of hearing every worthy deed and noble act applauded to the echo. They will know that 19,000 friends are there and in sympathy with their ideas. Each time they land a punch the house will rock with joy as 19,000 vicariously deal out the same punch to Chicago. Not that anybody has anything against Chicago. It just represents a rival city. On the odd years when we go thither, the Chicagoan gets the same thrill and the same satisfaction when the local boys bash New York ears and beezers.

These New York-Chicago jousts have been going on for some seven years now to the intense satisfaction of both cities and may be the forerunner of a series of these intercity steam letter offers all over the country. The Detroit and Cleveland Golden Glovers have been making faces at one another for years and why they don't fight it out is more than I can understand. This series, a natural, would build up in interest just as our own series has.

Boston vs. San Francisco would be another natural and Philadelphia and Pittsburgh ought to let their best amateurs fight it out annually. Its a great civic tonic and also a great show. In a great many cases it is the first time that the young men of the community come into contact with what we like to call civic pride. It does them a lot of good and it does the town good, too.

It is remarkable what a lather you can work yourself into over your own boys and how cool and, in a measure, hostile you find yourself toward the visiting firemen. The tearing tigers of New York are paragons of virtue—strong, fine, manly boys with knockout punches and who are good to their mothers and I love them all. I can see nothing but victory perched on our banners in all sixteen bouts.

On the other hand the boys from Chicago are ill-favored, surly, anemic, poor physical specimens who have no business in the same ring with our handsome and upstanding young men. I do not even think they are our social equals and do not know yet whether I shall permit our boys to shake hands with them. Our boys are the heroes, their boys are the villains; right, justice and good must triumph.

If we examine the minds of the Chicago contingent we would find that they felt that way about us, but that is beside the point. This business fills me with great righteousness and when we win I shall feel uplifted and consider that I had had a share in a great civic enterprise, though it be no more than sending in sixteen substitutes to smack the chins of sixteen total strangers from a town I rather love, as a clear matter of fact. And if we lose I shall suffer and be downcast. And that in a way will be amusing, too. I shall beef and complain that we were robbed, that the day of justice is at an end. Either way steam will escape.

Barry Faces Fidducia Tonight

D. C. Fighter Favorite Over Baltimorean at Portner's.

Visitor Has His Backers, However; Speed May Bother Foe.

ARMED with his trusty left hook and a sizzling right slap, Reds Barry, the Southeast Cyclone, steps out in front of a home-town audience again tonight at Portner's against Freddy Fidducia in an eight-round main event. Barry will have a big advantage in weight, experience and ballyhoo, but the Jersey light-heavy will have the mental edge—if any.

Fidducia has been kept under cover since he first showed signs of developing into a potential champion, and tonight's battle marks his first attempt against big-caliber opposition. His unveiling may be a brief one, if reports from other fight centers to the effect that Barry has developed greater punching power are to be credited. With a 25 or 30 pound weight advantage, Barry should be able to knock out the Jersey jaw-jabber, if he can wallop at all.

Fidducia Has Backers.

While Barry has been installed an odds-on favorite, many supposedly shrewd bettors on outcomes of prize fights are of the opinion that Fidducia will emerge the winner—and are backing up their beliefs with folding money. They believe that Fidducia's size, or rather lack of it, will prove an unsurmountable drawback to Barry, who usually depends on superior speed to dazzle the opposition.

Those who favor Fidducia, point out that Barry has always performed poorly against lighter, faster men, such as Joe Sekyra, Joe Knight, Bob Godwin and Lee Ramage. Whether Fidducia is to be classed with those more or less notable ring figures remains to be disclosed in the bout tonight.

New Faces in Prelims.

All new faces—some of them remodeled—feature the supporting card, which consists of three sixes and a four. Joe Vacchiano, whoever he may be, is slated to clash with Ed Alexander in one of the sextets; Joe Zoda, well known in Baltimore, bows in against Kid Bobbitt, another dark horse, in another, and the old familiar Keller Crawford from the Eastern Sho' bobs up against Johnny Marks, of the question marks, in the third.

In the four, Stanford Carrier will make his professional debut against Joe Buonavari.

Around the ring selections—Barry over Fidducia, Vacchiano to defeat Alexander, Zoda over Bobbitt, Keller Crawford to best Johnny Marks, Carrier over Buonavari.

Donahue to Umpire In American Association

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—One new name appears on the 1934 American Association staff of umpires announced today by President Thomas Jefferson Hickey. Pat Donahue, for the last six years with the Western League, is the newcomer.

Chester Swanson, carried last year as an extra, will work as a regular official this season. The rest of the staff: Garry Goetz, George Johnson, C. E. Johnston, W. F. Clayton, E. J. McLaughlin and Thomas P. Dunn.

Thil Wins Europe Light-Heavy Title

De Alfara Is Disqualified for Illegal Blows.

Paris, March 26 (U.P.).—Marcel Thil, of France, claimant of the world middleweight championship, added another brilliant to his boxing bonnet tonight when he wrested the European light-heavyweight title from Martinez de Alfara, of Spain.

Their bout at the Palais des Sports was stopped in the thirteenth round. The Spaniard was disqualified for low blows and illegal tactics. They were scheduled for 15 rounds.

Alfara opened up fast and won the first three rounds. After that Thil's smashing attack to the body slowed up the Spaniard, and Thil came on to win the rest of the rounds.

D. C. Boy Hero.

EARL CLARK,
whose homer in the eleventh yesterday enabled the Browns to beat the Buffalo Bisons, 9 to 8.

Clark's Homer In 11th Wins For Browns

Beats Bisons, 8-7, After Campbell's Pinch Four-Bagger Ties in 9th.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Manager Rogers Hornsby, going in at first base in the fifth inning, conducted his new St. Louis Browns to victory over the Buffalo Bisons here this afternoon, 8 to 7, in an eleven-inning contest.

The minors were leading into the ninth when Campbell, pinch hitting for Pitcher Hank McDonald, put the ball out of the park to tie the score. Earl Clark, Washington, D. C., boy, put the game on ice with an eleventh-inning homer. Bison moundsmen held Hornsby hitless.

Benton Goes Route, A.'s Win.

Bradenton, Fla., March 26 (AP). Alton Benton, Connie Mack's recruit from Oklahoma City, pitched nine innings for the Athletics here this afternoon, scattered six Cardinal hits over as many frames and accounted for a 4-to-2 defeat of the Red Birds.

It was the Cardinal's fourth defeat in nine big league games. Burleigh Grimes worked the first three innings for the Cards, fanning five and allowing only two hits. Bill Walker hurled the middle three and was scored for the loss as the Mackmen pounded him for six hits and three runs. Dizzy Dean finished the game, giving only one hit.

Stella Walsh Again Honored by Poland

For Second Time Rated Outstanding Athlete.

Warsaw, Poland, March 26 (AP). For the second successive year Stanislawa Walastewicz (Stella Walsh) has been awarded the grand honorary sport prize as Poland's outstanding athlete of 1933.

Miss Walsh was credited with five new world records during the year and won numerous international competitions.

"She showed a spirit of sacrifice, model sport discipline and furnished a splendid example to beginners," said the announcement of the award.

Another woman athlete, Hedwica Weiss, the discus thrower, was Miss Walsh's closest rival for the honors.

Nats on 2-Day New Orleans Invasion

Bluege Left Behind as Cleveland Is Met Today, Tomorrow.

Crowder, Stewart and Weaver to Oppose Tribe Today.

By Shirley L. Povich,
Sports Editor The Post.

BILOXI, Miss., March 26.—The Nats will shake the red clay of Biloxi from their feet, if possible, tomorrow, and hie themselves to New Orleans and civilization for a two-day stand in the Grape Fruit circuit against Walter Johnson's Cleveland Indians.

It might be mentioned that the Indians have been playing games against their farm hands on the New Orleans Southern Association club with such varying success this season that New Orleans is thinking of sending a few of its rookies to Walter Johnson's club for seasoning, before giving them another trial in the minor leagues.

The Nats now have a record of one consecutive victory in their only test in the spring exhibition league with the Indians as their victim. But the tribe which couldn't beat a couple of Nat rookies the other day, Ray Prim and Ed Linke, will get a look at some bona fide pitching in tomorrow's game.

Nat "Big Shots" to Pitch.

Joe Cronin has divided the Nats' hurling duties among three big shots of the Nats' staff—General Crowder, Walter Stewart and Monte Weaver—who will work in that order in their first competitive tests of the season, allowing for the intramural game staged in the Nats' camp the other day.

The presence of Ossie Bluege has been deemed unnecessary to the Nats' success tomorrow and to the plans of Cronin and Griffith to replace him eventually with Cecil Travis, so Bluege, Mrs. Bluege, and Laddie Bluege, the vicious-looking Bluege wolf hound, will spend the next two days in the calm and serenity of Biloxi, where the slot machines are the only breach of the peace and quietude.

Out at the ball yard today, before the Biloxi fog descended in buckets, Cronin put the boys through some bunting paces just in case the occasion arises after the bell rings on April 16. The atrocious bunting of certain members of the Nats, notably Cronin himself, and big Fred Schulte, jeopardized the club's league lead throughout the month of July last season and this pair took extra long sessions at the plate today, tapping the ball in all directions.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

The Nats will invade the wilds of Mobile, Saturday, for an extra exhibition game with New Orleans . . . Despite the $34 taken in at the gate at Mobile last year on an ideal baseball day . . . Ossie Bluege's new spectacles cost him $30 . . . Cronin is tabbing the young pitcher, Mark Filley, of the Albany Club, for future reference next season . . . Gus Dugas, the Albany outfielder, has won himself a utility job for the Nats . . . because with Cliff Bolton still hibernating in his North Carolina grocery store, the club has no left-handed batter for pinch hitting duties . . . Dave Harris was once the property of the Philadelphia Athletics for two hours . . . and was claimed by five clubs two years ago when Griffith asked waivers on him . . . Schacht and Altrock are making up . . . their expense accounts. . . .

30 Baseballers Out At Wash. College

G. W. Added to Schedule of Chestertown Team.

Chestertown, Md., March 26 (Spl.).—With Ed Evans the only likely hurler in the offing for the Washington College baseball season, Coach J. Tom Kibler has his proteges tossing the horsehide around the diamond in preliminary workouts, though bad weather has considerably slowed up operations.

There are approximately 30 candidates for varsity posts. In addition to Evans, there is Nides, a Centreville boy; White, of Stevensville, who is a brother of Richard White, a one-time local collegiate hurler, and Weinroth, who wears spectacles and tips the scales at nearly 250 pounds.

Baker, of Baltimore, is out for the post behind the bat, as are Bilancioni, of Waterbury, Conn., who acted as catcher last season; Griems, hailing from the City of Brotherly Love, and a former Friends Central player; Wright, a local lad, and Bruehl, graduate of Centreville High.

Aspirants for infield posts include Hodgson, Berry, Rinehart, Dobkins and Boyles, all veterans; O'Farrell, who was on the mound last season, and newcomers like Moffett, McLain, Reddish, Abbott, Stacy and Snyder. Tignor is the only veteran outfielder to report, while other candidates for the pastures are Johns, Goldstein, Weir, Porter, MacMahon and Taylor.

Three games have been added to the card, bringing the total to ten. Six will be played at home. The seasonal opening will thus be advanced two weeks. On April 14 the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy will be engaged here. Nine games carded are with George Washington here, April 20, and another in Washington, May 4.

Post Mortems . . .

Joe Cronin sent Benny Mensh a telegram . . . congratulating him on becoming a papa . . . "Congrats," the wire read, "Raise him to be an outfielder . . . and I'll sign him in 1952" . . . you see, crashing into baseball already . . . things change so rapidly in the Silver Moon Athletic Club . . . a colored sandlot baseball organization in Baltimore . . . that they don't print the names of officials on their letter heads . . . but leave a blank space for the names to be filled in opposite titles . . . from day to day . . . five former members of Marquette U. football teams are under contract . . . to the Chicago Bears . . . National professional grid champions . . . they are Art Krueger . . . Wayland Becker . . . Edward Aspatore . . . Gene Ronzani . . . and Johnny Sisk.

Paul Dean, who recently signed with the Cards, has been dubbed "Harpo" . . . because he never gets a chance to talk . . . while with his brother "Dizzy" . . . merely nodding his okay to whatever La Diz has to say . . . the swimming pool at the Naval Academy is the largest fresh water pool in the country . . . 150 by 60 . . . the Yale pool is longer . . . but not as wide . . . or deep . . . and doesn't hold as much water . . . "Barfoot" Green is angling for a shot at Portner's . . . Rolf (Chub) Poser, Wisconsin All-Big Ten basket ball guard, learned to shoot baskets while a mere infant . . . his brother, also a Badger basket star, now pitching for Minneapolis, had a basket rigged up in the hallway . . . of the Poser home . . . when Chub was so small he could scarcely hold on to the ball . . . not being able to toss the ball into the basket . . . he used to climb up the stairs . . . and drop it in from above.

Jockey Mattioli Boots Field Goal First Over Line in Tropical Park Feature

Winner Pays $10.70 to Backers

Chuck B. Is Beaten by 3 Lengths, With Impeach Third.

Pernickety, at $51.70, Wakes Up to Score in Final Event.

TROPICAL PARK, March 26 (AP).—The final week of the 79-day Florida racing season began here this afternoon. The Columbus Hotel Purse of a mile and a sixteenth headed the card and saw W. I. Newmarch's Field Goal an easy winner at the liberal odds of $10.70 for $2. Jockey J. Mattioli brought the plater home in front by three lengths to record a double. F. C. McAtee's Chuck B. saved second money by two lengths from S. J. Loomis' Impeach. Spartan Lady was fourth in the role of favorite. The time was 1:45 1-5.

Chuck B. rushed into a wide advantage around the first bend and Spartan Lady forced the pace. The latter, which likes to race in front herself, faded badly upon reaching the stretch. Mattioli brought Field Goal around the leaders and his mount had no trouble taking command and drawing into plenty of daylight. Impeach was blocked on the final bend, but recovered to annex the show.

"Rookie" Riders Get Chance.

With practically all of the leading jockeys departed for the North to prepare for the coming season, the less conspicuous riders had a chance to shine. Among prominent saddle stars who have vacated the premises for other parts are Coucci, Litzenberger, Gilbert, Porter, Wright, Meade, Jones, Robertson, Workman, Tipton, Garner and the Renick brothers.

Singing Heart again finished second in the role of favorite when she trailed Dornoch by a length in the curtain raiser. Uppercut was third, another length back. Pete Walls broke Dornoch well and sent him to the fore leaving the far side. Singing Heart made a game try through the last 3 furlongs under a weak ride. The winner returned $11.20.

Luck In Lasts to Win.

The well played Luck In, under a splendid ride by Mattioli, had the foot of the field in the third event. Breaking well and cutting the corners, the daughter of Bunting lasted in a hard drive to beat Playful Martha by a head. Rock Point made up a lot of ground to be third, two lengthy away. Billies Orphan, the favorite, raced forwardly but was not good enough and wound up just out of the picture. Luck In returned $6.90.

Crazy Jane took the fourth purse in a drive to give favorite players their first success. Apprentice J. Doonis kept the $3.70 for Two Shot in front from the start although she was unable to get clear until well into the last furlong. Vishnu forced the pace and faltered just enough at the end to relinquish the place award to Spanish Way. Two Tricks and Levaal were outrun from the start.

Mint De Mie Triumphs.

Mint De Mie, backed down in the late betting to $7 for $2 favoritism, withstood a hard drive to win the sixth contest by a nose from Hasty Belle, with Patrice Runyon a close third. Mint De Mie was fortunate enough to break well in a poor start. She drew into a daylight lead over Hasty Belle but the latter and Patrice Runyon were gaining steadily in the last furlong.

Pernickety, which has been beaten off in all of her races this year, won the last event by a length and a half under Apprentice C. Perna. The filly paid $51.70. Drusus, the heavy favorite, beat Rock Coventry by 5 lengths for the place.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

The Overland Trail, over which thousands of settlers traveled into Western United States, is perhaps the most historic thoroughfare in this country. It stretched 2,000 miles into the West from Missouri, and proved to be the easiest possible and most direct route for cross-country wagon trains.

Yet, strange as it seems, it was laid out, marked and traveled not by engineers or roadbuilders, not even by men, but by wild animals years before the white men ever saw it.

For hundreds of years buffalo and other animals had been traveling across the plains and through the mountains, finding, by the trial and error method, the most favorable grades and easiest passes. It was over this route that the covered wagon trains made their way.

This same general route was used also in places by Indians, then later by explorers, trappers and scouts. Even today the ancient path of the buffalo is used, for the Overland Trail is roughly paralleled by rail and highway systems, even by commercial air lines.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 26.

My one, two picks beat each other for two races today and then "Three-a-Day" Bennings collected his quota. Luck In, Crazy Jane and Field Goal galloped back to the winner's circle and with Field Goal a $10.70 mutuel, the day was not recorded among the worst encountered by this firm. With the majority of the real jockeys headed for Bowie and elsewhere, the boys who do a lot of hanging around and little riding had their innings today. Such as Doonis, Perna and Mattioli were among the day's pilot successes. By my reckoning, Mike, whom I shipped to Maryland, should have 41 good things for the Bowie meeting now. However, time will tell. I have sent him out for big game before and all he brought back was a hangover.

BILL.

First race—Superlette Lou appears due for a graduation in this field of maidens. Comes to the race after a pair of swift moves and draws Petie Walls for the saddle work. Bardstown and Curling to take care of the others.

Second race—Deadeye Dick should make it three straight in this sprint. Takes off a chunk of weight and figures to lead Migrate to the wire. Merry Bud has improved a lot and will be ready if the top pair make mistakes.

Third race—Gallic draws an assignment of 116 pounds here, but appears capable of carrying the impost to victory. Granny's Trade turned in a winning effort for Coucci. Whether or not this one can connect with another rider is a question. Suspicious for the show end.

Fourth race—Traffic Judge has found a spot to his liking here, but too much play in the mutuels might slow down the veteran. He's funny that way. However, the Judge is too keen a horse now to be placed below Style Corner and Black Target, at the weights.

Fifth race—Moralist finally romped home when I passed him up in my selections. That last was a beaut and Stout should bring us the long end of the pay-off tomorrow. Hernando and High Proof for the other awards.

Sixth race—Flying Gypsy gets the Bennings call in this race. Appomattax may surprise with a good effort. Kiltamond to lead the others to the finish line.

Seventh race—Fairly Wild may be getting ready for Bowie, but he gets ina heat that suits him. The apprentice Garrett may make Sky Haven run into the second money. Bichloride, with Hunter up, to show.

Bethesda-C. C. Nine About Ready

Royer, Puttman, Harris to Carry Brunt of Team's Attack.

THE Bethesda-Chevy Chase diamond candidates, going into their fifth week of practice, are rapidly rounding into shape and Coach Kupka has virtually decided on the squad that will be retained to face the stiffest schedule a Leland nine has ever undertaken.

More than half of last year's team has gone via graduation, but Kupka is enthusiastic, to put it mildly, over the chances of the present crop of diamonders eclipsing all previous standards of Bethesda nines.

Dick Nichols and Walter Johnson, jr., of the past season's mound staff, will be missed no end, as also will Bill Jobes, Guckeyson, Brown, Althause and others who were successful in eking out one more win than defeat.

Three to Carry Attack.

This year three boys will carry the brunt of the Bethesda attack—"Connie" Royer, Woody Puttman and Bob Harris. Royer, sorrel-topped mound ace, is being groomed for the No. 1 pitching position. He was regarded as one of the most promising of the county's moundsmen last season and was also successful in cutting quite a swath in the unlimited ranks. He is displaying midseason form already.

Woody Puttman is the likely clean-up man, playing the center field post, while Bob Harris, at third, has but to brush up on his stickwork to develop into an all-around player.

Supporting Royer on the mound will be Bill Moore and L. James, the latter a southpaw. Ollie Zoerner looks to be the first string catcher, with Semmes, also a backstop candidate. The infield posts are nearly all filled. The initial sack goes to Ray Brown, who will be seeking his fourth letter this year and looks like a top notcher so far. Harry Anderson is hot after the second-base post and Eddie Johnson, son of the former Washington star, is a sure thing at shortstop.

Former Mound Ace.

Johnson has formerly confined his diamond talents to the mound but has shown superior work at short and will stick there unless sorely needed in the box. Snooks Bowman and Mulbroner are right and left field, respectively, with Musgrove and Mizell pressing them for their positions.

Manager Ed Amiss has arranged a ten-game schedule that includes tne cream of the local high and prep crop, only two county schools included. The schedule is not released yet but the high lights will be contests, all on foreign fields, with Eastern, Central, Western, Roosevelt, Maryland U. Frosh, Georgetown Prep, Rockville and Takoma-Silver Spring. The card will open in the last week of April with one of the local high schools.

Florida Officials Open Probe Of Alleged Mutuel Scandal

MIAMI, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Behind closed doors the State Racing Commission today heard detailed testimony of alleged irregularities in the pari-mutuel department at Tropical Park here, where the last week of thoroughbred horse racing in Florida this winter is being held.

Nearly two score of witnesses were summoned before the hearing at which commission members said they would "go to the bottom" of an alleged conspiracy they declared was designed to defraud the betting public out of thousands of dollars.

Included among the witnesses were employes in the mutuel department and a number of commission officials.

Walter H. Donovan, secretary of the race governing body, said details of the alleged conspiracy would not be made public pending the outcome of the hearing, at which time a statement would be issued.

James Walsh, a Canadian, recently was removed as superintendent of the mutuels department at the track and Mortimer Mahoney, of Baltimore, named as his successor. Mahoney already has charge of those departments at Hialeah Park here and at such other tracks as Pimlico, Bowie, Hagerstown, Timonium and Marlboro in Maryland; Epsom Downs at Houston and a new plant at Dallas.

Donovan said the permanent barring from all Florida tracks would be the maximum penalty the commission would impose on any person found guilty of participating in the alleged conspiracy.

An outline of the charges recently was presented at a meeting of the board of the Gables Racing Association, operators of Tropical Park, with Donovan, W. L. McGriff, chief auditor for the commission, and H. H. Chilson, the commission's chief auditor at the track. Walsh's removal as superintendent of the mutuels followed.

SPANISH WAY was hard ridden all the way and closed with a rush to take the place in the last stride. VISHNU was kept close to the pace, but tired suddenly in stretch. TWO TRICKS was never a factor. LEVAAL was outrun.

Irvine Brings Springsteel To Bowie

Florida Mile Record Star Heads String of Labrot Stable Hopefuls.

SPRINGSTEEL, holder of the mile record of 1:35 4-5 at Miami, Fla., a mark hung up this winter with 126 pounds aboard, heads the powerful stable which Sylvester W. Labrot, master of Holly Beach Farm, near Annapolis, Md., is sending to Bowie for the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's twelve-day meeting, which ushers in the Eastern racing season Monday.

William Irvine, of Baltimore, who has enjoyed wonderful success with the Labrot string since taking it over several years ago, while high on Springsteel, is also confident that in Monel, Everfair, The Bailiff and Toytime, he has other thoroughbreds capable of earning their way during next month's sport.

Even should Lady Luck frown on Irvine's efforts with Labrot's older horses, the Baltimorean still has 19 2-year-olds with which to strive for purses.

The youngsters slated to carry the red and black silks of their Maryland owner are Bull Market, Happy Tom, Tool Box, Colorist, Tolimata, Outside, Budelia, Blast Furnace, Pepper, Stainforth, Prytania, Brooch, Swept Up, Yehomoala, King's Pleasure, Gay Blade, Little Dinah and a pair of unnamed sons of Happy Time.

Labor Settlement Fails to Cheer Market; Sales, 1,296,330 Shares.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Removal of the automobile strike threat from the industrial picture failed to generate noteworthy bullishness in the stock market today. Prices rallied at and just after the opening when trading was at a brisk pace, but demand soon slackened and the later hours found the list back in a humdrum routine of small buying and selling.

The early rally looked like covering by shorts who had not completed their repurchases last week.

Motors were particularly responsive for a time and later mining issues strengthened; however, advancing tendencies lacked durability and by the close the averages were only one-tenth point net higher.

Sales totaled 1,296,330 shares.

Auto Labor Settlement.

The week-end settlement between the automobile workers and manufacturers, it was assumed, had been, to a certain extent, discounted. Some pointed out that several motor car makers have agreed to lift wages 10 per cent, raising the question of higher costs and ultimate sales prospects.

Steel industry news centered chiefly around word that operations had again tapered off, this time to 45.7 per cent of capacity—the Iron and Steel Institute's estimate—from 46.8 per cent a week ago.

General Motors, Chrysler, Nash and several auto issues rose more than a point during the early flurry. Motors closed unchanged, while Chrysler held an advance of nearly a point. U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, DuPont, Montgomery Ward and North American were fractional losers.

Steady to Firm.

International Nickel, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, McIntyre and Dome finished steady to firm. McLellan stores and the McCrory issues turned soggy. Aircrafts also eased.

Rails followed the general market's course. Their dispute was still unsettled and it looked during market hours as though the issue would go to the Federal Mediation Board.

German bonds continued heavy and offerings of some listings, especially the Young Plan 5½s, were rather substantial. Supporting bids for Reich issues generally appeared to be thin, attributable to uncertainty over interest payments on Germany's external debt.

Smaller Steel Orders.

The lower estimate on steel production no doubt reflects smaller busines from the automobile companies whose production outlook has been uncertain; it will be interesting to see whether buying expands again now that there is to be no strike.

With rail mills working on orders from the carriers and miscellaneous demand assuming at least a fair volume, there is hope that the steel industry's seasonal peak has not been reached, although normally it would not be far off at this period.

Wall street circles felt that prospects of exchange regulation were having a distinct effect on market activity. Public participation is said to be at a minimum and most of the larger professionals are doing little. Occasional spurts by the metal shares presumably reflect speculative expectations that the price of gold may soon be advanced, but all quarters do not take this view.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—After a quiet opening, prices on the Stock Exchange improved under the lead of home rails and industrials. Transatlantic issues held steady on advices from Wall street. West African mining shares were supported. Profit-taking, however, caused prices to ease in other sections, especially German bonds. Argentine rails declined on adverse maize crop reports. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Premier Doumergue's week-end outline of his financial program failed to arouse any favorable reaction on the Bourse, rentes declining. The closing was irregular and inactive.

Berlin—There was a scarcity of orders on the Bourse, and prices were without movement the session. The market closed dull.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Intermediate Credit Proposals Becoming More and More Complicated; Glass' Proposal, While Unsound, Offers Some Protection.

By Ralph West Robey.

Announcement that Senator Carter Glass again is drafting a banking measure at least opens an interesting field of speculation. There already is before Congress a bill proposed by Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and another one that was drafted under supervision of the Federal Reserve Board. Senator Glass proposes to add a third bill. It is designed to replace the other two measures.

All of them are concerned with the problem of creating means for the extension of working capital to industry. Under the Jones proposal the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be authorized to make such loans up to five years. Under the Reserve Board measure, which, incidentally, has the support of the President, 12 new institutions would be established for taking care of such credit demands. In the Glass bill, according to preliminary reports, the Reserve banks themselves will be given power to make loans, with a maturity up to five years, directly to industry.

Gives Us Three Paths That May Be Followed.

There are, then, three possible paths that have been opened for setting up machinery for extension of intermediate credit: First, broaden the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and let it loan directly to industry; secondly, establish new institutions designed for this particular purpose; and, third, widen the powers of the Federal Reserve banks in order that they may make five-year loans.

Superficially it would appear that the second of these—establishment of new institutions—would be the best. Under this plan a separate staff, expert in handling this type of credit, would be created; accounting would be entirely separate, so that our general banking position would not be confused by the injection of relatively long-term credits; special rules could be devised to assure maximum protection without needlessly curtailing potential benefits of the organizations and, finally, we should be able to appraise the institutions as a unit. All of these advantages would be lost to a greater or lesser extent if either the R. F. C. or the Federal Reserve banks were used.

Bill Does Not Limit Lending Sufficiently.

There is, however, another aspect to the case. This is that the bill creating the special institutions—the Reserve board measure—does not limit activities of these organizations to intermediate credit. Rather, they would have the power, as the bill now stands, to undermine and enter into direct competition with, not only our commercial banking system, but Federal Reserve banks as well. There is some protection against the latter through the power given Federal Reserve authorities to control management of the new institutions, but this is not sufficient.

One must conclude, therefore, that what is proposed in the Reserve Board measure is not so much a system of intermediate credit banks as it is a system of indeterminate credit banks. The only limitation is that loans must be for a period not exceeding five years.

We do not need such institutions. There is, as I have said here repeatedly, some justification for establishing intermediate credit banks; there is no justification for establishing new organizations that will be under domination of Washington and that will have power to undermine the existing banking organization. Unless the bill is changed, therefore, it is to be hoped that Senator Glass pushes his measure with vigor. It would be extremely regrettable to have the Reserve banks loaded up with five-year paper, but passage of his measure need not result in this and it would protect us against the Government simply using the banking system to pour out purchasing power.

Bonds Climb Fraction in Larger Sales

Market Is Steady to Firm as Trading Rises to $11,026,000.

New York, March 26 (AP).—The bond market, as a whole, maintained a steady to firm tone today although dealings were quiet and prices relatively narrow.

The trading volume was somewhat larger than that of last Friday, but transfers totaled only $11,026,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced one-tenth of a point to 85.1.

The settlement of the automobile labor controversy was seen as a favorable factor and the concensus was that the railway wage situation would not be permitted to get out of hand.

Steel Production Lower.

At the same time steel production estimates were a trifle lower and there were some indications that industrial recovery might level off over the next few weeks.

Rail issues continued in favor, with both prime investment and secondary bonds getting up fractionally to around a point.

Among the best of these were loans of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Central of Georgia, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Colorado & Southern, Denver & Rio Grande, Great Northern, Louisville & Nashville, New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Utility and Industrial.

Utility and industrial bonds that recorded modest advances included some of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Parity Bakeries, Postal Telegraph, Philadelphia, Reading Coal & Iron, McKesson, General Cable, Dodge Bros., Cincinnati Gas and American Telephone.

Most U. S. Government securities, while not especially active, held gains of one-thirty-second to five-thirty-seconds of a point.

Liquidation of German obligations brought losses in this group of 1 to around 6 points. The selling was attributed to further fears that interest payments on the Reich's external debts will be reduced. The Young Plan 5½s were heavily traded at a loss of 4¼ points and the Dawes Plan 7s lost 3¾. Frankfort 6½s were off 6. Bonds of Dutch East Indies and France sagged. Improvement was shown by loans of Argentina and Great Britain.

Curb Prices Turn Mixed In Late Trading

Utilities and Oils Change Little; Sales Rise to 246,000 Shares.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Final curb prices today were marked by irregularity. Liquor shares turned heavy in late selling but changes in utilities and oils were narrow. A number of specialties closed firmly.

Quotations were higher at the opening in an active flurry but the buying fervor soon cooled and a dull downward drift followed with offerings increasing slightly toward the finish.

Hiram Walker lost 2⅝ points and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams lost 1½. Metals also yielded, Newmont and New Jersey Zinc being down about 1 and 2 points respectively. Among the power group American Gas & Electric showed a small gain but Electric Bond & Share eased slightly.

Swift & Co., Wright Hargreaves, Standard Oil of Indiana and Humble Oil ended virtually unchanged. Advances of a point or so were shown by General Tire & Rubber, J. J. Newberry, Parker Rust Proof, Pan American Airways and Natomas Co.

Transfers approximated 246,000 shares compared with 186,000 for last Friday.

Georgetown's Gas Profit Nets $4,029

The February report of Georgetown Gaslight Co. was filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday and shows a net income, after interest deductions, of $4,029, as compared with $5,675 in February, 1933, a decline of $1,646.

Operating revenues advanced $27,300, this year's figure being $162,729 as against $135,429 in February a year ago. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectable bills, also showed gain. This year's figure, $155,220, was $28,270 greater than operating expenses of $126,950 in February, 1933.

Nonoperating income increased from $1,536 to $1,725, producing a gross corporate income in February of $9,234 as against $10,015 in the same month of 1933. Interest deductions increased from $4,340 in February, 1933, to $5,205 this year, resulting in the foregoing net income.

Washington Business Angles

By J. R. Brackett.

(Editor's note: This is the first of a new column on Washington business, designed primarily for business readers but written non-technically. It covers the less sensational, but important, business news and will appear several times a week.)

(Associated Press.)

NRA and Governmental enforcement agencies are altering and developing compliance agencies in what amounts to a new setup in many ways.

The difficulty of obtaining Blue Eagle compliance seems easily to be the major problem of code authorities on the evidence of the recent code authority meeting, and there is no doubt that drastic steps will be taken to make recalcitrants obey the codes.

Taken singly, recently announced steps are not especially noteworthy but together they show a more striking trend.

Sellers and Eagle.

These steps include the President's announcement that sellers to the Government must be under the Eagle; the calling in of a special group of Department of Justice agents to hurry action on complaints at hand; the decision to use local legal agencies to prosecute groups of similar violators; the designation of somewhat greater power to code authorities to discipline violators, and the as yet unannounced "code eagle" campaign to bring new consciousness of the Eagle's significance to the people.

Further than that, compliance officers are working on plans to eliminate some of the numerous steps now required to bring a violater before NRA. Conceivably this might involve the use of injunctions to stop an alleged violation during a period of inquiry.

So far as prosecution goes, the Federal Trade Commission is quietly at work placing special agents in compliance offices over all the Nation who will attempt to expedite the commission's investigations.

Cease and Desist.

The commission also is expected to begin issuance of its "cease and desist" orders soon against those it believes guilty.

Another activity of the commission of interest both to business men and the public is its increased activity against false advertisers. Changing its policy, it is giving publicity to the concerns which it finds guilty instead of allowing them to cease the condemned practice without special attention being called to it. One result of complaints against false advertisers is often the bankruptcy of the advertiser since many are of the "fly-by-night" type.

Retail Business Increases.

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—The Chicago Association of Commerce, in its weekly survey, said today that retailers throughout the Middle West reported current business materially better than 1932 and 1933 and just a trifle under 1931. Local business was steady to better.

Tobacco Market.

Martinsville, Va., March 26.—During the past 28 years the Martinsville tobacco market has handled more than $7,000,000 pounds of the leaf tobacco. it was shown in reports made public today. Over $13,000,000 has been paid out for leaf during this period, giving the local market an average of $13.31 per hundred pounds. The highest year's record was made in 1919, when the crop averaged over $40 per hundred pounds and crop yielded the smallest return, the average being a little over $6 per hundred weight. The 1933 crop averaged $14.36 a hundred pounds, nearly double the average for the preceding year.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 26 (A.P.).—Cotton goods opened steadier today with trading still light in gray and finished lines. Individual curtailment of production is beginning as orders expire. Rayon fabrics are irregular in the medium qualities while the demand for novelties and fine fancies continued good. Silk goods are selling moderately with printed silks wanted steadily by cutters. The demand for wool goods is light. Spots in light colors for men's wear suits are wanted. Burlaps opened steady after the opening but holidays abroad are expected to cut down trading this week.

Wheat Values Driven Lower Under Selling

Favorable Moisture Report Blamed in Drop; Other Grains Lose.

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—Sellers outnumbered buyers in the grain markets today and prices went lower, largely because of timely snow and rain over domestic wheat territory Southwest.

As much as 21 inches of snow was reported at Amarillo, Tex., the heaviest fall since 1903.

Owing to crop benefits expected from the moisture, grain traders almost ignored the settlement of automotive labor troubles, and likewise made no immediate response to a fresh decrease of the United States wheat visible supply total.

Wheat Closes Weak.

Wheat closed weak at about the day's bottom prices, 1 to 1¾ under Saturday's finish; corn, ⅜ to ⅝ down; oats, ⅜ to ⅝ off.

No pronounced increase of buying of wheat futures resulted from averting of the threatened big strike of auto workers.

On the other hand, reports from the Texas Panhandle in particular emphasized that rains and snow had given crops the greatest relief experienced within a year. For the time being, the fact was overlooked that spring wheat States showed a deficiency of moisture.

Visible Supply Down.

Overshadowed also by news of wet weather was announcement that 2,305,000 bushels fresh decrease of the United States wheat visible supply total today had reduced the supply to 92,643,000 bushels. This is the lowest amount since September, 1928, and shows a shrinkage of 55,000,000 compared with October 1 last.

Some notice was given reports that green bugs were in evidence in Kingfisher County, Oklahoma, the same county where the insects were first reported in the so-called "green bug year," when destruction of wheat crops took place on a large scale.

Corn and oats sympathized with weakness of wheat, although corn is now on the verge of the usual period of light movement.

Reserve Banks Find Dearth Of Good Paper

(Associated Press.)

An unusual contraction of eligible commercial paper is drawing the attention of the Federal Reserve Board.

Members of the board have reported that this shrinkage now is forcing the use of a "considerable volume" of Government securities to back Federal Reserve notes.

This announcement, carried in the Reserve Board's monthly bulletin on conditions, was one of three financial developments noted here over the week-end. Others were:

A reduction of 1 per cent by the Reconstruction Corporation in the interest and dividend rates on self-liquidating loans and preferred stock and capital notes of banks and insurance companies—the new rate being 4 per cent for five years from April 11.

A statement of 16 prominent industrialists, bankers and economists that world governments should rush moves for monetary stabilization to prevent a "new wave of currency instability."

Independence Week Nets $2,000,000 in Policies

More than $2,000,000 worth of new life insurance was sold in Washington during "Financial Independence Week," which closed yesterday. This was announced by headquarters of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, having charge of local observance of the week.

This total marks an advance from $1,300,000 sold by members of the local association during the week of the observance in 1933. The new sales record places the association as an eligible in the National contest for the $50 prize offered by the National Association of Life Underwriters to the member association showing the greatest activity during the week. Thirty-six new members were enrolled by the local association last week.

Cotton Loses Early Rallies In Late Trading

May Closes at 11.99 as Market Is Unchanged to 2 Points Lower.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Early advances in cotton today on the more favorable labor news were lost in the later trading under foreign selling and liquidation. Early buyers resold when demand failed to broaden and the stock market displayed afternoon heaviness. July contracts sold off from 12.25 to 12.10 and closed at the latter figure, with the general market finishing barely steady, net unchanged to 2 points lower.

Opening at advances of 12 to 18 points, the initial levels proved to be the highest for the day. Strength at Liverpool and the settlement of the automotive labor dispute brought in early demand from the trade, spot houses and brokers with foreign connections. While there was also some commission house buying, it was of rather small proportions.

Profit Taking Attracted.

The rallies attracted some profit taking and local selling, while offerings credited to Bombay account also appeared. May liquidation was again in evidence and Liverpool was a seller of March, 1935, contracts during the first hour.

After partial reactions, the volume of business tapered off and the market ruled about steady with fluctuations confined to a narrow range.

During the last hour however, there was renewed liquidation or reselling by early buyers apparently influenced by reactions from early advances in stocks. May sold off from 12.13 to 11.99, and October from 12.37 to 12.23, all positions closing at the low for the day.

According to the New York Cotton Exchange Service world consumption of American cotton during February totaled approximately 1,101,000 bales compared with 1,187,000 in January, and 1,110,000 in February last year.

Exports today, 16,679, making 6,086,215 so far this season. Port receipts 10,372. U. S. port stocks, 3,174,535.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easier under increased liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by the reaction in cotton, and easiness of grains and reports that the President was opposed to the 3-cent import tax on foreign vegetable oils. Final prices were 9 to 13 points net lower. Sales, 16 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; May closed, 5.35; July, 5.60; September, 5.81; October, 5.91.

Operation Eases Off Only 1 Point in Week; Rails Now Chief Field.

Cleveland, March 26.—Unsettled labor conditions still handicap the steel market, though considering all the uncertainties last week, demand showed a surprising degree of strength and steel works operations eased off only 1 point to 49 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

The explanation for this is that while strikes have been threatened in many iron and steel consuming plants, so far comparatively few have actually developed to the point of interrupting the flow of material. Until the issue in the automobile and related industries has been definitely settled, however, steelmakers view it as a continuing menace to recovery.

In Detroit, the hot-bed of discord, steel works operations actually rose 7 points to 100 per cent; New England advanced 8 points to 71 per cent; eastern Pennsylvania, ½ point to 33 per cent. In only two districts were there declines; Pittsburgh, off 2 points to 33 per cent; Wheeling, 4 to 66. Youngstown held at 56; Chicago 49½; Cleveland 82; Birmingham 52, and Buffalo 52.

Rail Orders Increase.

Railroad orders are increasing and structural steel requirements are gaining moderately under seasonal influences. No important cancellations have been issued by automobile manufacturers, and there has been practically no diminution of releases from them. Reduction in production of automobiles as a consequence of disturbed labor relations has been negligible.

In the iron and steel markets last week, the labor factor was felt chiefly as an influence retarding future commitments. Though the majority of consumers are chary in closing contracts for the second quarter, some specific requirements have been covered by users under the impression the steel industry itself faces an hour-and-wage issue, which can not fail to increase costs and prices.

Scrap, reflecting the general market uncertainties, fell off 25 to 50 cents a ton in leading centers, though there was little reduction in consumption. For the first time since Steel's scrap composite began to rise early last November, this index turned down, 8 cents, to $12.33, though still $3 above the starting point.

Plants Look to Rails.

Over the next few weeks, steelmakers are depending on railroad requirements to take up much of the slack that may develop in other lines. Rail tonnage is coming in more rapidly, sustaining mill operations at Pittsburgh, and insuring Chicago mills rolling schedules for several months.

Including rail and track fastening orders last week, and those that probably will be awarded this week, more than 150,000 tons additional is added to mill backlogs. Illinois Central purchased 20,000 tons of rails; Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, 20,000 tons of rails and 27,000 tons of fastenings.

Erie Railroad is ready to distribute 32,000 tons of rails and 12,000 tons of fastenings, and New York Central 400,000 tons of rails and a tonnage of accessories. The time for delivery of rails on sales at $36.37½ per ton made prior to April 15 has been extended one month to August 31.

Week's Structural Awards.

Structural shape awards for the week, 20,984 tons, were practically unchanged from the week preceding. Fabricators are bidding on 12,000 tons of shapes and reinforcing steel for a Government dam at Fort Peck, Mont., and on 5,000 tons for a Boulder Dam powerhouse. PWA loans to a total of $202,189,000 are being sought for projects requiring cast pipe.

Pig iron shipments this month in the Lake district and Middle West are 35 per cent higher than in February, for the comparable number of days; coke shipments are up 50 per cent. Increased rail buying has led to heavier importations of low phosphorus ore, 25,000 tons having entered at Atlantic Coast points this year.

Rail business also figures conspicuously in foreign trade, Steel's London's cablegram stating the European International Rail Manufacturers Association has booked a substantial tonnage for Argentina, while China has ordered 17,000 tons in England. From the latter country 3,000 tons of miscellaneous steel products were shipped to Russia.

Steel's iron and steel price composite holds at $32.40, and the finished steel index at $51.10.

This Is NOT Just an Ad for Maryland Rye

State "Points With Pride" to Steady Drop in Alcohol Deaths.

Baltimore, March 26 (Spl.).—They don't know why, but officials of the Baltimore City Health Department and the Maryland State Health Department agree that deaths from alcoholism in Maryland have been declining steadily since 1927.

From 1919, when prohibition became effective, until 1927, the death rate showed a steady gain throughout Maryland. After that the trend was sharply downward.

Health officials attribute the gains between 1919 and 1927 to "bad liquor." In 1919, the death ratio per 100,000 population was 1.7; the number of deaths was 24.

Five years later, in 1924, the ratio was 5.2 deaths per 100,000 population, and the deaths totaled 80.

The peak was reached in 1927, with a ratio of 11.1 deaths per 100,000 population, and the 176 deaths were blamed directly on alcoholism.

Then began the mysterious drop. In 1928 the ratio had declined to 7.9 and the total deaths to 126. In 1931, the ratio had dropped to 6.3, and the total deaths was 104.

In 1933 beer became legal on April 7, and hard liquor was legal on December 5. For that year there were four deaths per 100,000 population, or a total of 67 deaths.

Figures of the Baltimore City Health Department show a corresponding rise and fall.

Shenandoah Life To Become Mutual

Stockholders Adopt Plan at Roanoke Meeting.

Roanoke, Va., March 26 (AP). Stockholders of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co. here today gave unanimous approval to a plan of mutualization.

The procedure is authorized by a recent Virginia statute, based on the New York law, which permits some of the largest stock companies to mutualize.

Five trustees were elected to hold the stock as it is purchased. They are E. Lee Trinkle, former Governor of Virginia and president of Shenandoah Life; Charles E. Ward, vice president in charge of agents; J. Sinclair Brown, representing the State corporation commission; Malcolm L. Perkins, administrative assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, Washington, D. C., and G. R. Lee Lynn, president of S. H. Heironimus Co., Roanoke.

Former Virginia Minister Is Dead

He was graduated from Hampden-Sidney College at Hampden-Sidney, Va., and Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. He served three years as director of young people's work at the First Presbyterian Church, Huntington, W. Va. He came here in 1932.

He is survived by his widow and an infant son, and in Richmond by his mother, Mrs. Owsley Sanders, and three sisters and two brothers.

New Market Road Bid Is $22,320

Citizens Anxious for State to Start Widening.

New Market, Va., March 26 (Spl.). A low bid of $22,320.32, for construction of the widened Valley Pike through New Market was submitted by Clark & Lewis, of Luray. A previous bid of $23,841.95, submitted by R. W. Moore & Co., of Staunton, was rejected.

Whether the Clark & Lewis bid will be accepted and when the contract would be let, was not revealed. New Market residents are hopeful that operations will begin immediately so the work will be completed before the tourist season opens.

The town council granted an unrestricted 40-foot right of way to the State for the highway on June 6, 1933, and many citizens expressed resentment at the delays in starting work.

Stream Gives Virginian Back Long-Lost Dollar, Plus Interest

Big Laurel, Va., March 26 (Spl.). A mountain stream near here proved to be a good banking proposition for Jony Stapleton, Virginia concrete worker.

Not only did it return him an 1898 dollar which he lost 22 years ago, but it paid 6 per cent interest on the investment.

Stapleton lost the silver dollar nearly a quarter of a century ago while fixing a water-gate across Rocky Fork stream. A cherished luck-piece which he had carried for years, he searched for it without success.

A few days ago while working on a concrete job near this same spot, Stapleton hauled a load of sand from the bank of the Rocky Fork Creek. Clearing it by hand of roots and weeds, he found his old luck-piece with the 1898 date mark intact, and also a half dollar, two quarters, three dimes and two pennies.

He is still trying to figure where the "interest" came from since he had no other coins in his pocket the day he lost the dollar.

State Defends Value Placed On Phone Lines

Maryland Public Service Commission Fights Injunction.

Baltimore, March 26 (Spl.).—Details of how the Maryland Public Service Commission reached a valuation of $32,000,000 for the property of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in Maryland were outlined on the witness stand in Federal Court today by Charles H. Smith, chief auditor of the Public Service Commission.

Mr. Smith's testimony dealt with replacement figures and initial costs of equipment used by the telephone company. He was the first witness called in behalf of the Public Service Commission, which is seeking to support its $1,200,000 gross annual cut, ordered several months ago.

The company, in resisting the reduction, insisted that its proper valuation is $48,000,000. Any slash in rates would be "unjust, unreasonable and confiscatory," attorneys for the corporation contend.

Three Federal judges are hearing the case, which is on an injunction sought by the telephone company to restrain the enforcement of the rate reduction.

H. C. Greiz, general auditor of the telephone company, today was asked to explain labor cost figures during recent years. He testified the rate of pay for telephone company employes was raised until it is about 1½ cents per hour lower than the general scale in the city.

Since 1931, he declared, the company has maintained the wage level at approximately the rate established in that year.

Judge Morris A. Soper, presiding with two other jurists, asked that testimony be concluded no later than next Saturday. The Public Service Commission maintains the company should be allowed a 6 per cent return on a basis of the $32,000,000 valuation established by the commission's engineers. The telephone company insists it should have a return of 7 per cent on a valuation of $48,000,000.

Clark Fraud Trial Opens In Maryland

Fourth Time Montgomery Official Has Faced Jurors.

(By A Staff Correspondent.)

Ellicott City, Md., March 26. Berry E. Clark, former clerk to the Montgomery County Commissioners, was arraigned here today for his fourth trial on the first of 97 indictments alleging embezzlement of county funds.

The specific indictment on which he is being tried alleges conversion of $426 in county funds to his personal use November 15, 1931. The 97 indictments allege embezzlement of nearly $50,000.

A jury was selected in 23 minutes, the defense exercising 15 challenges and the State six.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County, in his opening statement declared the State intended to prove that Clark received county funds and transferred them to his personal account. He said the State would exhibit evidence of numerous such embezzlements.

Defense Attorney F. Barnard Welch told the jury that no law was in force in Montgomery County requiring the clerk to turn over his money at any stated period to the treasurer, and that Clark had deposited the money in his special account rather than "keep it in a cigar box." He said Clark was arrested in the middle of a term and was not given opportunity to straighten ont his accounts and make a final report, and that instead of being short the county was ahead in its accounts at the time of Clark's arrest.

Lacy Shaw, park commissioner for Montgomery County, and president of the board of county commissioners at the time of the arrest, was the first witness to testify for the State. He said neither he nor the board had authorized Clark to expend county money for his own use.

Roger J. Whiteford, attorney for the commission, testified that he went to Clark's office with Lewis F. Bond, of the R. G. Rankin Co., who made the audit which revealed the alleged shortages, to ask Clark if he had a special account.

Clark admitted the account, he said, listed as "Berry E. Clark, Clerk," in the Montgomery County National Bank at Rockville, and that Clark called the bank and authorized audit of this account and later authorized audit of his personal account when it became apparent that items had been transferred.

Soft-Coal Men Divide on Plea For 30 Hours

Operator Group's Demand Complete Surprise to Code Authority.

(Associated Press.)

The Recovery Administration's hearings on revision of the soft coal code opened yesterday with an unexpected demand from a group of operators that the 40-hour week set by the code be reduced to 30 hours without reduction in weekly wages.

William Taylor, representing the northern panhandle of West Virginia subdivisional code authority, told the NRA that operators of that region felt that only through such a reduction could coal production be brought down to the level of demand.

Code authorities from other sections quickly opposed Taylor's proposal.

As the hearing, called to study the effects of six months' operations of the code on the coal industry and to formulate whatever changes might be deemed advisable, opened, operators of the Appalachian region continued their negotiations with the United States Mine Workers of America over new wage contracts.

Taylor's proposal approximated the demands of John L. Lewis, president of United Mine Workers, at last fall's hearings on the code. He said reduction of hours under the code had not resulted in a proportionate reduction in output.

"The old cut-throat competition of one operator against another is now competition of one subdivision against another," Taylor said.

He advocated adjustment of working hours from time to time, upon recommendation of the Bureau of Mines, to keep coal production even with demand.

Ashurst Acts To Aid Copper

Two Bills Introduced Provide Market, Protection.

Senator Henry Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, yesterday introduced two bills designed to bring about rehabilitation of the copper industry.

One of his proposals would authorize the R. F. C. to purchase in the open market surplus copper metal heretofore processed in this country from ore mined in the United States and to "hold such copper metal for the use of the United States in contracting military and naval equipment and public buildings as the Congress shall from time to time by law direct."

His will would appropriate $200,000,000 from the Treasury to the R. F. C. for this purpose.

Senator Ashurst's second bill, notwithstanding any existing legislation, would levy a tariff of 10 cents a pound on all copper-bearing ores or concentrates imported from any foreign country.

The bill provided a tariff of 6 cents a pound for certain articles containing copper, and of 6 per cent ad valorem or 1½ cents a pound, whichever is the lower, on other articles containing 4 per cent or more of copper.

Recluse Longs to Return To Wild Canyon Home

Salt Lake City, Utah (U.P.).—Civilization may be life for some people, but Julian Kucke, 75-year-old recluse, longs to return to his wild canyon home.

Kucke was rescued from his tumble-down shack by skiers who passed. Fire partly had destroyed the shelter. In his attempt to beat out the flames the aged recluse was badly burned. For several days he lay on his cot suffering unattended from the burns and had not the rescuers come, he undoubtedly would have died of hunger and cold within a few hours.

Senate Is Given Bill to Create U. S. Air Board

Third Plan for Handling Mail Is Sponsored by McCarran.

Completing action on the temporary air-mail bill which appropriates funds to the Army for carrying the mail, Congress yesterday was confronted with a third plan for permanently mandling the transportation of air mail when Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, introduced a bill creating a Federal Aviation Commission.

The McCarran bill would place all airlines under a commission possessing powers similar to those exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission over the railroads. The airlines would be required to carry the mails at rates on a mile-pound-age basis fixed by the commission. There would be no competitive bidding for contracts.

Meanwile, with the temporary air-mail legislation out of the way, the House and Senate Postoffice and Post Roads committees prepared to act on permanent legislation. The Senate committee will meet today to consider which of three bills should be given a favorable report.

McKellar-Black Bill Favored.

One of these is the McCarran bill. Another is the O'Mahoney-McGill-Logan-Erickson bill, which would place the transportation of air mail under jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to be paid for at rates for actual service. The third is the revised McKellar-Black bill, which would reenact a modified system of awarding mail contracts on the basis of competitive bidding.

It is expected the McKellar-Black measure will be reported out. But the committee is expected to divide sharply over whether an aviation subsidy linked to air mail transportation should be continued or whether the airlines should be paid only for actual service.

The McCarran bill is similar to the O'Mahoney measure, except that by placing jurisdiction in an agency independent of the ICC, it meets an objection found generally in aviation circles.

Would Rule All Lines.

In addition to dealing with air mail, the McCarran bill would place under jurisdiction of the proposed Federal Aviation Commission all air lines transporting passengers or property on scheduled operations for hire, including the fixing of rates for such services.

The commission would consist of five members, to be named by the President, for six-year terms. The commission would arbitrate disputes between air lines and employes.

All rates for carrying passengers, mails and express would be based on the valuation of the property of the airlines.

The emergency air-mail bill, on which Congress completed action yesterday when the House adopted the conference report and which is now ready for President Roosevelt's signature, authorized the Army to carry air mail for one year.

Fund Transfer Authorized.

The measure authorized a transfer of funds from the Postoffice Department to the War Department for this service.

The Senate Commerce Committee today will open hearings on the Sheppard bill for the promotion of civil aviation. This measure would authorize the Secretary of Commerce to pay 25 per cent of the tuition of students in civilian flying schools, limited to 5,000 students annually at a cost not to exceed $1,500,000.

The bill also authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to contract with designers of aircraft and engineers to produce experimental machines at cost to the Government. The limit on the fund would be $1,000,000.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Sickly Smile.

James Jimpson's smile was rather sickly, suggesting naught of fun; it came and passed away as quickly as snow wreaths in the sun. It was a spectral smile and ghastly, a smile deformed by care, expressing, wearily but vastly, the courage of despair. His bank account had gone to glory, his bonds were in default, and as he told the mournful story his smile seemed lame and halt. And yet it was a smile, my masters, though wan and pale and bleak; it seemed to say, "Mid fell disasters of fortitude I speak." I've met a host of dauntless mortals who from the ruins stept, so pallid were their smiles and chortles that I sat down and wept. And yet they bravely smiled and jested, to their tradition true, when all the kopecks they'd invested had journeyed up the flue. The coin that once they had in keeping was gone, and still they grinned, and that was better far than weeping and wailing in the wind. The grins were sad and sorely wanted the pep of bubbling joy, but still they spoke of hearts undaunted, of nerve without alloy. Misfortunes came along so thickly in recent bitter years, that smiles were brave, though they were sickly, and gleamed through scalding tears. Misfortunes on men's heads were piling, each with its smart and sting, and still the brave men kept on smiling, though smiles were hard to spring.

Canadian Lure Topic Tonight Of Travel Talk

Dominion's Beauties to Be Depicted in Color by George B. Mitchell.

The nineteenth in a series of 20 illustrated travel talks under auspices of The Washington Post will be given tonight at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue, at Thirteenth street northwest, when George B. Mitchell, artist and lecturer, will describe the scenic beauties of Canada with accompanying motion pictures and stereopticon views in color.

Although he has spent many years in world travel, during which he has sketched and photographed the most interesting features of many countries, Mr. Mitchell has devoted his greatest energies to Canadian experiences. He has dug gold in the Klondike, studied the Blackfeet Indians of the prairie lands and has been associated with trips of exploration in the wildest regions of Ontario and Quebec Provinces.

During each of his expeditions he has employed brush and pen to depict natural beauties, and the motion picture and still camera to record scenes far from the beaten track of tourists. On the other hand, he has followed the trails of the great Canadian national parks and in tonight's lecture will show the interesting features which attract visitors from all over the world.

During the course of The Post lecture series, capacity audiences have become acquainted with a majority of the most important countries of the world. However, several of the most interesting lands have, for a variety of reasons, been untouched up to the present. Popular demand has induced The Post to feature the Dominion of Canada before the close of the series. This will be followed by a lecture on Japan, after which it is proposed to extend the series to include Russia, which has most recently come into the strongest limelight of international affairs.

Tonight's lecture will begin promptly at 8:15 and tickets will be available at the nominal charge, of 25 cents, at the Masonic Auditorium box office beginning at 7 p. m.

Two Lose Appeal To Escape Death

Face Execution for Feed Store Slaying.

The conviction of George McKinley Pitmond and Joe Goodman on charges of murdering William Simms, watchman at the Dickey Brothers Feed Store, was sustained by the District Court of Appeals yesterday.

Counsel for the two appealed on the ground that a confession made by Pitmond was admitted illegally into the evidence. The claim was advanced that the confession was extorted. This, the Court of Appeals held, was not sustained. Irving Goldstein, assistant United States Attorney, and J. J. Sirica, a former assistant, prosecuted the case.

Sims was found beaten to death in an old building at the feed store. Both men were arrested shortly afterward. Both are under sentence of death.

Driver Reported Fired On by Policemen, After "Crashing" Lines.

Hospitals and physicians' offices were searched last night for clews to a District motorist, reported to have been fired upon by a policeman early yesterday after speeding through fire lines in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest.

Police officials, meanwhile, were investigating the report of Policeman C. R. Burnett, of the First Precinct, that he fired at a motorist who failed to stop for his signal.

Witnesses said firemen narrowly escaped being hit by the speeding car. Burnett leaped to escape injury, and shouted at the driver to stop. He is reported then to have drawn his gun and fired.

The policeman said he was not certain whether the motorist was struck.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Turkey Picnic

BLACKIE hadn't had a turkey dinner since Christmas, and he was getting a bit turkey hungry. He knew that Mr. Man had plenty of turkeys, but he also knew that he had a wagon that he had made a bear haul wood in that day, and so he wasn't going to take any chances on him.

But one day he heard Jay Bird say that Mr. Man was going to town the next day to see the circus, and was going to take his wife with him, so Blackie thought that would be a good time and place to get his turkey.

Blackie slipped around and came up behind Mr. Man's garden, and before he got out of the bushes he heard "gobble, gobble, gobble." And now just look! Blackie just laughed, and licked out his red tongue, for there sitting on the garden fence was the biggest turkey gobbler he had ever seen.

A turkey has a great long, red nose that hangs down over his bill, and it makes him look like he didn't have any bill at all that he could peck with. Blackie never had caught a turkey gobbler, and he didn't know that a turkey gobbler can peck worse than a goose, so he galloped straight up to Mr. Turkey Gobbler and thought he didn't have a thing to do but to grab him in his mouth and take him home.

Bears Make Mistakes.

Bears, as well as children, make lots of mistakes because they don't know things, and Blackie was awfully mistaken about Mr. Turkey's bill. When he got up pretty close to the turkey, Mr. Turkey flapped his wings and flew down on Blackie's neck and straddled him like he had been a horse, and began pecking him right between the ears.

Blackie "woofed" and began to shake his head, and he reared up on his hind feet and thought he would throw Mr. Turkey Gobbler off, but he couldn't do it.

A turkey has sharp toenails like a rooster, and the more Blackie tried to shake him off, the harder he stuck his toes in Blackie's neck to hold on. All the time the turkey was pecking Blackie as hard as he could right between the eyes, and when Blackie found he couldn't shake the turkey off, he jumped back over the fence and lit out for home.

Mr. Turkey Gobbler had never had a ride like this before, and he was having a good time, and he didn't think how far he was from home till he was away out in the woods 'most to Jocko Monkey's house.

Blackie was making so much noise running and "woofing" that he woke up Jocko Monkey, and Jocko ran to his door to see what was the matter. Here came Blackie Bear, lickety split, up the creek, and he was coming right toward Jocko Monkey's house, and the turkey was still riding.

Jocko ran out on a limb that grew from his tree, and caught his legs over it and swung down like a boy does on his "acting bar," and just as Blackie came under him he grabbed Mr. Turkey Gobbler by both wings and jerked him from Blackie's neck.

Then he told Blackie to stop running and come back and bite Mr. Turkey's head off. Blackie stopped and ran back and bit the turkey's head off, and then Jocko Monkey dropped down fom his limb and went to work to get the feathers off.

Just then Jay Bird came along, and Jocko Monkey told him to fly to Billie Possum's house, and tell him to come down and help them to eat a turkey dinner.

Blackie was so tired from his run that he couldn't do much about fixing dinner; but since he had brought the turkey, Jocko Monkey told him he might lie down and rest while he and the others cooked dinner. So Blackie lay down and took a nap, and when dinner was ready, Jocko Monkey called him, and they all had a regular picnic eating Mr. Man's biggest turkey.
